"RED CAPS" IN SOVIET DEPOTS TURN DOWN TIPS

Bill Presented for Their Services.

The Tribune sent Mr. Wales into Russia to observe conditions and give American readers a picture of what the soviet government is doing. The soviet government gave its pledge that no censorship would be exercised over him. This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Wales on his impressions of the country.

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, Russia, Feb. 11.—Visitors get a good impression of the new Russia at the frontier at Nicoroloje, where tips are refused by baggage porters, trainmen, and sleeping car conductors. At 9 p. m. one changes from the through Paris train which has traversed Poland to take the Manchurian Express to Moscow. The change is necessary because Russian railways are broad-gauged and the standard gauge rolling stock of the rest of Europe is useless here. That's to prevent invasion.

The soviet customs inspectors get busy at once at Nicoroloje, but when the traveler explains he is "Amerikanisch" they let it go by merely ripping open the canvas lining of suitcases to see if there is any hidden agricultural machinery on which duty should be paid.

My flowered silk pajamas—a Christmas gift—aroused intense suspicion for a while, until the "controleur" of the Polish wagon-lit happened by and swore in voluble Russian that I had slept in them the previous night, coming out from Berlin.

Porter Refuses Tips.

"Niet, niet," said the tall, lean porter who carried my bags when I offered him a tip.

"No tips, no tips. They get paid a regular rate and aren't allowed to accept anything more," the wagon-lit man explained.

I received a duly made out bill for 1 ruble 20 kopeks, about 35 cents, for carrying the four bags, and the porter remarked in German that it was mild weather, which I understood, and said, "Good-night and bon voyage, Tavarish."

In the station buffet I had a glass of wonderful Russian tea, without milk, but with a slice of lemon, making it even more aromatic, and two caviar sandwiches for the equivalent of 25 cents.

Portraits of Lenin, with evergreen branches twisted around the frames, and plenty of red, blue, yellow, and green flags around the hall made it cheerful and warm.

Every one was warmly dressed, their coats ragged and patched generally. They wore stout leather boots and had caps pulled down over their ears.

Prewar Rolling Stock.

The sleeping car was an old prewar French wagon-lit type which the Russians are now operating, refitted and repaired, with two berths to a compartment, more roomy than those in western Europe because they are wider and higher [there are apparently no tunnels on Russian railways, judging from the height of the cars.] The locomotives are prewar affairs.

Two attendants handled the car, smoking cigarets fraternally with the passengers as they made up the beds and fetched glasses of tea from their cubbyhole at the end where they made it. Outside a soviet soldier paraded up and down the platform with a fixed bayonet. He wore a long great-coat and little pointed cap.

It was 10 a. m. when I awakened. A bright winter sun burst into the compartment; one might have been at Nice or St. Moritz in the crisp dazzling sunshine, beaming over the snowclad trees and lighting up the branches of snow-decked fir trees like tiny electric lights on Christmas trees.

Villages Are Plentiful.

There were plenty of villages along the line, not so many as in France nor perhaps in Germany but certainly more than in Poland or than one encounters in Spain or the Balkans. Everywhere were men driving along in tiny sleighs, with the shafts attached to the runners amidships and the wooden arch over the horses' heads, just like in the picture books.

The waiter smoked a cigaret as he served me a hot glass of tea, in the dining car which had been hooked on in the night at Minsk.

Every village had its green roofed church with the gilded dome above it. The houses are built of wood, as in America, instead of stone as in France and brick as in Germany. Little log

THE MASTER OF THE WORLD

SYNOPSIS.

Paul Rayburn, scientist with the Grannett company, makes a discovery he is convinced will startle the world. Eleanor Grannett, daughter of the company owner, visits Rayburn's laboratory and immediately suspects that he is keeping something from the firm because he answers evasively when she questions him about a mysterious machine.

Grannett discharges Rayburn, as he is convinced the experiments are the work of an unbalanced mind. Rayburn keeps on and perfects a device for recording the cosmic rays which penetrate the earth's atmosphere. He receives signals that he converts into sounds and discovers that the Martians, aware of our infancy in scientific knowledge, are giving instructions on how to create a sending device sufficiently powerful to reach Mars. He keeps his discovery a secret.

Rayburn's joy is interrupted, however, by the arrival at his door of a lawyer and the man who had made the machine for him. They have come to collect money Rayburn had promised, or, failing to do so, take back the instrument.

Theodora Downs, Eleanor's cousin, whom Rayburn had met when he dined with the Grannetts, anonymously sends the young man a sum of money to aid him in his work. He receives it just as he is about to sign an agreement with Foxstone, an unscrupulous lawyer, giving the latter a share in the proceeds of his discoveries. The money enables him to pay for the machine and he continues his work, unaware that Foxstone has assigned a spy to learn his secret.

Rayburn builds a sending device, following instructions received in the message from Mars, and with alternate hopes and fears sends a message—and waits.

Minute after minute passed, and suddenly Rayburn heard an answer from Mars. As he talks with that continent he hears a noise at the door, and, opening it suddenly, discovers Black, his suspicious neighbor, leaning over with a bunch of keys in his hand. In a rage he orders the man away.

Returning to his machine, Rayburn talks to Mars and is told that the world is a million years behind the times scientifically and that he will be instructed how to perform unheard of marvels. He tells of his lack of money and gets a formula by which he hopes to raise working capital.

CHAPTER XV.

Miss Eleanor Grannett went through the various contortions which indicated that she was awaking to face the activities of another day.

She pressed a button by her bed and a trim maid appeared who raised the shades to admit a flood of mid-forenoon sunlight, and brought her breakfast.

"Eleanor," she soliloquized, "you're speeding it up too much. You'll soon be as homely as Cousin Theodora!"

She studied her features with critical concern, noting the dark shadows under her eyes and the lines about her lips which drooped with jaded discontent.

"What a futile life! Doing the same thing over and over, seeing the same men, listening to the same line of chatter, world without end. Pleasant enough at the moment, but gets you nowhere!"

In the midst of these depressing reflections, Theodora Downs came in, buoyantly healthy and shockingly plain.

"Well, bright eyes, what's on your mind this morning?"

"I had breakfast with your father. I thought you might be intrigued to hear that the young inventor, Rayburn, whom he so lately sacked, paid him a visit yesterday."

"What!"

"Yes, and he asked your father if he wished to finance a new invention." Eleanor's eyes twinkled maliciously.

"Have they collected the remains?"

"Well, I judge the interview was very brief, and the young man departed followed by some of your dear papa's choicest comments."

"He's either very fresh or very brave or far crazier than we thought. How did he act?"

"Well, your father seemed rather mystified. It suddenly occurred to him, after Mr. Rayburn had departed, hastily but with dignity, that the man had seemed very much amused by something. It appears he left the august presence with a distinct twinkle in his eye. I tell you, Ellie——"

"Go ahead, shoot."

"I believe that man has a lot more sense than you give him credit for. But, then, I've always thought so."

"Cherish your illusions, my dear Theo, if it makes you happy."

Theodora smiled. "And furthermore, I'm going to cultivate him. I think he's nice."

Eleanor wrinkled her brows. "Aha, I foresee a news item: 'Impecunious young inventor pauses in conference with moon to wed blushing society beauty' How about freesia for the bridal bouquet?"

"Yes, and the bigger the bouquet the better. If it completely screened the blushing beauty the effect would be more artistic! And don't forget, my dear, when we are happily married and living in a sumptuous two room flat, that you and your fourth husband—the count or prince of what have you—must come over and play with the children."

"Cut it out, Theo. I'm not up to that kind of chatter this morning. I had another hard night madly doing nothing, and I'm sick of everything, mostly myself."

"Sorry, dear, but you started the chatter."

"Well, run along now, and pursue your hero."

So Miss Downs did run along, with rather a purposeful look in her eyes, and stiffened as usual by her cousin's taunt, wrote a friendly note to Mr. Paul Rayburn, who received it in due time, and read it with hungry gratification. It was the only kind word he had heard for many weeks outside of his own home.

He put the note in his pocket and was just on the point of resuming work when he suddenly straightened up, withdrew the note hastily and studied it with new interest. In another moment he was pawing through the litter of old letters in his desk.

Here it was—a long linen envelope containing another but unsigned note to the effect that the sender enclosed ten one hundred dollar bills merely to gratify a whim.

The two handwritings were startlingly similar.

With some difficulty he recalled her, severely plain but a friendly soul. He remembered liking her, but in the face of more absorbing matters he had thought no more about her.

A few moments later he was at his precious instrument and in communication with the mysterious personage on Mars.

"Were you joking when you said you could turn a homely woman into a beautiful one?"

"Not at all. It is one of our most elementary experiments. The full possibilities of a person are developed and perfected. Beauty follows as a matter of course."

Rayburn was dubious.

"There is no one standard of beauty," he flashed, "tastes differ with different races. How do you get around that?"

"She can be made the perfection of her own type," laconically signaled Mars, slightly bored by the trivial tone the interchange had taken.

Rayburn asked and received the formula with which he could amuse himself while other and more important experiments were developing.

Doctor Traps Robbers Who Line Up Guests

Watching his chance, Dr. Henry J. Millstone, president of the staff of the Burnside hospital, slipped out of his home at 742 East Marquette road, leaped from a second story window and notified the police in time to bring about the capture of two robbers just as they were preparing to depart after robbing seven guests of jewels and money valued at more than $10,000 early this morning.

A squad from the Woodlawn police station, led by Lieut. Michael Lahart, burst through the door of Dr. Millstone's apartment, which the robbers had failed to lock, and overpowered James McKay, 6523 Normal boulevard, as he held his victims at bay.

Pockets Bulging with Gems.

McKay's pockets were bulging with the jewelry, money, and purses he collected from the half dozen couples. In a bedroom they caught his partner, John Daley, 6613 Hartwell avenue, gun in hand, as he was ransacking the dresser.

The robbers knocked at the door of the apartment shortly after midnight and flashed their revolvers as soon as the door was opened. Daley lined the guests up in the living room while McKay searched them.

Four Struck with Guns.

Three of the men and one of the women were struck hard blows in the face and on the head from the butt of McKay's revolver when they did not give up their jewelry quickly enough. They are Ruth Potts, a nurse employed by Dr. Millstone; Gordon Mitchell, the colored butler; Carl Rigoletto, Sherman hotel, and Mortimer Goldstone, 515 Roscoe street.

Other guests were Mrs. Lettie Rigoletto, wife of Carl; Henry Rigoletto and his wife Hettie, and Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Langhagen, owners of a chain of beauty parlors, with headquarters at the Stevens hotel.

Pajamas Made of Flour Sacks Sent to President

Members of the women's society of the Millard Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday sent President Coolidge a suit of pajamas made out of five flour bags—a gift in appreciation of the President's economy program. So skillfully were the bags cut that no patching was necessary. The jacket was decorated with lavender frogs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, U. S. S. R., Feb. 11.—The population of Moscow was 2,142,000, on Jan. 1, a gain of 112,400 in a year. There were 53,000 births and 28,000 deaths in Moscow in 1927.

He Leaves Her at the Church, Involuntarily

When Edward Kostur, 20, a mechanic for the North Side Hudson Motor company at 5259 Broadway, elected to become a married man, and pretty Helen Lawanski, 20, of 2502 78th court, Elmwood Park, had whispered acceptance, Edward decided that to do it right he must have an automobile.

To arrive at the church in a cab would be common and ordinary, thought Edward. And, besides, had he not promised his bride-to-be a motor honeymoon to New York immediately after the knot was tied?

Church in Readiness.

Holy Trinity church on Noble street, just off Milwaukee avenue, last evening as dusk was falling, was prepared for the wedding. The hour was 4:45 p. m. Little girls, all in white and looking like little angels, stood ready with baskets of flowers to strew in the center aisle as the bridal couple passed.

The ceremony was to be performed at 5 o'clock. A crowd of considerable proportions had gathered at the church door.

At exactly 4:50 p. m., a shiny new automobile drew up to the curb. And Edward, attired in evening garb, lilies of the valley in his buttonhole, stepped from the car.

Two Uninvited Guests.

Edward flecked a bit of dust from his sleeves. Two sober faced men stepped up to him. One touched him on the shoulder.

"Are you Kostur?" he asked.

"You bet," Edward smiled.

"Well, you're under arrest," said the sober faced man, and placed a heavy hand on his shoulder.

The two men were Policemen Albert Lauderdale and Philip Dienthal. A thousand voices protested, but Edward was loaded into a patrol wagon and taken away.

GOVERNOR RACE PUTS ON SPEED IN BOTH PARTIES

Cermak Plunges In as Candidate.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Both rings of the Illinois gubernatorial circus—Democratic as well as Republican—drew the attention of the voters yesterday with unadvertised thrills. The developments were these:

A. J. Cermak announced himself as a Democratic candidate for governor in defiance of the wishes of his organization.

An Emmerson-Carlstrom elimination conference ended temporarily with each urging the other to step aside and run for United States senator.

A Record in Hectic Politics.

Old timers said that never in their experience had pre-campaign activities reached the degree of hectic excitement that marks them this year because of the short time left for slate making and deals following the Supreme court decision upholding the Schroeder primary law.

All the meetings and conferences and telephone calls and telegrams ordinarily scattered out through several weeks seemed to have been jammed into a single day. Business started early, was still proceeding at midnight and probably will continue throughout today.

Cermak Jolts Democrats.

The biggest shock to political circles was the announcement by President Cermak of the county board that he would disregard the wishes of the Democratic state committee and a large part of the county committee—conveyed to him a few minutes earlier by George E. Brennan—and leap in as a candidate for the Democratic nomination for governor.

That ring of the circus had been quiet and was thought held in readiness for the appearance in Chicago today of Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Illinois Supreme court, on whom the state committee last Thursday had settled as the man to beat Gov. Len Small, it being their opinion that the governor, with Thompson backing, would win the Republican nomination against a divided opposition.

Into this situation dashed Cermak, direct from Florida, consulted with candidates on the county ticket who said they wanted him to run, and then dictated his formal announcement.

"The Republican party of Illinois has long been dominated by the anti-saloon league of Illinois," it said. "I am entering the campaign because I believe that Al Smith should receive the assistance of every person who is against infringement upon personal liberty either by legislation or by anti-saloon organizations."

Cermak's statement also went into his experience on the county board as fitting him for the governorship and announced that he would issue his platform later.

Brennan Takes It in Silence.

Within a few minutes of its appearance the statement was read to National Committeeman Brennan. He declined to comment. He is expected to confer with State Chairman Thomas F. Donovan and other leaders today.

The Republican ring, suffering from a congestion of candidates, put on two shows during the day. One of them was characterized as an Alphonse and Gaston act by Secretary of State Emmerson and Attorney General Carlstrom, who spent an hour in conference together and separated apparently in exactly the same frames of mind in which they met.

Immediately thereafter Secretary Emmerson issued his second statement in two days that he is in the governorship fight to stay. It was an answer to what he described as an anonymous newspaper advertisement appealing to him to step aside in favor of Carlstrom and run for the United States senate against Frank L. Smith.

Small Meets County G. O. P.

The other Republican show centered on the meeting between Gov. Small and the executive committee of the Thompson-Crowe-Galpin county organization. There had been announcement that fireworks would accompany this act, but after Ringmaster Thompson made a little public talk predicting there wouldn't be any trouble there wasn't even the sound of a loud voice.

The significant thing in connection with that quiet was the absence of two leaders who are irreconcilables on the subject of Small, Edward J. Brundage, north side leader, and Circuit Judge

Young Couple, Recently Wed, Perish in Fire

Joseph Dorf, 28 years old, and his wife Sarah, also 28, of 4747 Grace street, just recently wed, were burned to death shortly before daylight this morning in a fire which destroyed a bungalow at 6078 Newberg avenue, Norwood Park, where they were visiting. Police believe the fire was caused by a cigaret Dorf had been smoking.

The Dorfs, with his brother and sister, Morris and Bessie, and Miss Rose Pockler and her brother, Benjamin, were guests of Raymond Burke and his wife, Mary, at the Newberg avenue address for the evening. Some time after midnight it was decided it was too late to return to Chicago, so all agreed to remain at the Burkes' overnight. Not long afterward neighbors were aroused by flames in the Burke home. The Dorfs were found to have perished. All the other guests, as well as the Burkes, escaped without injury, but in their night clothing. The bungalow was destroyed.

Offers Million to Cure Cancer as Wife Dies

Mrs. Fannie Richter Fuchs, once a pianist of international fame, died yesterday at Pasadena, Cal., of cancer, after a long illness.

At the bedside was Albert Fuchs, her husband, who retired from Chicago business recently with a fortune estimated at $2,000,000. Mr. Fuchs, who had seen the failure of two operations and the efforts of specialists go for naught in her behalf, announced immediately that he would use half his wealth as an endowment for research to end the menace of cancer to the human race.

Won Fame When Child.

Mrs. Fuchs was born in Berlin fifty-eight years ago. She first achieved fame at 5 years, when she gave a piano recital in the Curhouse at Wiesbaden, playing a number of difficult works by the masters. Later she toured Germany, Italy, France, and Belgium and received decorations from the Queen of Italy and the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar.

Coming to America under the direction of Walter Damrosch, she was soloist at the concert in Buffalo, N. Y., when President McKinley was shot.

Following her marriage to Mr. Fuchs in 1900, she continued her musical career until two years ago. She was in Los Angeles, as soloist for the Philharmonic orchestra there, when she was compelled to give up playing in public.

Hold Funeral Wednesday.

She is survived, besides her husband, by her mother, Mrs. Matilda Richter. Funeral services are to be held Wednesday at the family home in Santa Monica, Cal.

Mr. Fuchs left Chicago about two years ago to remain with his wife on the coast. Last September he completed a deal for one piece of his north side property, leasing a half block at Sheridan road and Grace street for a term of 198 years at an annual rental of more than $50,000.

He came to Chicago in the '80s and was first a florist, later going into real estate on an extensive scale. During the war his son, Carl, changed his name to Carleton Fox, which brought on a family feud. His daughter-in-law, wife of Fox, sued him for alienating the latter's affections and obtained a verdict of $50,000 in 1924.

REVEALS TALKS ABOUT OIL DEAL WITH STEWART

Sinclair Bonds Are Traced to G. O. P.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Disclosure that Harry F. Sinclair, New York oil magnate, contributed at least $24,000 of his profits in the famous $50,000,000 Continental Trading Company, Ltd., deal to wipe out the Republican national committee's 1920 presidential campaign deficit was made to the senate's Teapot Dome investigation committee today.

Agents of the committee reported that $24,000 of the $75,000 in Liberty bonds given to Will Hays, then chairman of the national committee, by Sinclair in 1923 have been traced among the $3,080,000 of Liberty bonds purchased by the Continental company.

Another portion of the Continental company's bonds—$233,000—was passed by Sinclair to Albert B. Fall, former secretary of the interior, soon after the latter turned the navy's Teapot Dome oil reserve over to a Sinclair subsidiary.

Committee to Call Hays.

Receipt of the agents' report, which confirms rumors current in Washington ever since the Sinclair-Doheny-Fall oil scandals broke four years ago, and the announcement that Hays is to be summoned to testify followed the appearance of John D. Rockefeller Jr. as a witness before the committee.

As Mr. Rockefeller took the witness chair to reiterate his "extreme displeasure" and disappointment over the failure of Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, to tell what he knows of the division of the Continental company's profits, District Attorney Peyton Gordon was appearing before the grand jury to ask indictment of Stewart for contempt of the senate.

Senator Gerald Nye [Rep., N. D.], chairman of the committee, and Senator Thomas J. Walsh [Dem., Mont.], who is acting as its prosecutor, will probably be called before the grand jury, which, Mr. Gordon said, probably will make known its findings by the middle of next week.

Liquidated G. O. P. Notes.

Sinclair's donation to the Republican national committee was used to liquidate outstanding notes held by the Empire Trust Company of New York. The committee's obligation to the bank originally totaled $266,000.

Mr. Hays, when he testified in the original senate investigation of the Teapot scandal, admitted that Sinclair had contributed $75,000 in bonds to clear the deficit, but at that time the existence of the Continental company was not known. The bonds, it was discovered after the investigation was reopened a few weeks ago, were sold for the Empire Trust company by Potter & Co., New York bond brokers, on Nov. 30, 1923.

By checking their serial numbers, as was done in the case of bonds passed by Sinclair to Fall, the investigators definitely established that $24,000 of the $75,000 had originally been owned by the Continental company.

Search for More Bonds.

Further investigation is expected to reveal that more of the $75,000 contribution came from the same source, according to the investigators, whose report indicates that the committee's list of Continental bonds is not complete and that a further search is under way.

Crowds thronged the committee room from early this morning in anticipation of Mr. Rockefeller's appearance to tell what he knew of the Continental deal in which 33,333,333 barrels of crude oil were bought and sold on the same day at a net profit of 25 cents a barrel.

The Continental company's ability to pay for the crude oil it bought at $1.50 a barrel and resold to the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing company and the Prairie Oil and Gas company for $1.75 a barrel was guaranteed by Col. Stewart and Sinclair. Stewart declined to tell the senate committee who divided the profits and he refused to say if he had ever discussed the division with Sinclair.

Advised Stewart to Return.

Correspondence between Mr. Rockefeller and Senator Walsh made public a few days ago disclosed that it was Mr. Rockefeller who persuaded Col. Stewart to forego a proposed Mexican business trip and return to Washington to testify before the committee. It also disclosed that when the Colonel refused to answer the committee's questions he ignored the advice of Mr. Rockefeller not to "withhold the slightest detail."

At the outset of his testimony Mr.

Will Hays Ready to Testify; Denies He Knows of Deal

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Will Hays, former head of the Republican national committee, today denied knowledge of any contributions made to the G. O. P. campaign chest with money obtained from the Continental Trading company oil deal.

Hays sent a telegram to United States Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, in which he offered to go before the senate's Teapot Dome investigating committee and testify.

"At the time I was chairman of the Republican national committee in 1921, and for the three years following," Hays wired, "during which the deficit was being raised, I never had any knowledge of the existence of the Continental Trading company.

"Nor had I any knowledge of bonds issued by the Continental Trading company. I have no knowledge now of this company nor any of its activities.

"Any contributions to the Republican national committee of which I have knowledge were from individuals and were not in any way related to oil leases or to the Continental Trading company."

Rockefeller explained to "clear up a popular misunderstanding on the point" that his personal stock holdings and those of the Rockefeller Foundation, the University of Chicago, and trust funds for his two sisters in the Standard Oil company of Indiana, represent a little less than 15 per cent of the capital stock of that company.

"My own stock holdings in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana," said Mr. Rockefeller, "are 402,280 shares. The Rockefeller Foundation owns 407,760 shares. The University of Chicago owns 30,000 shares. In addition there are a little over 500,000 shares held in trust by the Equitable Trust Company of New York in trusts set up by my father for my two sisters.

"My own holdings in the amount stated are a little more than 4½ per cent. The Rockefeller Foundation's holdings in the amount stated are a trifle more than 5 per cent of the capital stock. I am the chairman of the board of trustees of the Rockefeller Foundation and the chairman of the finance committee. All of these stock holdings, as you will see, are just under 15 per cent of the capital stock.

"I want, senator," said Mr. Rockefeller, "to make that situation very clear, because I have judged from the published reports that there was a popular misunderstanding on that point.

Wants to Clear Up Scandal.

"But I was going to make equally clear the fact that if my holdings in this company had chanced to be only one hundred shares, my sense of responsibility and of obligation to do everything in my power in uncovering this unfortunate situation, this nationel scandal which this committee is seeking to uncover, would have been exactly the same. It is not a question of my stock holdings. I, with great appreciation of the work that this committee is doing in the public interest, am more eager, more anxious than you gentlemen can possibly be that the whole situation be uncvoered in all of its details.

"I have in view the important public interests which are at stake here," he continued. "My sense of obligation in this respect is not a matter of my stock holdings. My father was one of the pioneers in the development of the industry.

Reasons for His Interest.

"The family name has for over fifty years been connected with the oil industry. I have those additional reasons for being more eager than you gentlemen can be to do everything in my power to bring to light all the facts in this unfortunate matter.

"This situation, senator, and gentlemen of the committe, is far reaching. It affects certain individuals, but far beyond that it affects the whole oil industry. The oil industry is under suspicion because of the facts that have been brought to light and more particularly because of the facts that have not yet been brought to light. The business structure of the country is under suspicion for these reasons. The cynic is saying, 'Is there any such thing as basic integrity in business?'

Would Lift Suspicion.

"All of these are reasons which make me keenly anxious to do everything in my power to bring to light the facts in this matter, for, as I have stated to you gentlemen in correspondence, it seems to me that only as all of the facts are brought to light can the suspicion which has grown up be dispelled and can one cloud which has gathered over the oil industry and business generally be dispelled."

Mr. Rockefeller reiterated his complete confidence in Col. Stewart's integrity, but in the same breath repeated his "bitter disappointment" at the colonel's refusal to tell the committee what he knew of the distribution of the Continental company's profits.

Confidence in Stewart.

"I have every confidence in the integrity of Col. Stewart," he said. "I want to make that in fairness to him perfectly clear. At the same time, I am bitterly disappointed, more so than you gentlemen can be, that he did not answer all the questions asked of him. I totally disagree with him as to the wisdom of the position which he has taken. I have known Col. Stewart for fifteen or twenty years as a stockholder of his company. His reputation among those who know him has entitled him to confidence."

When the Teapot Dome scandal was first aired, Mr. Rockefeller recalled, he called upon Dr. W. M. Burton, then president of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, to cable Col. Stewart to return at once from a foreign trip and by his appearance remove the public misconstruction of his absence from the country at the time.

"The two interviews which I have had with Col. Stewart since the sending of this telegram," continued Mr. Rockefeller, "in which interviews the matters under discussion were referred to—the others being purely social—were held, one shortly after the sending of this telegram, the other last Monday.

Stewart Is Resentful.

"In the first interview Col. Stewart showed considerable resentment at the implication in my telegram that he was regarded as purposely absent from the country when he was wanted as a witness. That was not an implication which I meant.

"He stated to me that so far as he himself was concerned, and so far as his company was concerned, nothing had been done in this transaction that was improper. He stated to me further that the transaction, so far as his company was concerned, had been a thoroughly good transaction, the best that he could make."

Members of the committee, particularly Senators Walsh and Cutting [Rep., N. M.], who had numerous clashes with the colonel when they were questioning, smiled broadly when Mr. Rockefeller admitted "it was impossible to discuss the matter with the colonel, as you gentlemen perhaps can understand."

Stewart Answered Truthfully.

"I believe then," he continued, "and I believe now that Col. Stewart has told the truth. Those statements were reiterated by him in the interview which I had with him last Monday, at which time I told him of my great disappointment at his not having answered fully all of the questions put to him, and that I differed with him absolutely as to the propriety of the position which he had taken.

"Here again he was unwilling to discuss further the situation.

"I have stood for the past two and a half years," said Mr. Rockefeller, "as I stand today, with belief in the integrity of Col. Stewart, although, as I have stated with equal clearness, being in utter disagreement with him in the position which he has taken in declining to answer all of the questions asked of him and disagreeing with his judgment in that matter."

Offers to Coöperate.

"My position, gentlemen," he continued, "is one of earnest desire to coöperate in every way in the exposing of a wrong which apparently has been done. I want to be fair to Col. Stewart and to every one concerned. I am watching this situation with the greatest interest. I am prepared to answer at any time, as I have in the past, according to my best judgment as the facts in the matter may develop.

"My experience as an investor in many companies has been that the stockholder, so long as he believes in the management, must stand by it. If there comes a time when he feels satisfied that the evidence which has been brought to him is such as to justify his withdrawal of his confidence, unless he sells his stock, he must vote his stock and use all the rights he has as a stockholder to replace the management.

"I know of no other alternative. I am prepared in this instance and in other instances where my stockholdings relate me to other companies to act on the evidence as it is presented.

Business Is Criticized.

"I want to add this further word, if I may, that I think business in general is under serious criticism, whether justly or unjustly, at this time. I know from personal experience that there are a great many able and honorable and upright men in the oil business, as in other industries.

"So far as I have relations with these men as a stockholder in their companies, so long as I have reason to believe in their integrity and honesty of purpose, I feel it to be my duty to stand by them. The moment in any case I feel that the evidence is such that I no longer can repose confidence in their integrity, I shall feel it my duty to withdraw that support.

Believes in Business.

"I believe in the business of the country," said Mr. Rockefeller, "I believe that business can be run on a sound, high, fair basis. As a stockholder in any company I want no profit derived from compromise with right. I want no officer in any company in which I own stock, whether he be high or low or an employé, to do anything that I would not myself be willing to do.

"I have given the greater part of my life to philanthropic endeavors. I am not an active business man. I have never been actively engaged in the management of any business. I am a stockholder in many corporations. I am desirous always of using my influence in the support of able and trustworthy management, and I am prepared at any time to withdraw support from management that no longer justifies the confidence that have been put in it.

"May I just say in closing that perhaps after all the greatest contribution that my father may have made during his life is not his philanthropies, but in the investing of large sums of money in businesses well organized that render useful service to the public at fair profit, with adequate wages to its employés, with proper living and working conditions, and with the insistance upon those relations between employer and employé which recognize one as a fellow man quite as much as the other."

Walsh Questions Rockefeller.

Senator Walsh asked Mr. Rockefeller what he knew of the Continental transaction at the time of his first interview with Col. Stewart.

"I know nothing of it except what I had seen at the time as it was brought out through the newspapers in connection with the Teapot Dome trial—it was new to me entirely," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

Then Mr. Rockefeller admitted that even now his knowledge of the deal is limited and that he has "not undertaken to go into the details," Senator Walsh sketched the history of the whole affair as far as it has been pieced together in the committee's probe.

The senator told of the luncheon conference in New York at which the deal was decided on by which the oil was to be purchased from the Humphries-Mexia company and recited details of the transaction as nearly as the committee has been able to assemble them.

Then turning to Mr. Rockefeller the senator asked:

"Were you aware, Mr. Rockefeller, when you had the conversation with Col. Stewart, of the substance of these facts, as I have related them and developed them before the committee?"

"Not in detail, senator," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

Stewart Not Questioned.

"You did not question Col. Stewart then about the details of the transaction?" asked Senator Walsh.

"But merely contented himself with saying that $1.75 was the best buy he could make?" asked the senator.

"Other than to make the statement that I have made, that as far as he and his company were concerned, nothing improper had been done, and so far as the transaction was concerned, it was the best transaction for his company that he could make," Mr. Rockefeller responded. "He was unwilling to discuss it further on either occasion."

Cites Difference in Price.

"But," persisted Senator Walsh, "Mr. Rockefeller, if the facts were stated to him, it would seem to be a reasonable inquiry as to whether if these people were able to buy at $1.50, Col. Stewart would not be able to buy at $1.50.

"As I have stated," Mr. Rockefeller answered, "I had not gone into the detail of the facts, and if I had been in possession of the confession which you have given me, I think it would have been quite impossible to have gotten Col. Stewart to discuss the matter in either interview."

"It would be a very reasonable thing, would it not," asked the senator, "for a stockholder of a company, owning at least a substantial share of the stock, to interrogate an officer of the company who carried out as big a transaction as this concerning the details of it?"

Should Declare Details.

"An officer of the company, representing him as kind of a trustee, would ordinarily be expected to disclose the full nature of the business transaction which he attempted to carry out for the company?" asked Senator Walsh.

"I hardly think that, senator, because we have investments in a great many companies," answered Mr. Rockefeller. "We are not managing stockholders. We are simply investing stockholders. The number runs into hundreds. It would be utterly impossible for us to follow the transactions in any company."

"I appreciate that thoroughly, Mr. Rockefeller," answered the senator, "but having followed them, and having conferred with an officer about a transaction which had some extraordinary if not suspicious features about it, I inquire whether under those circumstances a stockholder might not very properly expect the officer of the company to tell freely and frankly the whole story of the transaction?"

"Very rightly," Mr. Rockefeller asserted.

Not Able to Get Facts.

"All I desire to ascertain, Mr. Rockefeller, is whether you feel that you have exhausted every means of securing information from Col. Stewart?" continued the senator.

"I will be very grateful to you if you could suggest any means," answered Mr. Rockefeller. "I have not been able to think of any way of getting at those facts."

"But," said the senator, "would not a simple recital of the story as it has been disclosed here before the committee, to Col. Stewart, force some kind of a statement from him?"

"I was not in possession of the facts in detail when I talked with him," Mr. Rockefeller answered, "but, although I tried in both interviews to get him to discuss the situation he stood on this statement I have made here and I felt with the experience of the years that I had had with him, with the reputation that he had, the confidence that he had always been entitled to by his stockholders and his business associates, and with the results that he had obtained as chief executive officer of his company, that I could not go farther than I did. In any event, it was not possible to elicit any further discussion from him."

Capable Business Man.

"We have been told here," said Senator Walsh, "that Col. Stewart has a reputation, I dare say deserved, of being an exceedingly shrewd, capable business man. Is that in conformity with your idea about it?"

"Wholly, sir," responded Mr. Rockefeller.

"Under those circumstances, Mr. Rockefeller," asked the senator, "can you make any surmise as to why Col. Stewart was not able to make as good a deal as the Continental Trading company with the Humphreys companies for this oil?"

"But, I say," insisted the senator, "can you now make any surmise satisfactory to yourself as to how he could have been so far out-traded by O'Neil and by Blackmer [H. M. Blackmer, former chairman of the Midwest Refining company], if Blackmer participated in it, or by whoever else was concerned in the transaction, as to be compelled to pay, for his company, $1.75 a barrel for oil that Humphreys was apparently perfectly willing to sell for $1.50?"

"It certainly is not characteristic of the Colonel to pay more than he has to in any trade, senator," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

Believes His Statement.

"Well, do the facts as detailed suggest to you any explanation of how it was impossible for him to get it just as cheaply as anybody else?" asked the senator.

"I simply had his statement and I believe it," was Mr. Rockefeller's response.

"Mr. Rockefeller, do you know anything about the disposition of these bonds?" asked Senator Walsh.

"Nothing whatever, except as I have read in the papers," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

"Is there any line of inquiry that you can think of that this committee might pursue to get fuller information about it?" asked the senator.

"Since the receipt of your letter, senator, several weeks ago," answered Mr. Rockefeller, "I have again been giving the whole subject careful consideration, and I have not been able to think of any further way in which I could be of service. I am most agreeable to, if anything comes to me, or if you can suggest it."

No Tip to Trail Bonds.

"Can you think of any means by which we could trace any of these bonds through the banks or brokers?" asked Senator Walsh.

"The matter of the handling of securities in the funds and in my own office is in the hands of other people," answered Mr. Rockefeller. "I have no personal acquaintance with the ways of handling securities and their registration, etc., so that I am ignorant on that subject."

"Have you made any effort to ascertain whether by chance, through the ordinary course of business, some of these bonds might not have gotten in the possession of some of the companies with which you are associated?" asked the senator.

"No, it had not occurred to me," said Mr. Rockefeller. "I do not see how the bonds could."

Will Stimulate Inquiry.

In accordance with Senator Walsh's suggestion, Mr. Rockefeller agreed to "stimulate" an inquiry in all of the companies in which he has an interest "that would be likely to have among their securities and their investments" to see if by chance any of them had acquired any of the Continental bonds.

Senator Ashurst [Dem., Ariz.] asked Mr. Rockefeller if he knows "what reason, if any, prompted Col. Stewart to refuse to answer those questions."

"I haven't any idea," responded Mr. Rockefeller.

"Did you make any attempt to find out?" asked Senator Ashurst.

"No, sir," answered Mr. Rockefeller, continuing to explain "simply because I was unsuccessful in any effort to get Col. Stewart to discuss this situation beyond the making of the statement which I have indicated."

Senator Walsh recalled the newspapers reporting the arrest of Col. Stewart by the senate sergeant-at-arms following his refusal to answer the committee's questions, told of many telegrams received by the colonel "from prominent business men and others in the public mind congratulating him upon his stand."

"He did not by chance have such a telegram from you?" asked the senator.

"He did not, sir," responded Mr. Rockefeller with some feeling. "You have had copies of all correspondence that I have had with Col. Stewart. You could hardly assume, senator, that I was coöperating with you, as my letters indicated, and as my coming here today has indicated and at the same time playing you false."

Father Owns No Stock.

A question from Senator Nye indicated that he had misunderstood the extent of the Rockefeller family holdings in the Standard Oil Company of Indiana and Mr. Rockefeller quickly explained that his father does not own a single share of the Indiana company stock and never, even before the dissolution of the so-called Standard Oil trust, held more than 25 per cent of its stock.

Senator Nye pointed out to Mr. Rockefeller that throughout his testimony Col. Stewart asserted that he believed Blackmer was actually an agent for A. E. Humphreys in the negotiations which resulted in the Continental deal, although at the same time he was chairman of a Standard subsidiary.

"Does it strike you as rather strange, Mr. Rockefeller," asked Senator Nye, "that a man in Col. Stewart's capacity would play along, so to speak, and tolerate a subordinate who was playing with those who were indirectly attempting to get the better of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana?"

Asks About Blackmer.

"No officer of any company would have any right to make a profit out of a company which he was paid to protect the interests of," asserted Mr. Rockefeller.

"Certainly not," said Senator Nye. "Then, in view of the fact that Mr. Stewart felt that Mr. Blackmer was not playing fairly with the interests of the Standard Oil company, really he ought to have taken steps to have rid the companies of Mr. Blackmer's services, ought he not? Would not that have been the ordinary procedure?"

"If Mr. Stewart felt that Mr. Blackmer was not acting absolutely within the interests of the company, he should have," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

"Mr. Stewart told the committee repeatedly that he constantly felt that Mr. Blackmer was playing Mr. Humphreys' game rather than in the interests of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana," said Senator Nye.

Serving Two Masters.

"I want to say, Mr. Chairman," said Mr. Rockefeller, "that I completely agree with your position. A man cannot serve two masters at the same time. If Mr. Blackmer was working in the interest of some one else and taking pay from or acting as an officer of the Midwest company, he was not a fit servant of that company.

"I regret to believe that there are times in business in these days where men have felt themselves justified in making profits when they were in a company. Personally, I never would stand for it. I do not believe in it."

"You mean an individual official making profits?" asked Senator Nye.

"Yes," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

"While he was accepting pay and expecting to be serving a company?" continued Senator Nye.

"A profit," answered Mr. Rockefeller, "not at the expense necessarily of his company, but because of the position of his relation to the company. I think that that is a very dangerous line to approach and I have no sympathy at all with any who believe in that kind of thing."

Will Receive Transcript.

"The committee, Mr. Rockefeller," said Senator Nye, "has been extremely happy in the measure of coöperation that has come from you in this entire controversy, and we are satisfied from that correspondence that you and Senator Walsh have had that we are going to have additional coöperation from you when there is laid before you, as I am sure you will want laid before you now, the full transcript of the testimony which has been given here, particularly that by Col. Stewart."

"I wanted to ask another question suggested by the line of inquiry by the chairman," Senator Walsh interrupted as Mr. Rockefeller rose to go.

Standard Acquired Stock.

"It appears, Mr. Rockefeller," continued Senator Walsh, "that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana had acquired all of the stock or practically all of the stock—there might have been a few shares outstanding—of the Midwest Refining company. At the time these transactions took place, in November, 1921, Mr. Blackmer had been continued as chief executive officer of the Midwest Refining company. Col. Stewart told us that the entire force, through Mr. Blackmer, had agreed to resign, and Mr. Blackmer particularly had offered to resign at any time that Col. Stewart desired he should, and that he did not desire that they should resign, and they were continued as officers and directors of the corporations, and that was the position that Mr. Blackmer occupied when the occurrence that I have attempted to relate to you took place.

"I would like to enquire of you whether under those circumstances you would feel that Mr. Blackmer could legally or morally act as the agent for Mr. Humphreys in the sale of this oil, and get a commission cut of it?"

"Not under the circumstances, as you relate them, senator," answered Mr. Rockefeller.

As he left the witness chair, Mr. Rockefeller assured Senator Walsh that the committee has "only to communicate with me at any time if there is anything I can do."

AFGHANS' QUEEN TELLS OF WORK TO FREE WOMEN

Gives First Interview to The Tribune.

The lovely white-skinned queen of the orient stretched a white gloved hand, smiled with ever so lightly rouged lips, and spoke in Persian to her interpreter, who happened to be her own brother.

"Tell this American I am the first woman in all the long centuries of Afghan history who has worked for the emancipation of the women of my country and for women's education," she said. "And I collaborate though from afar, in the great work of women's progress in the world. I have been told that American women greatly distinguish themselves in this field and I have for them a feeling of sincere friendship and great admiration."

King Hides Cut; Razor Slipped.

While the queen was giving her first interview to an American or any other correspondent, Amir Amanullah Khan stood, half hidden, in the hotel hall, where the entire party was waiting for cars to drive them to the station to take a train for Switzerland. I could not make out whether he was hiding because of the male's instinctive vanity not to appear ridiculous in certain circumstances, because the poor king had to call off his trip to Liege on account of "illness," according to the local papers and other correspondents. After visiting the king and queen of the Belgians, the Afghan king is going to Switzerland in search of a cure for some throat trouble and a carbuncle, the local papers said. The real reason, as apparent this afternoon from his bandaged face, was that he had suffered a serious cut while shaving.

The queen accepted the novel sensation of being interviewed with great presence of mind. She said she greatly regretted the United States was not represented in Afghanistan, "which has for the Americans such admiration and liking.

"This fact," she said with a wry smile, "will prevent the king and myself from visiting America. As long as the United States does not make official connections with us, we do not see how we can go there on an official visit, although we want to greatly."

Moslems Fought Girls' School.

The queen explained how she founded the first girls' school of Afghanistan in the capital, Kabul, against fierce resistance from the old fashioned Mohammedan elements of the population.

"But my husband quickly repressed the revolt that broke out," she said with pride, "and a memorial stone in Kabul now commemorates the battle for women's freedom. Eight hundred girls attend the school today. They are reared like European girls. My mother directs the school and I help whenever I can.

"I must wear a veil in Afghanistan, but not as thick as any other woman's. As yet no Afghan has ever seen my face. I know the British India officials were greatly surprised when I first unveiled. The veil is the only concession I make to Mohammedan customs. My dresses all are made in Paris, although I often send beautiful Afghan materials to Paris for the dressmakers to work on."

She revealed that she spent 400,000 francs (about $16,000) alone for dresses on this European trip, which is costing altogether £180,000 (about $900,000), maybe more.

Queen Thouraya today wore a marvelous black broadtail mantle, which is the fifth magnificent fur coat Brussels has seen on the queen. She uses a little powder and no rouge on her cheeks, but a tiny bit of lipstick, although her sister, Princess Tarzi, makes up rather much, using oriental kol on the rims of her eyes and a good deal of rouge and lipstick.

Queen Thouraya, who is primarily an oriental woman, considers her chief merit has been her ability to hold the king's love through ten years of happy matrimony. Fiercely autocratic and stern though he is, he is also one of the few Afghans who is not polygamous, and Queen Thouraya considers the credit is all hers. Amir Amanullah's father, the queen's sister divulged, had fifty-four wives and seventy children. Queen Thouraya's one sorrow, however, is the fact that the king's oldest son is the child of his first wife. However, one of her boys may be the next king after all, because the oldest is not necessarily the heir to the throne of Afghanistan, where the people choose a new ruler after the king's death from among all his sons.

PARIS, Feb. 11.—The American embassy today transmitted to the mayor of the little Norman commune of Saint Lou d'Ourville, Col. Charles A. The town believes the colonel passed over it on his historic flight to Paris and asked him to become the godfather of the beach. Also Takes War Chief, Senoritas for Ride.

HAVANA, Feb. 11. — (AP) — Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, having demonstrated to a series of distinguished passengers the wonders of the air, returned to earth today to speak again on the thing nearest to his heart—aviation.

Nowhere, he told 600 business men and diplomats who gathered at a luncheon given at the Casino club here tonight in his honor by the American Chamber of Commerce, is there greater need of air lines than in the West Indies, where travel ordinarily is so difficult.

Visions Regular Air Lines.

Urging the luncheon guests to spend more time on the study of aviation as a commercial aid, Col. Lindbergh said: "Air lines and aviation will play an important part in the development of the United States, but an even greater part in the countries to the south, where more difficult transportation problems are encountered."

Opening of regular air lines over parts of the route he has covered since leaving Washington for Mexico City would play an important part, he said, in the development of western commerce.

Gives Señoritas a Ride.

From the luncheon the aviator went to the United States embassy, where he met veterans of the world and Spanish wars.

Although Col. Lindbergh has disappointed the Cuban señoritas by his lack of interest in dancing, he showed his gallantry in the air today by taking up several of them on a flight in a large passenger airplane. He also took up Mayor Gomez and civic officials and their wives.

President Machado plans to go aloft with the colonel at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning in a Pan-American Airways ship.

VILLAGE MAID TALKS HOODLUM LINGO TO COPS

Steals Autos; but Drink? Smoke? Not She.

CAMPUS, a village in Livingston county, Ill., a short distance southeast of Dwight. Population, according to the federal census of 1920, was 228.

Campus, Ill., has lost one resident. And what Campus has lost Chicago has gained.

For the little tomboy of that village tossed back her thick dark hair while in the detective bureau last night, crossed her near silk knees and told Lieut John Joe Farrell the story of her life. John Joe was goggle-eyed when she had finished.

Claiming acquaintance with Scarface Al Capone, Martin Durkin et al., Irene Zeller talked of her six auto robberies and three "prowls" or burglaries, as easily as of her sixteen summers.

Resents Small Time Cops.

What irked her above all else was the fact that she was taken by what she called the "town clowns," meaning the police of Manteno, Ill., where she was seized with three men companions. From Manteno the quartet was brought to Chicago last night.

Held as her accomplices are Barney Reganier, 6456 South Halsted streeet; Arthur Eierman, 6037 South Ashland avenue, and John Reilly, 5737 Emerald avenue. Reilly's home, the police said, was the cache for the loot.

Three weeks ago Irene came to Chicago with Reilly's sister, and they lived at the Emerald avenue address until Miss Reilly returned to Campus, but Irene only motored there occasionally in a swell "hot" car. On her second trip she was caught.

Great Help at Home.

"Why say," she confided to Lieut. Farrell, "my old man's doing a stretch in the Vandalia jail, because I squawked on him. Y'see he was a bootlegger. But I got tired of him beating up my mother, so I turned him in for running a blind pig. I went into the business too, before I left Campus, but the town clowns there never got me.

"I used to go to St. Patrick's High school in Kankakee, off and on, when my step-father would let me. That's where I got this basketball sweater I'm wearing. That's my number—2. I've always played with boys. Liked 'em lots better than girls. I'd have been on the football team, only they ruled me out because I was a girl.

Defends Campus as Wise Town.

"How? Well, you see they used to stop in Campus. It's on the way to St. Louis, and they used to come in our place.

"About these hot cars. Well, we got six of 'em in the last three weeks and jammed two of them. I drove a Cadillac down to Campus—can I drive? Well, can a fish swim? You bet I was stepping on that baby, doing nearly sixty, when I stripped the gears.

"We went into Manteno to eat and one of those town clowns came in and asked us a lot of questions. I had a pair of overalls and a cap under my coat, just in case anything happened to the car and I had to flip a freight back to town, and this guy pinched us. Gee! I'm certainly going to be ashamed to go back to Campus and let 'em know I got socked into jail there.

"Yeh, we knocked off three joints. One in Campus and two in Chicago. I've been out on a lot of prowls with these birds—but get me right, I'm a good girl and I can't stand liquor, though I did get drunk once, and I don't smoke."

The small town girl expects probation and a job as a waitress, because the job is what she told her friends in Campus she came to Chicago to get.

WIFE CHARGED WITH TRYING TO KILL MATE IS HELD TO GRAND JURY

Mrs. Florence Jay, 7441 South Wabash avenue, was held to the grand jury yesterday under $25,000 bonds on a charge of assault with intent to kill her husband, William. The wife is alleged to have shot Jay in the head as the result of a quarrel over her friendship for James McTirney, 5812 Princeton avenue. McTirney's wife obtained a divorce, naming Mrs. Jay as co-respondent.

Mrs. Jay shot her husband, she testified, as he turned to get her purse in the rear of the automobile in which they were riding.

"She lured me into the back seat of the car to kill me as I leaned over for her purse," Jay told Judge John H. Lyle. "I felt the muzzle of the gun against the back of my head and ducked down, but the bullet struck me anyway."

WOLF AT DOOR OF WEST PARK POLICE; IS SLAIN

The wolf was at the door of the Union park station of the West Park police yesterday, but not until after his howls had been silenced. When John Maschek was on his way to work he saw the wolf chasing two persons across a strip of lagoon ice in Douglas park. John rushed to a phone and called the police, then returned to his home at 18th and California and loaded up his shot gun. Back at the park he joined the hunt with Policeman Paul Bartel and Patrick Riley. After both policemen had used up all their ammunition John filled the wolf's head with slugs. Its body was taken to the station and displayed on the doorstep.

U. S. SEEKS NO NEW EVIDENCE TO CLOSE CAFES

Will Ask 13 Padlocks on Present Status.

Without attempting to obtain further evidence, the federal government, within thirty days, will take steps to close permanently the thirteen of Chicago's largest cafés hit by temporary injunctions last week.

The temporary injunctions restrain the café owners from permitting Volstead violations on their premises and the proprietors had hoped that they would be allowed to go on operating if no further violations of the dry laws were observed. Instead, the same evidence obtained in raids last Sunday morning will be used to padlock the cafés, according to Edgar Elder, assistant district attorney in charge of injunction proceedings.

Thirteen on List.

The night life centers which the government intends to padlock are the Rainbo Gardens, the Blackhawk restaurant, the Parody café, the Hollywood Barn, the Midnight Frolics, the Alamo café, the Jeffrey Tavern, the Club Ansonia, the Rendezvous, Samovar, Chez Pierre, Plantation café, and the Club Bagdad.

"The temporary injunctions," Mr. Elder said, "merely prohibit the places from breaking the prohibition law and call on the owners to file reasons within thirty days why the injunctions should not be made permanent by padlocking the doors.

Many Violations Observed.

"The temporary injunctions are necessary steps to the more drastic action. In some cases places have been allowed to go along for a year under temporary injunctions, but in the cases of the places raided a week ago liquor violations have been observed over a long period, beginning last September, in fact. There is therefore no good reason why the government should not proceed as soon as possible to close these places permanently."

Fights Three Duels to Prove Italy's Nobles Do Not Loaf

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Feb. 11.—The exclusive salons in which the Roman nobility congregate are buzzing with gratification over the exploits of Marquis Capranica del Grillo, who was the hero of three duels today. The belligerent marquis fought the three battles to defend the aristocracy against charges in two Fascist papers that the noblemen are becoming indolent and good for nothing.

Following attacks printed in the newspaper Impero from the pen of Sig. Mario Carli, its editor, the marquis called to protest and fisticuffs ensued. The marquis was ejected from the editor's office.

Scratch of Cheek Ends Duel.

Marquis del Grillo then sent his seconds to see Sig. Carli, proposing to settle the matter with swords, with which he is an expert.

The duelists met behind the city walls, near the Porta Giovanni. The fight ended when the point of the marquis' rapier drew blood with a mild scratch on Sig. Carli's cheek.

Now, Impero has another noon edition which is called Il Brillante, and when Sig. Zanzi, one of its subeditors, reëchoed Sig. Carli's attacks on the aristocracy, the irate marquis immediately challenged him. This second encounter ended with the marquis two up against the field, since his rapier again drew blood and vindication.

Another Butts In; Another Fight.

Finally, just after the second duel, one of the seconds inadvertently remarked that he was completely in accord with Signori Carli and Zanzi in their denunciations of the patricians, whereupon the marquis challenged Sig. Zanzi's second, and with a third duel settled the dispute triumphantly in favor of the aristocracy.

Until the new penal code goes into effect the duellers can only be sentenced to three day suspended jail sentences under the present laws.

The aristocracy is breathing easier, for Sig. Carli's articles have been concluded.

REMINISCENCES OF LINCOLN AND HIS TWO BOYS

Woman Tells Anecdotes of White House Days.

BY KATHLEEN McLAUGHLIN.

"There goes that black Republican ape!"

It may be a bit difficult, through the haze of sixty-six years and the halo of sanctity that now surrounds the memory of the Great Emancipator, to recognize, under that label, Abraham Lincoln. Yet he was the "black Republican ape."

The bitter phrase was a woman's. So was the curled lip that went with it. The place was Washington, the scene the inaugural parade down Pennsylvania avenue.

And the words so deeply engraved on the memory of one of her hearers that even the inflections of her voice remain distinct today, heralded a girl's first glimpse of a gaunt figure and a grave face she was to encounter often and to know well in the months that ensued.

Her First Long Dress.

She was Julia Taft in those days, but she has been Mrs. Julia Taft Bayne these many years. Her hair at that time was the bonny brown of the old favorite song. Today it is snowy white. Then she was 16, proudly conscious of her newly acquired adult dignity and her first long dress. Now she is 82, mellow and motherly, looking back upon those early chapters of her life with a tender and reminiscent smile.

She told of the inaugural incident, and of others similar to it, recently while she was a guest at the Ambassador hotel here—anecdotes that enchant the listener with their atmosphere of homeliness and the informality that pervaded the White House during Lincoln's occupancy of it. Her home is at St. Petersburg, Fla., and she is a cousin of former President Taft.

Mrs. Bayne's book of memories is a crowded one, for she and her brothers were for more than a year and a half the intimate and almost the only companions of Tad and Willie Lincoln. No matter at what page she opens the volume, the contents are sure to be fascinating.

A Tiny Woman.

Five feet four looks down upon her now from the vantage of nearly a head in height. It is easy to imagine how tiny she must have seemed to Lincoln's six feet some, particularly in those forgetful moments when the child she was wiped out the memory of the young lady she had become, and a pair of slippered feet went skipping gayly down the halls of the nation's executive mansion to join the boys at play.

Half dreamily, a little pensively, she sketches a word picture of that inaugural parade as the prologue to the episodes that followed close upon it in such profusion.

"My mother and one of her friends, a lady who was strongly in sympathy with the south," she relates, "had gone into one of the stores along the avenue and were watching the scene from a window on the second floor. Girl-like, my gaze was riveted on the troops, and I didn't know the President's carriage was close until I heard mother's friend exclaim:

"'There goes that black Republican ape!'

"I looked up quickly, and there was Lincoln riding by. I still remember his black top hat, and how tall he seemed. I've never forgotten that first sight of him.

Soldiers Burst In.

"Washington had been a divided city for months, and all about in the crowd that day were southern sympathizers. Many of them called out insults as he passed. Even while we watched soldiers burst into the room behind us, rifles in their hands, and stood watching the crowd over our shoulders for signs of trouble. None occurred, and we all breathed easier when they left.

"From the day he was elected Lincoln's life was never free from the threat of assassination until the night he actually crumpled to the floor in his box at Ford's theater. Guards shadowed him everywhere, but he was always careless of the danger."

Mrs. Bayne's father, Judge Horatio Nelson Taft, was a collector of customs and had lived in Washington for years. He had friends on both sides of the national controversy, she relates, and many were the lifelong associations that split on that rock of dissension.

On first acquaintance an intimate friendship developed between the Taft and Lincoln families. Judge Taft's allegiance to the northern cause and the proximity of his home to the White House were contributing factors, but the strongest bond was the comradeship of the sons of Lincoln and the sons of Taft.

Willie and Tad Lincoln.

Willie Lincoln was then—in 1861—eleven years old. Tad was eight. Horatio Nelson Taft Jr., who from babyhood had been "Bud" to his family, was the same age as Willie, and "Holly," whose formal cognomen was Halsey Cook Taft, was just as old as Tad. It was inevitable that the quartet became inseparable.

Paradoxically enough, Judge Taft was a stickler for etiquette and a stern disciplinarian of his children, while Lincoln, Mrs. Bayne recalls, was perhaps the most indulgent father she has ever known. No matter what escapades they were involved in, she never knew of either Lincoln or his wife chastising or reproving their sons. They had the run of the White House, and were impressed not at all with the privilege. She illustrates:

"Down in the lobby of the White House, where the Marine band used to give its concerts, was a huge and very beautiful mirror set in an imposing frame. Tad had a new ball, and one morning as I started down the stairs from the upper hall, I saw the ball crash into the mirror and chunks of the heavy glass splintered to the marble floor.

"My heart stood still for a moment as I thought what would happen to Tad. Then I ran downstairs and confronted the boys. Tad looked a bit scared for a moment, then he stuck his hands in his pockets, swaggered over and kicked a piece of the glass with the toe of his shoe, and remarked:

"'Well, I don't care about the old thing. 'Twasn't pretty, anyhow.'

"Holly was looking very serious.

"'Well,' he put in, 'our old cook Rosie says if you break a mirror it means seven years bad luck. She says you've got to throw some salt over your left shoulder, and say the Lord's prayer backwards.'

"'Glory—did she say that?' asked Tad, much impressed and slightly uneasy. 'Wait a minute.'

"He tore away to the kitchen, and was back shortly with a big saltshaker. He had just planted himself in the middle of the floor, the salt in one hand, and had asked Holly:

"'Now, let's see how do I begin? Amen——' when a servant burst into the room to report that the boys' pet goat had escaped and was roaming in the garden. They dashed out pell-mell, the mirror forgotten.

"Not long afterward the President came downstairs, and the tale was soon poured into his ears. Instead of getting angry, he looked amused. He walked over and looked at the damage.

"'Well—well,' said he 'so Tad broke the mirror!'

"He walked away, and that was the end of that.

The Madam's Wildcat.

"So it is hardly surprising that Tad became the bane of the servants' existence. I remember once he had pulled up some of the choice plants in the garden. The head gardner was furious, and declared he would tell the madam.

"'But remember,' I said to him, 'he is the madam's son.'

"'The madam's wildcat,' snarled the head gardner.

"It was Tad, too, who provided my mother with one of her most embarrassing experiences. The first Union officer killed in the war was Col. Elmer Ellsworth of the New York Fire Zouaves. During the early hostilities he came into Alexandria and found a Confederate flag flying over the Marshall house. Rashly impulsive he dashed up and tore down the flag. The keeper of the hotel shot him down while the banner was still in his arms, and as he fell his blood stained it red.

"The flag was sent by his comrades to Mrs. Lincoln as a treasured relic, and she prized it highly. So did Tad. He used to steal it away from her room to play with it, until she finally hid it from him in a drawer.

"Then came the day after the battle of the Monitor and the Merrimac, and all Washington turned out to celebrate the victory. There was a great to-do for Washington people had been in terror lest the dread Merrimac steam up the river and bombard the city. The streets were crowded with revelers, when a lady rushed up to my mother and asked:

"'O, Mrs. Taft! Did you know there's a confederate flag flying from your house?'

"'Why—no!' gasped out mother, quite shocked. And she scurried back to see.

"Sure enough, there was the blood stained flag from Alexandria, fluttering in the breeze. Tad had found it again, and brought it over to decorate our house."

Lincoln liked both the Taft boys, but was partial to Bud, and many were the errands, some of them of state import, Mrs. Bayne declares, on which he sent the boy. On occasions he employed him in preference to the White House messengers.

One day he needed a pair of rubbers, and deputized Bud to buy them. As the size of his feet corresponded to his unusual height, the boy had difficulty finding a pair large enough. Finally he asked one shopkeeper for the largest size he carried. He took them back to Lincoln, but they proved too small.

The Largest Feet.

"Well, sonny," the shopkeeper said to Bud when he brought them back. "I reckon your daddy must have the biggest pair of feet in Washington."

Bud had not disclosed for whom he was buying the rubbers.

Lincoln in his unoccupied moments often frolicked with the boys as unrestrainedly as though he were no older than they. Mrs. Bayne recalls coming down the hall one day to find the President flat on his back at the foot of the stairs, wrestling with the four. Two of the boys held down his arms. The other two were astride his legs. Catching sight of Julia, they shrieked for her to come sit on his stomach. But the importance of her sixteen years and a more mature realization of both her own and the President's dignity forbade, and she went on to find Mrs. Lincoln.

Once Lincoln came into the room while Julia sat beside his wife, who was selecting pieces for her from a scrap bag. Immediately the girl stood, and all the little scraps fluttered to the floor from her lap. The President went out and she sat down again. In a few minutes he was back, and she stood up again. Once more the scraps went billowing down. Then Mrs. Lincoln, whose ideas of etiquette were more liberal than her own, advised her.

"Sit down, Julia. You don't need to stand up every time Abr'am comes into the room."

But Lincoln, a twinkle in his eye, passed through the room again, and instinct sent the girl to her feet once more, whereupon he walked over and asked whether she would like his photograph. Delighted, she said she would, and he showed her some that had been made for autographing. She made a choice, and he told her:

Blushing and confused, "Julie," as he always called her, would have escaped payment if she could. But her awe of him and her liking for him triumphed, and she paid the kiss as he stooped down to receive it. The picture remains today her most treasured possession.

"I can still recall," she laughs, "how scratchy his whiskers were as I touched his cheek."

Then came that somber period when Willie Lincoln lay sick and delirious in his own room, growing hourly worse. Lincoln, distracted, paced the floor incessantly. Once he strode in and found Bud crouched at the bedside, his hand in Willie's. They had been that way a long time. Laying a hand on the boy's head, he said:

"You'd better go to bed, son. It's nearly 10 o'clock."

Willie Lincoln's Death.

"I can't, sir," whispered Bud. "Willie holds my hand so tight, and I don't want to wake him up; he's so sick."

The President's head dropped on his chest. He stood motionless for some time, then walked away. Presently Bud was fast asleep, fallen forward on Willie's bed. Nor did he wake when Lincoln returned, picked him up, and carried him upstairs to bed, where he awoke in the morning. The next day Willie Lincoln died.

That was the end of the boys' companionship, for the sight of the Taft boys proved agonizing to Mrs. Lincoln, and she sent a note to Mrs. Taft asking her to keep them away; they brought back her loss so keenly.

Only once after that did Julia visit the White House. Some time after Willie's death a reception was being given, and Tad, who had been almost inconsolable at the loss of his beloved elder brother, wandered in among the guests. Catching sight of Julia, he threw himself on the floor with a scream and wept hysterically, kicking his feet on the rug.

Mrs. Lincoln had him carried out by the servants. Then she crossed over to the girl, placed a hand on her shoulder, and, with lips quivering, apologized.

"You'll have to excuse him, Julia. You know what he's remembering."

On that pensive note her White House contacts ended. Mrs. Taft took her north to school shortly thereafter.

And then came the news that the assassin's bullet had found its mark.

STEAL CAR, RAM POLICE AUTO IN CHASE, ESCAPE

Two automobile thieves, riding in the automobile of State Senator Lawrence C. O'Brien, which they had stolen a few hours before, yesterday afternoon jammed it against a detective bureau squad car, pinning Lieut. William Cox, who stood on the running board, in such a position he could not use the revolver he had drawn to stop them.

As the two automobiles then sped side by side down Vedder street at forty miles an hour the two thieves dived out of the stolen car.

They rolled over and over in the street, but escaped after Cox had fired a number of shots at them.

Lieut. Cox, riding in his squad car with Sergeants James McLaughlin and Harold O'Connell, first saw the thieves in the O'Brien automobile at Crosby and Division streets. It was after he had drawn alongside and ordered the pair to stop that they jammed against the bureau car.

HONOR LINCOLN'S MEMORY TODAY IN CITY'S CHURCHES

Ministers Will Observe Race Relations Day.

Practically every phase of the life of Lincoln will be reviewed today as Chicago observes the 118th anniversary of his birth. In numerous churches there will be an exchange of pulpits between white and colored pastors in recognition of race relations Sunday. Lincoln programs predominate.

This evening Miss Jane Addams will be the principal speaker at the services of the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall, where the anniversary will be commemorated.

At luncheons, with illustrated lectures, and orations on the chapters and significance of Lincoln's life, Chicagoans yesterday extolled the emancipator in many gatherings.

Bishop Delivers Address.

"The heredity of Lincoln leads us back to God," said Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes of the Methodist Episcopal church, addressing the Sons of the American Revolution at the Hotel La Salle. "It can be explained in no other way. He was a democrat and a natural aristocrat, too."

"Abraham Lincoln's code of ethics as a lawyer would do much toward solving the crime problem in Chicago," said R. E. Pattison Kline of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Banking. He spoke to the German club of Chicago at the Morrison hotel. "When Lincoln became a lawyer," he said, "he adopted the policy of refusing the cases of defendants whom he believed guilty."

Judge Matthew D. Hartigan talked on "Lincoln as a Lawyer" at the Pekin police court, where he presides, where exercises were held under the auspices of the George L. Giles post of the American Legion.

The Hamilton club was addressed by Charles W. Hadley of Wheaton, Republican candidate for attorney general of Illinois.

G. A. R. to Observe Day.

Gen. George A. Custer camp, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War, and allied orders of the G. A. R., will celebrate the anniversary tomorrow night in Memorial hall at Randolph and Michigan. The Rev. Howard Buxton will deliver an address.

James Edgar Brown will be the speaker at the Veterans' Corps meeting at the armory, Michigan avenue and 16th street, tomorrow night.

There will be no carrier delivery of mail tomorrow afternoon, it was announced by Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder. Carrier and financial stations will close at 1 o'clock. Banks, schools and some business houses will also observe the legal holiday tomorrow.

DEFEND FATHER OF LINCOLN FROM POISON PENS

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 11.—[U. P.]—The Indiana Lincoln union rose today to defend Abraham Lincoln's father, Thomas Lincoln, whose character it charges has been greatly maligned by historians.

In an exhaustive report, submitted by a committee on documentary reference and research, the union declared Thomas Lincoln bore all of the noble qualities for which his son, Abraham, became famous.

The father of Abraham Lincoln, the report stated, was not the vagrant, idle, pauper backwoodsman, which it alleged historians had recorded.

The committees report declared investigation had removed all stigma of illegitimacy from Abraham Lincoln. Records were cited to show that Thomas Lincoln and Nancy Hanks were married several years before Abraham's birth.

Refuting charges of illiteracy the report declared documents had been found which revealed his signature in good, legible English. Land grants, the report said, in several instances were made out to Thomas "Linkern," as the name was spelled.

The case was dismissed.

LOWDEN DROPS FARM TALK TO PRAISE LINCOLN

Albuquerque, N. M., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Laying aside political discussion on the occasion of the celebration of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, tonight devoted his speech delivered to New Mexico Republicans to praises of the great emancipator.

Mr. Lowden touched only briefly on farm problems and then used quotations from Lincoln to illustrate the need of maintaining a high standard of agriculture.

Of the agricultural interest, Mr. Lowden said: "It also follows that that interest is most worthy of all to be cherished and cultivated, that if there be inevitable conflict between that interest and any other, that other should yield."

Judge Gives Hickman Delay of Sentence Until Tuesday

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Attorneys for Edward Hickman today fought off until Tuesday, at least, the sentencing of their client for murdering Marion Parker.

Hickman was brought before Judge J. J. Trabucco for sentencing this morning. Jerome Walsh of Kansas City, Hickman's chief counsel, gave notice of motion for new trial and indicated that the Hickman case may get into the United States Supreme court before a decision is reached as to the disposition of the case.

The judge instructed District Attorney Asa Keyes to have witnesses present Tuesday. The witnesses will present testimony regarding Hickman's crimes so that the judge may determine whether any mitigating circumstances exist.

Under the law, the judge may not take the evidence introduced at Hickman's recent trial on the issue of insanity for the purpose of governing the degree of penalty against him.

Asks New Trial.

Attorney Walsh did not give Hickman time to reply when the latter arose in answer to Judge Trabucco's stern question: "The court now asks you if there is any reason why sentence should not be pronounced at this time?"

"Yes, your honor," Walsh interjected, "I wish to present a motion for new trial on twenty grounds."

The lawyer's twenty allegations include the claim that the new California state law, under which this week's jury found Hickman sane, does not constitutionally permit of a sentence on the question of guilt. The new law on insanity trials will be attacked before the state Supreme court, and if necessary before the United States Superme court, Walsh further explained. He declared that the law's presumption that "not guilty because of insanity" means the same as a plea of guilty, is not constitutional.

"It permits a man being sentenced as guilty without having either pleaded guilty or been found guilty," Walsh said.

Plan Next Trial.

Hickman's other claims to a new trial include assertions of errors committed by the trial judge; the declaration new evidence has been discovered; the charge that the sanity jury received evidence out of court and that the verdict was contrary to law and the evidence.

District Attorney Asa Keyes this evening announced that Hickman will positively go on trial along with Welby Hunt, his 16 year old accomplice in crime, for the murder of C. Ivy Thoms, Los Angeles druggist. The Thoms murder trial is scheduled to begin next Wednesday, but Hickman and Hunt probably will be given a few days' postponement while their joint trial is being assigned to one of the local judges.

"We may convict and hang Hickman on the Thoms murder charge while his counsel are dragging out the legalities surrounding his sentence on the Parker murder charge," the prosecutor said.

LATINS AGREE TO U. S. BACKING OF PACTS BY FORCE

Hughes Nips Mexican Plan to Curb Yankees.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HAVANA, Cuba, Feb. 11.—The United States, in veiled but unmistakable terms, served notice today that its purposes to maintain by whatever measures are necessary the independence and territorial integrity of the republic of Panama, which is essential to the protection of the Panama canal as a vital link in our national defense. By the same token the United States will brook no limitation upon the freedom of action in maintaining the independence and territorial integrity of Cuba, to which it is committed by treaty. Inferentially it will adopt the same attitude in regard to any other American republics whose protection it may become necessary to assume.

Mexico Leads Movement.

The attitude of the United States was stated by Charles Evans Hughes, chief of the American delegation, to the Pan-American conference and was evoked by a movement led by Mexico to deprive the United States of the right to use force in protecting Panama, Cuba, Nicaragua, and other countries which it has undertaken or may undertake to protect eventually. The Mexican proposal was overwhelmingly rejected by the other Latin American countries.

The matter came to the fore when the pan-American conference committee on the codification of public international law for the western hemisphere was considering the adoption of rules governing treaties among the American republics.

Right of Intervention.

In one of the proposed rules there is involved the question of the right of a nation to intervene to enforce observe of a treaty of which it is the guarantor. This proposed rule reads:

"The execution of a treaty may by express stipulation or by virtue of a special treaty be placed wholly or partly under the guaranty of one or more states. The guaranteeing state can intervene in the execution of the treaty only by virtue of a request by one of the interested parties, and then only under conditions expressly stipulated for intervention. When intervention takes place only such measures may be employed as are sanctioned by international law, and no more comprehensive or different demands than those made can be exacted by the state which has been guaranteed."

No sooner had this section come before the committee, than Mexico, Salvador, and other republics which are gunning for the United States went into action. They were particularly interested in getting through some sort of a provision, curbing the intervention policy of the United States in the Caribbean region. They would deprive the United States, if possible, of the right to use force in the protection of Panama, Cuba, and other republics from an aggressor.

Mexico Opposes U. S. Aims.

The Mexican delegation informed the committee that Mexico opposes the use of forces to guarantee treaties. The sentiment was echoed by several other Latin-American delegations. It became apparent in the ensuing debate that the Mexican delegates and their supporters were shooting directly at the treaty whereby the United States guarantees the independence and territorial integrity of Panama. If the Mexican view were to prevail the United States would be deprived of the right under international law to employ its army and navy to repel an attack on the republic of Panama.

The Mexican attitude was particularly significant, because of the fact that the Mexican government was caught red handed by the United States in the act of fomenting revolution in Nicaragua for the purpose, as charged by the Coolidge administration, of arraying Central America against the United States, one possible effect of which would be the abrogation by Nicaragua of the treaty granting the United States the right to construct an Isthmian canal across its territory.

Hughes Spikes Mexican Guns.

Mr. Hughes began by saying that he did not understand the rule under consideration would apply "to the case of a guaranty by one state of the independence or other integrity of the territory of another state by virtue of a treaty between the two states."

He paused and let that sink into the consciousness of the Mexicans and their anti-American supporters. He had said in effect that the rule they were debating would not cover such a treaty as that by which the United States covenanted with Panama to guarantee the independence and territorial integrity of that country. Then he delivered the answer of the United States to the Mexican threat. It was only one sentence and that was enough.

"Certainly that guarantee, when given," said Mr. Hughes with impressive deliberation, "will be maintained." He did not mention the name of Panama, but everybody present knew Mr. Hughes was thinking of Panama or Cuba, perhaps Nicaragua, which the United States is by implication obligated to protect.

Discusses Disputed Article.

"So far as this article goes, as I understand it," Mr. Hughes went on, "it relates to the guaranty by one state or by one or more states of the execution of treaties between other states. You may have in mind cases in which this has some practical bearing. I have not.

"This article does not apply to the case where the question is as to a treaty between two parties, one of which guarantees the independence and integrity of the other. It applies only to the guaranty of the execution of a treaty between states by a third state."

The committee finally accepted Mr. Hughes' interpretation, thereby making it clear that under this proposed rule, the freedom of action of the United States to guarantee by treaty the independence of Panama and other countries would not be limited.

The Mexicans and their allies found themselves in a negligible minority on the entire question of employing force in the guaranty of treaties. The committee proved to be overwhelmingly opposed even to prohibiting the use of force for the guaranty of treaties to which the rule does not apply.

Hector David Castro of Salvador moved an amendment that intervention should be confined to pacific means. He was defeated.

SANDINO REPORTED DEFEATED, FLEEING OUT OF NICARAGUA

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The navy department has been advised from Nicaragua that Gen. Augusto Sandino, rebel chief, is in flight to Honduras.

A message from officers in Nicaragua, received today and given to the senate foreign relations committee by Secretary Wilbur, said Gen. Sandino was practically out of ammunition and "insofar as Nicaragua is concerned he is finished and is simply trying to escape."

"The indication is, from latest reports," the message read, "that Sandino intends to reach the northern coast of Honduras. He was reported to be at La Purta, in the mountains northeast of Jalapa, on Feb. 4. There is ample evidence that all the rifles that Sandino has were procured in Nicaragua from men who failed to turn them in. Sandino's ammunition is practically gone."

REPORT BISHOP SENT ON MEXICAN CRUSADE BY POPE

Stirs Catholics to War, Police Charge.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 11.—The Rt. Rev. Miguel M. de la Mora, bishop of San Luis Potosi, was recently sent back to Mexico as head of the Catholic movement and church interests, according to a statement issued this afternoon by the newspaper El Sol and credited to José Mazcorro, head of the Mexican secret police. Another report said the bishop had been arrested in Puebla City.

Catholics give credence to the police report that Bishop de la Mora was made archbishop of Mexico by the pope while in Rome and was commissioned to carry on a crusade "against infidels" as in the heroic crusading days of the middle ages. Bishop de la Mora is a man of keen intelligence and executive ability. It is said that for this reason the deported archbishop of Mexico, now in San Antonio, Tex., gave his place to Bishop de la Mora.

[Chicago priests well acquainted with the Mexican religious situation last night discredited the report that Bishop de la Mora had been appointed archbishop, because they declared the present archbishop of Mexico, José Mora y Del Rio, was still living, although exiled from Mexico.]

The police assert that Bishop de la Mora entered Mexico clandestinely three weeks ago and began to organize the League for Catholic Defense into a fighting organization, with ramifications in all cities, and towns of Mexico. It was said that before leaving the United States for Mexico the bishop consulted Catholic authorities and sympathizers there who promised to back the plans for general active Catholic opposition against the Calles government.

Before Bishop de la Mora's arrival in Mexico, secret service agents here learned that the Catholic plans were supposed to be kept secret within a restricted circle of devout Catholics sworn to defend the cause in Mexico. The bishop evaded detectives and went to Europe, where he consulted Pope Pius XI. The pope is said to have approved of the active Catholic campaign, which, it is said, was agreed to in a meeting of Mexican Catholic prelates with certain American prelates in San Antonio.

Bishop Dodges Police.

While the police here maintain Bishop de la Mora dodged Mexican detectives after crossing the Rio Grande and made his way to Mexico City, when he was expected to go to San Luis Potosi, Catholics of the inner circle maintain the prelate came to Mexico on a French liner, direct from Europe.

Before the arrival of the bishop the League for Catholic Defense had been actively preparing the Catholic pro-war party for the coming of the new archbishop. Bishop de la Mora came to Mexico City, it was declared, expressly to meet the active elements of the league, which selected the most Catholic suburb of Mexico City, San Angel, as the head of operations. There the bishop is said to have met the league officials virtually under the noses of the police. The latter prepared to raid the secret meeting place, believing Bishop de la Mora's capture was certain, but he is said to have escaped with the aid of Catholic secret agents.

Lay Trouble to Bishop.

Police confirmed the activities of Bishop de la Mora. They admitted the revived activities of Catholics in five of the most populous states of Mexico were traced directly to the bishop's work.

Answering an inquiry on a story current here that he would confer with the American priest, the Rev. John J. Burke, who would act as the emissary of the pope, with a view to reaching an agreement on the Catholic question, President Calles said today: "I have no knowledge whatever of the matter to which you refer." No information on the subject could be obtained at the American embassy, as Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow had gone to Cuernavaca.

OUTLAWRY OF WAR IS NOT INCLUDED IN NEW FRENCH TREATY

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Denial that the new arbitration treaty with France embodies any of the suggestions made in the Briand proposal for the outlawry of war was made today by Secretary of State Kellogg. The secretary's announcement was made, it is explained, to stop reports that the declarations against war, in the preamble to the treaty, were intended to take the place of the Briand proposal.

Mr. Kellogg considers the arbitration treaty an advance over previous arbitration treaties and plans are under way to open negotiations for a similar pact with Germany as well as Japan and England.

Berlin Resents Suggestion of Divorce Possibilities

Palm Springs, Cal., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Irving Berlin expressed resentment this afternoon when a New York Telegram asking for a statement on a rumor of separation between himself and Ellin Mackay Berlin was shown him. "It is so ridiculous a report that I will not issue a denial," Berlin stated, "for the reason that a denial would just give circulation to the report."

BEAUTIFUL furniture in the dining room, combined with damask, silver and other appointments, creates an atmosphere of hospitality obtained in no other way. The food actually seems to taste better.

These pieces are accurate reproductions of the work of George Hepplewhite, one of the foremost English furniture designers of the eighteenth century. They are of solid walnut, beautifully inlaid; wonderfully made. The larger pieces are beautifully paneled in walnut burl, and the arm chair is an example of the Hepplewhite shield back. All the chairs are covered with imported figured silk velvet.

The group is one of the special items offered during our semi-annual sale; and like everything else here, it's guaranteed "satisfaction or money refunded."

EDISON OBSERVES WORLD DRIFTING AWAY FROM BUNK

Celebrates 81st Birthday; Grants Interviews.

Fort Myers, Fla., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Thomas A. Edison celebrated his 81st birthday at his winter home here today by eating strawberries for lunch, a delicacy not often allowed him by his wife, and participating for the first time in a public observance of the day and granting his annual interview to newspapermen.

Religion, moral standings, Lindbergh and rubber came in for comment from the inventor, who wrote with a stubby pencil answers to questions submitted to him by the interviewers.

Replying to a question whether he thought modern Americans were drifting away from religion, he said, "They are drifting away from superstition and bunk," adding that increase in scientific knowledge was responsible for the fact that "11,344 churches in the United States reported no additions in 1927."

Admires Lindy.

"The kind of person you are depends upon your forebears for generations back, just like a plant," he said.

Despite that he sleeps an average of but six hours nightly, he said if he had his life to live over again he "would do as I have been doing."

"Lindbergh," he said, "is a fine specimen of our younger men. He appears to be a special personality that everybody admires, and as an example for young men he is a great asset."

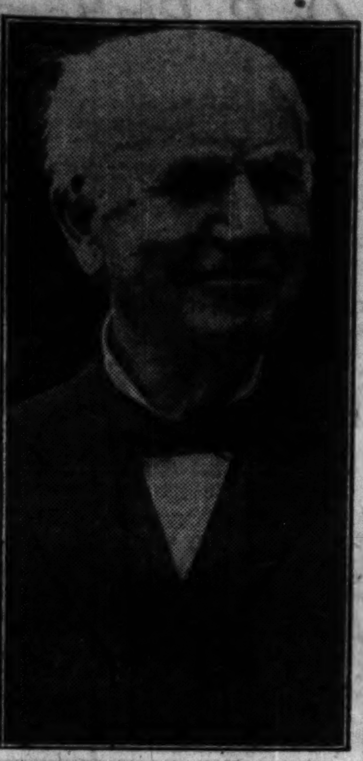
He was reticent on his experiments with rubber producing vines here, but reiterated that he was not attempting to compete with the tropics in rubber growing, but only to afford a supply from domestic plants in case of war.

Operates Telegraph Key.

He did say, however, that his present research probably would require from six to eight years and that he contemplated sending several parties of botanists into unexplored sections of the Everglades soon to search for possible new varieties of rubber producing plants.

During the day Mr. Edison seated himself at a table arranged outside for the telegraph ceremony and assumed his boyhood rôle as a telegrapher by clicking off several messages. After fifty years' absence from the key, he worked the instrument unfalteringly and with a speed equal to present day telegraphers.

INVENTOR IS 81



THOMAS A. EDISON.
[Wide World Photo.]

"This is a specimen of bad telegraphing," he rattled out in dots and dashes.

Later in the evening he touched a telegraph key that started operation of a new Edison electric lighting system in Bellingham, Wash.

Talks on Politics.

Mr. Edison and Harvey Firestone, tire manufacturer, a birthday guest, gossiped for nearly an hour on a wide range of topics, chief of which was the coming presidential campaign.

"Who are you pulling for in the next election?" the inventor asked his crony.

"I'm for Hoover," Firestone replied, to which Mr. Edison assented: "Fine. You're all right. Hoover is a good man and a good engineer. That's what it takes to build up the United States—engineers. It's the men that can do things. Now Coolidge is different from Hoover. When Hoover gets good and mad, he's liable to choke. I guess if Coolidge got mad he'd just fade inward. I like to see a man get mad sometimes. I like to see a man have some bad habits, too. I don't like them when they're too good."

The crest of the birthday observance was reached in the afternoon at the municipal recreation park, where four thousand school children staged a community festival in his honor.

SMALL CONFERS WITH THOMPSON AND AIDS

Cermak In; Emmerson and Carlstrom Both Stay.

William V. Brothers of Evanston, who for some time has held the proxy of William H. Weber, spokesman for the country towns of Cook county.

And one other question concerning the earnestness with which hands had been clasped was raised when Chairman Galpin announced that the organization had indorsed Gov. Small. Doubtful ones asked whether tradition did not require that indorsements come from the entire county committee in formal session, and there was no prophet found who would predict that this public action would be taken later.

Pledges Session on Transit.

In return for this sort of an O. K. stamp on the governor's candidacy, the Cook county organization received at least three compensations. First, Gov. Small announced in a signed statement that as soon as it can be prepared he will issue a call for another special session of the legislature on or about May 1 for the purpose of giving Chicago home rule over its transportation utilities.

Second, the Chicagoans were permitted to fill one place on the slate, that of secretary of state, which had not been considered locally heretofore. This was immediately awarded to Municipal Judge Robert E. Gentzel, the political purpose being to appease Chicago Germans, who last week protested that there was no candidate of German derivation on the county slate.

All the rest of the places are to be left for filling by Gov. Small. This is thought to indicate approval of Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling for renomination and indorsement of State Senator John Dailey of Peoria for attorney general.

Mum on Auditor Nelson.

Whether it means indorsement of State Auditor Oscar Nelson for another term has not been disclosed, but it is said this may depend to some extent on the formation of a Lowden-Deneen slate which is still in the offing. The place of state treasurer is left open on the Small-Thompson ticket.

The third county reward, possibly the biggest from the viewpoint of politicians, was an agreement, to which Democratic Chief Brennan also is a party, to knock out of the primary law the present provision for precinct committeemen in Cook county and the substitution of the present system of ward committeemen.

The nearer they approached to the election of precinct leaders, the more the local bosses feared it, and the bifactional and bi-partisan combination is thought to have enough votes to kill it at this week's meeting of the special session of the assembly.

Shun Talk on Patronage.

The one subject in the negotiations in connection with which publicity was shunned was that of state patronage in Chicago. It was said this had been left to Gov. Small and Mayor Thompson and that no shakeups are expected in important spots such as the west park board or the state commerce commission.

In his signed statement Gov. Small indicated he would give attention to the need for additional and wider roads in Cook county and the Chicago metropolitan area. He said that with the county's $15,000,000 share of the gasoline tax there will be $30,000,000 available for this purpose during the next five years.

Harrison Out for Senate.

Over in the Democratic ring there was another event of interest. This was the appearance of a petition for the nomination of Carter H. Harrison for United States senator. This movement has the active support of a committee headed by Hugh J. Daly and Richard J. Considine. Former Mayor Harrison is abroad, but he is said to have given consent to the circulation of the petition.

Those sponsoring it say that Mr. Harrison's nomination would bring harmony between his friends and the Brennan organization.

MAYOR OUSTS POTTS AND TAKES OVER G. O. P. FIGHT IN FIRST WARD

Mayor Thompson returned to the west side with thanks yesterday a man loaned to him to organize the First ward and its adjuncts as a regular Republican bailiwick.

After a talk with Police Commissioner Hughes, the mayor sent for Homer P. Galpin, chairman of his county committee and told him that Ernest Potts, a Galpinite from the Twenty-seventh ward, had failed to make good as ward committeeman for the First. He said Mr. Potts could go back over the bridge again and that he, the mayor, would take charge of the G. O. P. fight in the stronghold of Michael Kenna, Democratic leader, who according to some reports has contrived to swallow Mr. Potts politically since the latter became the First ward Republican leader.

This is believed an effort to add the First to the string of south side wards now controlled by County Treasurer George F. Harding, one of the mayor's aides.

DIES OF ACCIDENTAL WOUND.

Charles Kellog, 53, colored, 5439 Prairie avenue, died Friday at the county hospital of a wound received when he shot himself accidentally while cleaning a revolver on Feb. 6.

Boy, Bitten 2 Months Ago by Dog, Dies of Rabies

Edward Johnson, colored, 5, of 524 East 50th street, died in the County hospital yesterday, the year's first victim of rabies. He was bitten by a neighbor's dog two months ago, but was not taken to the hospital for treatment until yesterday, when he developed violent symptoms of the disease. Another victim of the attacks of unmuzzled dogs is Joseph Schwarz, 13, of 3711 Dickens street, who was bitten while he was playing in the rear of 2111 North Karlov avenue yesterday. The boy was treated and the dog was taken to the pound.

Evanston Realty Broker Bankrupt, He Tells Court

William A. Pridmore, real estate broker, living at 1005 Hinman avenue, Evanston, yesterday filed a petition in federal court for voluntary bankruptcy. The petition shows liabilities of $227,811 and assets of $23,724. Financial reversals caused by poor real estate investments made it advisable to go into bankruptcy, Mr. Pridmore explained.

ADMIT ANTI-3D TERM VOTE WILL CHECK COOLIDGE

But Friends Say It's Not Enough to Bar Him.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Political effect of the senate's approval of the La Follette anti-third term resolution was a matter of conjecture today with opinions varying.

Sponsors of the resolution were of the belief that the declaration of more than two-thirds of the senators voting against a third presidential term definitely would puncture the movement for the re-nomination of President Coolidge.

Friends of the administration thought that while the resolution undoubtedly would be a factor in the campaign in the event of the President's nomination its influence would not be serious enough to prove an insuperable obstacle to his choice in case of a deadlock among the active candidates.

For Political Reasons.

It was the opinion of the Coolidge supporters that the effect of the resolution largely would be discounted in the minds of the voters generally by reason of the recognized fact that its approval was made possible by an alliance of radical Republicans and Democrats, both of which groups would be certain to favor the proposition for political reasons.

Whether or not the resolution specifically applies to President Coolidge will continue to be a matter of dispute. Senator La Follette, [Rep., Wis.] author of the resolution and most of the Democrats who voted for it unquestionably considered it as directly applicable to the present situation.

Comes Up in House.

The half dozen regular Republicans who voted for the resolution, however, did so on the theory that it did not fit the Coolidge case. These Republicans interpreted the resolution as approving the tradition by which presidents have retired after two elective terms or after two "substantial" terms.

An attempt to obtain a vote on the anti-third term resolution may be made in the house where it has been introduced by Representative Beck [Rep., Wis.], who is the La Follette candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination in Wisconsin.

Willis Demands Bone Dry Plank in G. O. P. Platform

Utica, N. Y., Feb. 11.—(AP)—In his first prepared address since announcing his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination, Senator Frank B. Willis of Ohio tonight outlined a platform of ten "planks" at a Republican party banquet here.

Facing a primary fight with Secretary Hoover in his own state, the Ohio senator made no reference to other candidates, and confined himself to his platform, which called for the following:

Continuation of the present program of tax reduction and debt retirement.

National Problems.

Solution of the flood control, as a national problem, within the next two years.

Maintenance of the administration Nicaraguan policy.

No cancellation of world war debts.

An "American program" of restrictive immigration with "the idea that America must remain American."

Obedience to the law and the constitution.

Must Be Wholly American.

"The party or candidate who succeeds this year," Senator Willis declared, "must be thoroughly and wholly American in his or its viewpoint and devotion. Unless America takes care of itself, nobody else will do so. We have had enough experience with internationalism to be perfectly certain that the only way to be safe is to have stalwart, vigorous, old fashioned Americanism, with a willingness to help other nations wherever we can do so without surrendering our own principles or independence."

With this prelude the Ohioan launched into his platform, taking each "plank" up separately and discussing it in turn.

Beginning with a plea for maintenance of the protective tariff wall he concluded with a demand for obedience to the constitution by all, declaring that if the party "evades, equivocates or compromises" on the dry issue "defeat is certain."

Attacks League of Nations.

Nullification, he contended, has "raised its horrid head again in certain quarters," and he called upon the party to "speak in no uncertain terms in favor of maintenance of law and order and the upholding of the constitution."

Attacking the league of nations as an agent of "force and not a league of peace," Mr. Willis also called for strict insistence of the reservations demanded by the senate to American adherence to the world court and declared that the fact that the nations of Europe have objected to this reservation is one of the best reasons why it should be insisted upon.

Architect Goes to Supervise Erecting Irish Cathedral

Barry Byrne, Chicago architect, left for Ireland yesterday to supervise the beginning of construction of the Cathedral of Christ in Cork. Mr. Byrne was commissioned for the work by the Rt. Rev. Daniel Coholan because of the modernistic tendencies in the architect's design.

WOMAN DIES OF POISONING.

Miss Matilda Thompson, 50, of 5956 West Superior street, died at the West Suburban hospital yesterday of acute poisoning which her physician said may have been self-administered.

HOUSTON TO RAISE A HALF MILLION FOR CONVENTION

City Will Build $100,000 Hall for Democrats.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—About $500,000 will be raised by Texans in connection with the entertainment of the Democratic national convention at Houston, according to information received by the Democratic national committee.

A drive for funds is to commence on Monday. The finance committee of Houston has decided to raise $350,000 instead of $300,000 as at first proposed. Of this, $200,000 will be turned over to the Democratic national committee while $150,000 will be for the entertainment of delegates. The City of Houston will award a contract on Feb. 22 for a 20,000 capacity convention hall to cost $100,000, entirely outside of the $350,000 fund. Other funds to be raised by Texans will bring the total above the half million mark.

The Houston chamber of commerce has reported to the national committee that the hotels will accommodate from 7,500 to 8,000 guests, the number of rooms available totaling from 2,750 to 3,000. It is estimated that accommodations for not fewer than 5,000 guests may be obtained in the various apartment houses and that from 10,000 to 12,000 visitors will be provided for in Houston homes.

BANDITS FAIL TO OPEN SAFE.

Two men yesterday held up [illegible], bread wrapper in Pages Doughnut shop, [illegible] East 26th street, and attempted to pry open the safe with a pair of scissors. Being unsuccessful they departed.

PENNYWISE

It isn't at all necessary to repeat that old adage—but it is well at times to refresh our minds and look at facts about merchandise, once that we have cleared away the smoke of exaggeration and false claims. Regardless of the tons of printers' ink being spread to tempt us to believe the impossible, the fact still holds true that we get just what we pay for . . . whether we are purchasing Tiaras or turnips.

Quality does demand a premium over mediocrity . . . but Quality pays many dividends . . . mediocrity never does.

THE IMPATIENT LINCOLN.

The north has always believed that Lincoln was a man of inexhaustible patience, a patience born of a serene nature and a tolerance of human frailty. That is the quality of the Lincoln who stands in Lincoln park and in even greater measure it is the Lincoln who sits in serenity in the Doric temple at Washington.

Lincoln's patience, we have been taught, was never better displayed than in the months between his election in November and the call for volunteers in April, 1861. A southerner whose admiration for Lincoln is great presents a contrary view in the current Scribner's.

"After the election," he says, "though the south was out of the union it was peacefully out. The time, it would appear, was a time for conciliation. President Lincoln seemed to be conciliatory but in reality he was not, for he would consider no concession. He underestimated the spirit and the earnestness of the south. Almost any concession would have been better than the sacrifice of more than a half million the bravest Americans. . . ."

In support of this view, Lincoln is charged with provocative behavior at Fort Sumter and far more provocative behavior in calling for volunteers immediately afterward. In addition, it is charged, he acted without calling congress. Had he shown greater patience he might have held Virginia and all the border states in the Union and without them the confederacy would have fallen of its own weight.

Lincoln was elected in November. On December 20, the Charleston convention met and South Carolina seceded. By February all the states from South Carolina to Texas had joined the movement, a government was set up, and the confederacy had elected its president. Congress, aware of the danger, had exhausted itself in drafting a compromise which would bring the south back into the union. The compromise was favorable to the south but it was defeated through the failure of six southern senators to vote. Subsequent attempts to achieve the same end offered small hope of success, and there must have been much reason to fear that should congress be called again, debate would excite rather than allay passion. On that point, we believe, Lincoln's position is unassailable.

Meanwhile, the south was arming, and there was no doubt what the arming was for. Lincoln's behavior was patience itself in contrast, for example, to the temper shown by Jackson at the attempt of South Carolina to secede in 1832, and that was a mild threat, indeed, in contrast to the one presented to Lincoln. Had he withdrawn the troops from Fort Sumter it is possible that the south might have repented of its rashness but it is at least equally probable that the surrender of the fort without a struggle would have encouraged rather than discouraged the secession movement in the border states. At best, the surrender of Sumter without a fight could only have created a Sumter somewhere else unless the temper both north and south had miraculously cooled.

It is easy to say now that Lincoln might have hesitated longer before calling for troops. The bond of the union today is so strong that we are in danger of believing it was always so, and that the danger of disrupting the union was never really serious. It is nearer the truth to say that if the nation is close knit today, it is exactly because Lincoln acted as he did. The secession which he put down was the last which threatened the country but it was not the first. The revolt against the alien and sedition laws was followed by the far more menacing movement in New England during the war of 1812 and that in turn by South Carolina's attempt to break away in the thirties. Armed force was promptly applied or threatened in each instance, excepting only against the New Englanders, and then armed force was not used only because the President had none available. Whatever hesitation Lincoln showed in appealing to arms was in violation of the precedents established for him. Jackson would not have hesitated a moment, and it is difficult to see how any man of character elected President of the United States could long remain inactive while the union was dissolving.

When he called for volunteers Lincoln was making the only answer which could be made to the challenge. He had no assurance that delay would keep Virginia in the union and he had much reason to fear that delay would make the task of defeating the rebellion far more difficult. In this he can hardly be convicted of impetuosity. He chose war only when no other course presented itself.

WHEN IS INTERVENTION NOT INTERVENTION?

Missionary and relief bodies in China are cabling to America for funds with which to bring succor to four million starving natives in southern Chihli province. The famine area is the focus of the triangular warrings of three of the Chinese generals. What crop failures have not brought about in the way of famine and want, the civil war has supplied.

The American Red Cross, therefore, is being asked for $300,000 and plans are being made for a drive in America to raise a fund of $1,500,000. Doubless the fund will be raised easily. The appeal of a starving child, whether it be American or Chinese, or bolshevik Russian, is one that makes most people put their hands in their pockets. Charity in cases of real and uncontrollable need is always estimable.

From the humanitarian standpoint, therefore, the efforts of those seeking the relief fund are entirely praiseworthy. But as much cannot be said for their logic.

They explain that they have already been able to send some grain and some clothing into the stricken area, but unfortunately what is sent falls into the hands of the soldiery before it can reach the starving people. The missions say they are unable to handle the situation. It is their purpose, therefore, to place the work of relief and distribution in the hands of the Red Cross, which would have the diplomatic support of the American authorities.

It is here that the question of logic enters. Why are methods condemned in other cases of American relief condoned when it is China and missionaries instead of business men who are doing the asking? For diplomatic support is but a euphemism for national support, which means, if necessary, the protection of Americans by force of the marines and sailors who are already near at hand. The missionaries are proposing the Red Cross because they know the record of the Red Cross entitles it to command full protection.

There is nothing so very wrong in this. If the United States wants to send help to starving Chinese while a civil war is in progress and wants to be sure that the food and clothing get to their destination, that is very commendable. But under the present conditions in China, the United States must be ready to back up its move as the occasion may require—by force if necessary. Those asking for relief recognize that fact.

In other words, the same class of persons who issue horrified manifestos about the protection of legitimate business interests abroad and about American intervention in Nicaragua are willing to run the risk of a necessary intervention to feed starving people in China. It does not occur to them that what is the cause and effect in China is also cause and effect in Nicaragua; that bloodshed and military depredations can cause, and already have caused, great hardships among the people in Nicaragua, just as they have—though to by no means a similar extent—in China.

It happens that the purpose of American intervention in Nicaragua centers about the question of setting up there a constitutional government; in China the case is one of giving direct aid to famished people. But the difference is one of degree only. The situation in China has the more popular appeal, but there would be plenty of opportunity for popular appeal had not the United States stepped in in Nicaragua in time to make intervention a matter of stable government instead of famine relief.

NO MORE FARMS.

The proposal to appropriate $150,000,000 from the federal treasury for the Columbia river reclamation project has brought two members of the cabinet into conflict. The secretary of the interior, Mr. Work, under whose direction the task would be undertaken, naturally favors it. It would be strange if he did not. Every active administrator looks forward with eagerness to new and larger jobs upon which to devote his energy.

The secretary of agriculture, Mr. Jardine, says no. He argues that we have too many farms in this country already for the good of agriculture. The creation of more farm lands can lead only to greater crop surpluses and the abandonment of farms now in operation. In this position Mr. Jardine has the support of influential farm organizations in the northwest as well as in other sections.

We cannot believe that any midwestern congressmen can be so out of touch with agricultural conditions in the corn belt as to support the Colombia river or any other reclamation project. There is no present need for larger crops nor is there likely to be need for them within the next few decades. The losses which the government has been obliged to shoulder through the failure of other reclamation schemes to pay for themselves are a warning against any further expenditures along the same lines for many years to come. When existing farms are under profitable cultivation we may begin to think, again, of turning the desert into a garden, as the prospectuses always phrase it. Meanwhile our midwestern agriculture has all the competition it can handle from the great grain growing regions of the world which do not suffer, as our agriculture does, from high transportation charges to the seaboard.

If congressmen want to do something for the farmers in the way of engineering, the Mississippi and St. Lawrence waterways offer all the opportunity that can be desired.

Editorial of the Day

BY PRIVATE CAPITAL.

[Illinois State Journal, Springfield.]

The American people who are weary of the pernicious effects and heavy burdens of government in private business, welcome the vigorous language of Edward N. Hurley of Chicago on the merchant marine question. Mr. Hurley was the wartime chairman of the shipping board, and he speaks by personal knowledge, even though he be a land lubber and a denizen of the agricultural middle west.

Mr. Hurley is opposed to the plans of certain congressmen to enforce upon the government its continuance in ship building and ship operating. He declares that private capital can and will make shipping a success under the American flag, and that the government should get out of the business. Long experimentation and practical experience under favorable conditions have demonstrated that the government is not making both ends meet and never will be able to do so. In fact, the failure of the government as operator of ships in coastwise and oceanic trade has been humiliating.

LINCOLN, THE MAN OF THE PEOPLE

By EDWIN MARKHAM, Litt. D., L. H. D.

[Mr. Markham was 75 years old April 23 last. His home is in Westerleigh Park, West New Brighton, N. Y. He first published the poem, "The Man with the Hoe," in 1899, and "Lincoln, the Man of the People," in 1901. He is the honorary president of the Poetry Society of America.]

While bearing the line "By Edwin Markham," it will be readily seen the poet could not have written the following words of compliment about himself. His name is, however, deservedly placed as the author because he wrote the poems which give to the editorial significance and to their author immortality. Today is the 119th birthday anniversary of the great Emancipator. No matter how many times you may have read the Markham poem, read it again. More than 250 poems about Lincoln have been printed, and while those by James Russell Lowell, Walt Whitman, and Vachel Lindsay are worthy of high praise, first rank, we believe, as Henry Van Dyke has said, will be given to the poem we are reproducing.

In his note to us authorizing the use of his poems, which are copyrighted, he ended with the words, "And may God bless you!" This devout exclamation indicates the reason why we felt the poet and his poems have a rightful place in a religious editorial rather than in a column of mere literary criticism. To illustrate further how Christian a poet Mr. Markham is, we print a few brief selections of many more that might be quoted. Here is part of one entitled

A PRAYER.

Teach me, Father, how to go
Softly as the grasses grow;
Hush my soul to meet the shock
Of the wild world as a rock;
But my spirit, propt with power,
Make as simple as a flower
Teach me, Father, how to be Kind and patient as a tree.

One of his longer poems, entitled "The Desire of Nations," having Christ as its central theme, has among its lines the following:

And men will sit down at His sacred feet;
And He will say—the King—
"Come, let us live the poetry we sing!"
And these, His burning words, will break the ban—
Words that will grow to be,
On continent, on sea,
The rallying cry of men.

Come clear the way, clear the way:
Blind creeds and kings have had their day.
Our hope is in heroic men,
Star-led to build the world again.
To this Event the ages ran:
Make way for Brotherhood—make way for man.

◆

The poem which first gave Edwin Markham national fame, and is most ranked with the Lincoln poem as assuring him a place among America's representative poets, is "The Man with the Hoe," and having the following Bible quotation as a caption: "God made man in His own image, in the image of God made He him."—Genesis.

Knowing that Dr. William L. Stidger, pastor of the Linwood Boulevard Methodist Episcopal church, Kansas City, Mo., was personally and intimately acquainted with the poet, we requested a statement from him. This is what Dr. Stidger said: "Edwin Markham is a Christian in the finest sense of that word: a Christian about like Abraham Lincoln, concerning whom he writes in 'Lincoln, the Man of the People.' He has no patience with theology, as he has often said to me: 'Theology gets between the people and the Christ. Theology serves to put a mist around the living, laughing personality of Jesus. I have no patience with either theology or the theologians.'

"Mr. Markham has spoken in more than a thousand pulpits in America, and is a welcome visitor to any pulpit. He has come to me for at least two weeks every May for eight years, and he always preaches acceptably to my people; preaches Divine love of a loving God. He believes that Jesus Christ is all the God we know and that Jesus is enough."

In an article in the Dearborn Independent a year ago, Mr. Markham explained how he came to write the Lincoln poem. We, therefore, quote the poet's own words: "Many times in my career I have been entreated—with the promise of a fat purse—to write poems heroizing this or that public character. But I have usually declined the 'honor,' because I have frequently felt these persons to be lacking in solid virtue, lacking in the unselfish support of great causes, lacking in the fine sympathies of humanity—so lacking that they did not stir my imagination, did not excite my pen. Frequently they were mere time servers, if not plain rogues. It was altogether different at the sound of the name of Abraham Lincoln. At that sound, my heart leaped up, eager to pay homage to a man truly great. I was all afire with the idea.

"Poetry is the daughter of God; and she rises into her big moments only when she is stirred by the heroic virtues of men—their unselfish devotion, their noble ambitions, their lofty achievements. In her high moments, she comes keeping step with the music of humanity."

LINCOLN, THE MAN OF THE PEOPLE.

Greatening and darkening as it hurried on,
She left the heaven of heroes and came down
To make a man to meet the mortal need.
She took the tried clay of the common road—
Clay warm yet with the genial heat of earth,
Dashed through it all a strain of prophecy,
Tempered the heap with thrill of human tears,
Then mixed a laughter with the serious stuff.
Into the shape she breathed a flame to light
That tender, tragic, ever-changing face;
And laid on him a sense of the mystic powers,
Moving—all hushed—behind the mortal veil.
A man to match the mountains and the sea.

The color of the ground was in him, the red earth;
The smack and tang of elemental things;
The rectitude and patience of the cliff;
The good-will of the rain that loves all leaves;
The friendly welcome of the wayside well;
The courage of the bird that dares the sea;
The gladness of the wind that shakes the corn;
The pity of the snow that hides all scars;
The secrecy of streams that make their way
Under the mountain to the rifted rock;
The tolerance and equity of light
That gives as freely to the shrinking flower
As to the great oak flaring to the wind—
To the grave's low hill as to the Matterhorn
That shoulders out the sky. Sprung from the West,
He drank the valorous youth of a new world.
The strength of virgin forests braced his mind;
The hush of spacious prairies stilled his soul.
His words were oaks in acorns, and his thoughts
Were roots that firmly gripped the granite truth.

Up from log cabin to the capitol,
One fire was on his spirit, one resolve—
To send the keen ax to the root of wrong,
Clearing a free way for the feet of God,
The eyes of conscience testing every stroke,
To make his deed the measure of a man.
He built the rail-pile as he built the state,
Pouring his splendid strength through every blow;
The grip that swung the ax in Illinois
Was on the pen that set a people free.

So came the captain with the mighty heart;
And when the judgment thunders split the house,
Wrenching the rafters from their ancient rest,
He held the ridgepole up, and spiked again
The rafters of the home. He held his place,
Held the long purpose like a growing tree,
Held on through blame and faltered not at praise.
And when he fell in whirlwind, he went down
As when a lordly cedar, green with boughs,
Goes down with a great shout upon the hills,

MEXICO'S MODEL SCHOOL.

In Cananea, Mexico, there is a school building from which the countries to the north may learn. It is a public school operated for and by Mexicans. It is only one story high and has plenty of playground around it, as well as a paved patio in the center in which pupils can play if the playgrounds are muddy. This patio can also be used as out of doors classroom space in suitable weather.

All of the classrooms are outside rooms with an altogether unusually large proportion of window space to wall and floor space. The corner rooms have windows on two sides, the middle rooms on one side only. The windows are well placed from the standpoint of light and shadow. When artificial illumination is required, it is supplied by ceiling lights provided with shades to throw the light against a wall and then downward.

The air exhausts are through the ceilings and through shafts passing out of the roofs. These ventilating shafts are protected by cowls. The floors of the schoolrooms are oiled and sweeping is done by approved methods for use on oiled floors.

The cloak rooms are in reality long passageways without end doors. They are located by the side of the schoolrooms between them and the patio. There is no possibility of odors and bad air in these cloak rooms, for they have no dead ends, no confined air, and no dark places.

The drinking water is supplied by fountains. The toilet seats and wash bowls are of modern construction. The plumbing is modern.

In this town education is free and general, if not compulsory, and in consequence of this in part the school is overcrowded. The average daily attendance is at least 50 per cent greater than the plans called for, and two grades are cared for in nearby auxiliary schoolrooms.

What are some of the lessons for us found in this Mexican school? I have seen many American schools where the toilet seats are too few and where the toilet facilities were not of the one seat unit type. It is the rule, to which there are exceptions, that American schools are deficient in wash bowls and other facilities for washing the hands and face.

In southern California, Arizona, New Mexico and Texas the school buildings follow the type developed in colder climates. This is true of the schools in smaller cities and towns where congestion is not great and land values are low. The one story, open built type of structure is preferable. Some schools must be massive, complicated, tall and artificial. Where they can be low, simple, with natural exposure to sunlight, and with natural ventilation, they should be.

KEEP YOUR END OF THE BARGAIN.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I paid $75 on a $300 fur coat and found out later that I was unable to pay the balance due. I signed no contract but my receipts for the amount paid in. He is an established furrier, selling nothing but furs. Can I get my money back since I can't get a coat? Is it lawful for him to keep the money? This was not a credit concern, therefore I've never had the coat in my possession. B. O.

As long as he is willing to perform his agreement and you are not willing to perform yours, you are not in a position to force him to pay you any money.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—In 1920 a man boarded and roomed with me, and left owing forty dollars back board and ten dollars borrowed money. I have just located him. He is now married and has two children. Can I collect this money, and how? E. L. D.

The limitation on contracts not in writing is five years. Your claim is apparently barred unless the period is extended by special facts such as his absence from the state.

SNIFF, SNIFF!

Dakota, Ill., Jan. 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can a man build a slaughter house in a corporation and run it legally or can we prevent him?

2. How far away from town must he stay? W. H. K.

1. We find no prohibition in the state statutes. We do not have ready access to your local ordinances.

2. Far enough so that he will not create a legal nuisance, taking into account the previous character of the neighborhood. A nuisance could be enjoined even without a statute or ordinance on the point.

LIGHTS ON STAIRWAYS.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Is there an ordinance now in effect requiring that a light be kept burning on stairways in apartment buildings all night? M. C.

"In the absence of contracts or statute the landlord is under no obligation to light the passageways used in common by the several tenants of a building." [36 Corpus Juris 371]. A Chicago ordinance requiring such lights was held in 283 Ill. 271, to be beyond the powers of the city council. "Where, however, a landlord assumes the duty of providing and maintaining a light upon a common stairway, it is thereafter his duty to maintain a light there with reasonable care until he shall have given notice of its discontinuance." FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 12, 1863.

IN SIGHT OF VICKSBURG.—The river is rising rapidly and threatens to overflow the ground now occupied by our troops. Gen. Grant and staff went up the river, but are expected to return tomorrow. The gallant ram Queen of the West returned from the mouth of Red river and is now lying below the mouth of the canal. She has done yeoman service for the federal cause during her absence. She successively captured and destroyed three confederate steamers.

MEMPHIS.—Gen. S. A. Hurlbut took the town by surprise and made the eyes of secession sympathizers bulge by the following order: "The Chicago Times newspaper, published in the city of Chicago, having continued for a long period of time the publication of false and calumnious articles against the President of the United States, and giving aid and comfort to the public enemy, is hereby suppressed within this command."

CHICAGO.—John Robinson and Miss Sarah Ann Donnele were married at St. Ansgarius parsonage on Feb. 10 by the Rev. E. B. Tuttle.

CHICAGO.—In the Recorder's court Phillip Strosser—a thick headed, bull necked fellow—was sentenced to thirty days in the county jail for stealing a watch, at which he seemed mighty pleased. Rosanna Brooks, a gay woman in all senses of the word, had stolen $34 from a fool she had cozened into her house and was given a year in the penitentiary.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

FEBRUARY 12, 1903.

CHICAGO.—Former Fire Chief Denis J. Swenie lies critically ill at his residence, 536 Jackson boulevard, and his physician, Dr. F. S. Hartman, has small hopes of his recovery. A few days ago Marshal Musham called on Swenie and asked him to tell the history of his life. Swenie dictated it as it will appear in the archives of the department. It shows he was born in 1834 in Glasgow, Scotland. He came to Chicago at 14 and in 1849 became hose boy in the fire department. In the fire of 1857 he took charge of the diggers and recovered eighteen bodies of the twenty-three supposed to be lost. In the great fire of 1871 his efforts saved five entire blocks near the Kinzie street bridge.

CHICAGO.—Maria Streeter, 60, wife of "Capt." George Wellington Streeter, died in a barn at 488 East Chicago avenue from injuries received in a trolley car accident. The "first lady" of the Streeter's "district" breathed her last while he was pacing his cell in the county jail.

CHICAGO.—Miss Bessie Utley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Utley, 1287 Washington boulevard, and David Oliver were married at the Utley home by the Rev. Dr. W. J. McCaughan. Another wedding was that of Miss Helen Mary Carter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. M. G. Carter of Waukegan and Thomas D. Sexton of Chicago.

FEBRUARY 12, 1918.

LONDON.—A dispatch from Amsterdam says: "There is great enthusiasm in Germany over the reported end of the state of war between the central powers and Russia. Cities everywhere are beflagged and there is much rejoicing over Trotsky's unconditional surrender."

WASHINGTON.—President Wilson addressed the joint session of congress and his speech is proclaimed from all sides as one of the most effective statements of war aims that any leader of the nations arrayed against the Germanic powers has yet made. He set forth four cardinal principles which he said the enemy must accept before general peace pourparlers can be begun.

LONDON.—Mrs. William B. Leeds, wealthy American widow, and Prince Christopher of Greece, according to the Daily Sketch, have been quietly married in Switzerland.

CHICAGO.—Miss Mary Eugenia Webster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Blanchard Webster, 6044 Stony Island avenue, will be married this afternoon to Thomas Goodman Vent.

INDUSTRIOUS FARMERS.

Mattoon, Ill., Feb. 1.—I should like to challenge Mr. T. F. Hopkins' assertion that the average farmer does not work as hard as the business man.

Mr. Hopkins is the owner of 2,000 acres of wheat land. Wheat is one of the easiest crops to raise, as all the work can be done with machinery, and after the ground is prepared and the crop in the farmer is through with it until harvest time. Let Mr. Hopkins put in 120 to 160 acres of corn, plow it day after day, from sunrise to sunset, with horses or mules, which he doesn't need or use, but which he'd have to use to plow corn, and then lose half his crop through bad weather conditions, as we have in Illinois this year. I suppose he would still say that joy riding, laziness, and shiftlessness were responsible.

We are average Illinois farmers. We have a car, but it is seldom out of the garage except for a trip to town once a week, or maybe once in two weeks. We work from morning until night, in season, and have done so most of the winter, owing to late corn. Mr. Hopkins may be right about Kansas farmers, but when he includes all farmers he is going beyond his depth.

As I understand it, Kansas has had no such devastating seasons as Illinois has experienced for the last two or three years. How many people realize that the wheat crop is virtually all killed, in this section at least? I grant you some farmers do quite a little joy riding, but not the average, and joy riding had nothing to do with killing the wheat.

Why select a farmer from the wheat belt, which has not suffered so greatly as the corn belt, for an interstate commerce hearing? Mrs. J. M. Henton.

SODA FOUNTAIN VIOLATORS.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—As I understand the law as interpreted by the courts, any place serving set-ups or anything which might be used for the purpose, is liable to padlocking for a year. Is this correct?

I ask because during the last several days I have had a cold and carry about with me some alcoholic liquor in a bottle. I have gone into practically every drug store with soda fountain attached in the loop and ordered ginger ale with cracked ice. I was in every case served without question. In the presence of employés I proceeded to pour some liquor from my bottle—it is a medicine bottle, not a flask—into my set-up and drink same.

If my information as to the law is correct, I am thinking seriously of bringing charges and having practically every downtown drug store, soda fountain, etc., padlocked for one year. If we are going to be fanatical fools, at least let us be consistent. Harris Dickson.

LABOR INJUNCTIONS.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—I have read your editorial "Labor and the Federal Courts," and also the letter of Thomas James Norton relative thereto in the Voice of the People.

The bill recently introduced in the senate, which provides courts of equity may not issue injunctions for the protection of property where an adequate relief is provided in a court of law, Mr. Norton seems to think strips the equity courts of their constitutional powers. This view is predicated upon a misconception of the functions of a court of equity. The primary function of such court seems to be to provide relief where there is no adequate remedy in a court of law. The bill will only prohibit usurpation by the equity courts of functions and powers that rightfully belong to the law courts. If this view of the bill be correct, it does not appear to divest the equity courts of any powers or functions that properly belong to them, for the law courts, in most instances, provide adequate remedies for injuries to property.

The perversion of the injunction by both federal and state courts is to be severely condemned. No doubt the most flagrant abuse of the injunction has occurred in state courts, but whether in state or federal courts, the denial to citizens of their constitutional rights should not be condoned.

The only fault I find in your editorial is that it was not inclusive enough; that is, it did not include state courts.

M. H. Bowyer.

REQUEST FOR INFORMATION.

Washington and Lincoln, whose birthdays we celebrate this month, engaged the problems of their time in such a masterly manner that to them, above all others, credit must be given for these United States, that great heritage which is ours today. The astounding characteristic to all who knew Lincoln was his simplicity.

Is it a coincidence or is it a mark of greatness that Washington, the aristocrat, and Lincoln, so humbly born, both possessed the richest of all endowments—SIMPLICITY?

MORE WINNERS IN THE TRIBUNE'S GAME OF FLAGS

Second Prize Awarded to Max H. Greenstein.

Today THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE prints the names of more than 1,443 persons who have won a share of the $10,000 offered in the paper's Patriotic Game of Flags. There are nearly 500 more prize winners to be announced, including the winner of the first prize of $1,000. The identity of this champion of champions will be revealed next Sunday together with the names of all the remaining prize winners.

In this group will be the names of the five school teachers who receive $100 each because their pupils submitted the best sets of flags received from school children.

Second Prize Winner.

Today's list is headed by the second prize winner, who gets the $500. He is Max H. Greenstein, 4956 North Spaulding avenue, Chicago. Franklin Hanson, 316 North Orange street, Havana, Ill., and Elmer F. Luckritz, 2459 Central avenue, Dubuque, Ia., both win $50. The names of 478 other prize winners also are given today. The complete list will be found on page 2, part 6, of today's paper.

Mr. Greenstein is 30 years old, married, and the father of one baby. He has been connected with the same firm of commercial artists for eight years, and his associates speak highly of him. Mr. Greenstein is a modest chap. When he saw his entry among the flags exhibited in the windows of the TRIBUNE'S Public Service office at Madison and Dearborn streets, he confided to a friend that he would be satisfied if his effort won $5.

Education Value.

While Mr. Greenstein's knowledge of art was of assistance to him in his work on the Patriotic Game of Flags, it was by no means essential. There was nothing about his entry that could not have been accomplished by a layman with no knowledge whatever of art or the printing craft.

In educational value and universal appeal the Patriotic Game of Flags was one of the most successful features ever conducted by this newspaper. English speaking people all over the world were interested, school children in the United States and Canada matching their knowledge of the flags of the world against the sons and daughters of people in foreign countries.

Among the thousands of entries submitted for the consideration of the judges were some from every state in the United States, from every province in Canada; many from Cuba, Porto Rico, and Mexico, a number from Alaska and Hawaii, and others from Germany, Holland, France, Italy, and England. The most distant point heard from was South Africa.

The educational appeal of the Patriotic Game of Flags was of particular interest to teachers. Some used each set of flags as it was issued as the basis for the study of their geography classes during the week. Pupils were shown the flags as they appeared in the newspaper, asked to assemble and name them, and then were instructed in the location, history, and industries of the nation the flag represented.

Many of the pupils used the knowledge they gained to good purpose, submitting with their entries interesting facts and figures about the countries represented by the flag. Many of the sets of flags submitted show the painstaking efforts made to gather information about each nation.

Many More Winners.

Entrants in this fascinating game whose names did not appear in the first two groups of prize winners should remember that there are still 481 winners to be announced. The names of this final group, including the $1,000 first prize winner and the winners of the five prizes of $100 each for teachers, will be printed in next SUNDAY'S TRIBUNE.

FIND POWERFUL BOMB HIDDEN IN SUPPORT OF LOOP ELEVATED TRACKS

Enough explosives to lay waste a large area were found yesterday contained in a bomb concealed in the steel lattice work of a support for the south side elevated railroad in the alley north of Harrison street, between Wabash avenue and State street.

After an examination of the bomb, Lieut. Mike Mills of the detective bureau bomb squad said that it contained six sticks of dynamite composed of 60 per cent nitro-glycerine. A fuse was attached. Large loss of life might have been occasioned, police said, had the bomb exploded and torn away a section of the elevated track.

Several theories were being investigated. One was that a fanatic might have sought to demolish the elevated structure. Another was that racketeers might have hidden the bomb there, intending to recover it after dark and perhaps destroy some nearby business house. A police guard remained all night watching the spot where the bomb was found on the outlook for suspicious characters.

The discovery of the dynamite was made by Mounted Policeman George Peterson, who rode through the alley looking for something he could use to wipe off his bridle reins. Noticing a piece of paper stuck in an opening of the pillar he pulled it out, only to find it was wrapped around a package containing the bomb.

Ralph J. Haase, Former School Principal, Is Dead

Ralph J. Haase, who was principal of the Burr school from 1871 to 1888 and principal of the Audubon school from 1888 to 1892, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jacob Aaron, 5018 North California avenue. He was 82 years old. Besides Mrs. Aaron, he is survived by another daughter, Mrs. Eloise Douglas, and five sons, Ralph Jr., Lafayette, Allan, Charles, and Hubert. Funeral services will be held in Mrs. Aaron's residence at 2 p. m. on Tuesday. Burial will be in Oakridge cemetery.

THRONGS CHEER COSGRAVE AS HE RE-ENTERS DUBLIN

President Tells of Warm Reception in U. S.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Feb. 11.—President William T. Cosgrave was enthusiastically welcomed back to Dublin tonight after his tour in the United States and Canada. Landing at Kingstown he was addressed by councilmen, in the presence of American Minister Frederick Sterling.

Crowds besieged the ship, shaking President Cosgrave's hand and congratulating him on the magnificent impression he created in America. The Kingstown, Dalkey, and Black Rock councils congratulated him on the success of his tour.

American flags and the Irish tricolor hung from all the buildings and houses on the seven mile route from Kingstown to Dublin, cheering crowds lined the way. A few posters reading "Welcome Butcher Bill!" were the only opposition note. The president's triumphal procession through Dublin was headed by nine bands and thousands of torchbearers.

From a platform erected in historic O'Connell street, Mr. Cosgrave addressed a throng of Dublin citizens, telling them of the good will of the American people toward the Irish. Friends in Chicago, New York, Philadelphia, Boston and elsewhere are determined to cement closer relationships, he said, adding that he would return to America later.

Mrs. Frank L. Smith's Brother Dies at Seattle

Mrs. Frank L. Smith, wife of the Illinois senator designate, was notified late yesterday that her brother, A. M. Ahern, had died at Seattle, Wash. Mr. Ahern was a former resident of Dwight, Ill., the Smiths' home. His was the second death in Mrs. Smith's family during recent months. Her sister, Mrs. Thomas F. O'Malley, died last November.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Rear Admiral George Collier Remey, retired, one of the oldest officers of that rank, died here last night. He was born at Burlington, Ia., 86 years ago, and entered the naval academy in 1855, serving during the civil war after graduation.

Veteran Telegrapher Dies After 67 Years at Key

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Thomas J. Bishop, telegraph operator for sixty-seven years, died at his home here today after a week's illness. Mr. Bishop, who was 87 years old, was believed here to have been the oldest active telegraph operator in the country.

URGES CO-OPERATION OF FAITHS TO TEACH RELIGION IN SCHOOLS

Denominations of all faiths can cooperate successfully with the public schools in the teaching of religion, it was asserted by J. N. Carpenter, religious director of the Brooklyn Federation of Churches, yesterday.

Mr. Carpenter in his address before the International Council of Religious Education at the Hotel Sherman, cited as example an experiment worked out in Brooklyn, N. Y., in which several faiths coöperated in order to provide religious education for public school children.

"The denominations coöperating with the public school were Presbyterian, Lutheran, Episcopalian, Jewish and Catholic," he said. "The school was organized by classes, with a paid principal, twelve volunteer teachers, three pastors, one deaconess, experienced teachers' helpers, making a total staff of twenty-five. The Jewish and Catholic leaders went into the project with the interest which can only be interpreted as definite approval and sincerity of purpose. Because it was inter-sectual, each teacher was interested because his religion was represented. The community is typical."

The expirement, Mr. Carpenter said, is one of several made in the last year. Many cities are planning to adopt the system, he said.

CLERK IS SHOT DOWN IN STORE BY TWO NEGROES

Wabash avenue police were mystified by the shooting and probable fatal wounding of Charles Weinberg, 39, of 4524 Drexel boulevard in the shoe store of Louis Wolper at 513½ East 47th street last night. After making a statement at the station that Weinberg was shot by one of two Negroes who confronted him in the store and shot without a word of warning, Wolper refused to sign it.

Weinberg worked regularly as an insurance salesman, Wolper said, and acted as an extra clerk for him on Saturdays. Weinberg's condition prevented questioning him at the Chicago hospital. The police are seeking to learn if he was held up recently and if he identified the robbers, who may have been friends of his assailants.

OBITUARY.

MRS. KATE CARSON LONG, wife of Theodore K. Long, formerly alderman of the 6th ward, died yesterday at Eau Claire, Wis., where she was visiting a sister. Heart disease was the cause of death. Mrs. Long was about 60 years old. Recently she and her husband lived at St. Petersburg, Fla. Burial will be in Rosehill cemetery here on Tuesday.

STUDENTS' AUTO IN CRASH; GIRL KILLED; 3 HURT

Miss Helen Ferry, said to be of Ottawa, Ill., was killed early this morning, and three others were severely injured when the automobile, driven by Francis P. Van Wazer, 2606 Wilson avenue, collided headon in Washington park with a machine driven by Dwight F. Myers, 7742 Ridgeland avenue. The most seriously injured, who were taken to Washington Park hospital, are Miss Mildred Wendell, Ottawa; Miss Della Weber, La Salle, Ill., and John Lucey, South Bend, Ind.

Others in Van Wazer's car were Edward Denino of South Bend, Terence O'Malley, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Miss Eleanor Headen, 6242 Greenview avenue, and LeRoy Strong of Ottawa. Their injuries were slight. According to Lieut. John T. Scott of the Wabash avenue police and Dennis Quinn and John Jilek of the South Park police, who sought to fix the blame for the crash, four persons were riding in the front seat of Van Wazer's machine. All the boys in the car, except Strong, were said to be students in the university at South Bend.

Miss Ferry's death with one other attributed to an automobile accident raised Cook county's toll since Jan. 1 to 113.

Herman Friedl, 47, of 1838 Patterson avenue, died there. His right ear was injured Feb. 1, when the automobile in which he was riding was hit by a car driven by Horace Peters, 34, of 2903 North Clark street. Four days after the accident Friedl complained of an injury to his ear. Peters faces charges of driving while intoxicated.

POLICE ARRESTING AUTOISTS CAUSE CLUB'S PROTEST

Arrest of motorists without 1928 city license tags was ordered yesterday by Capt. Frank Matchett, head of the police traffic division. The order was issued after City Collector Morris Eller reported that the number of this year's licenses taken out to date is far below the total at this time in 1927.

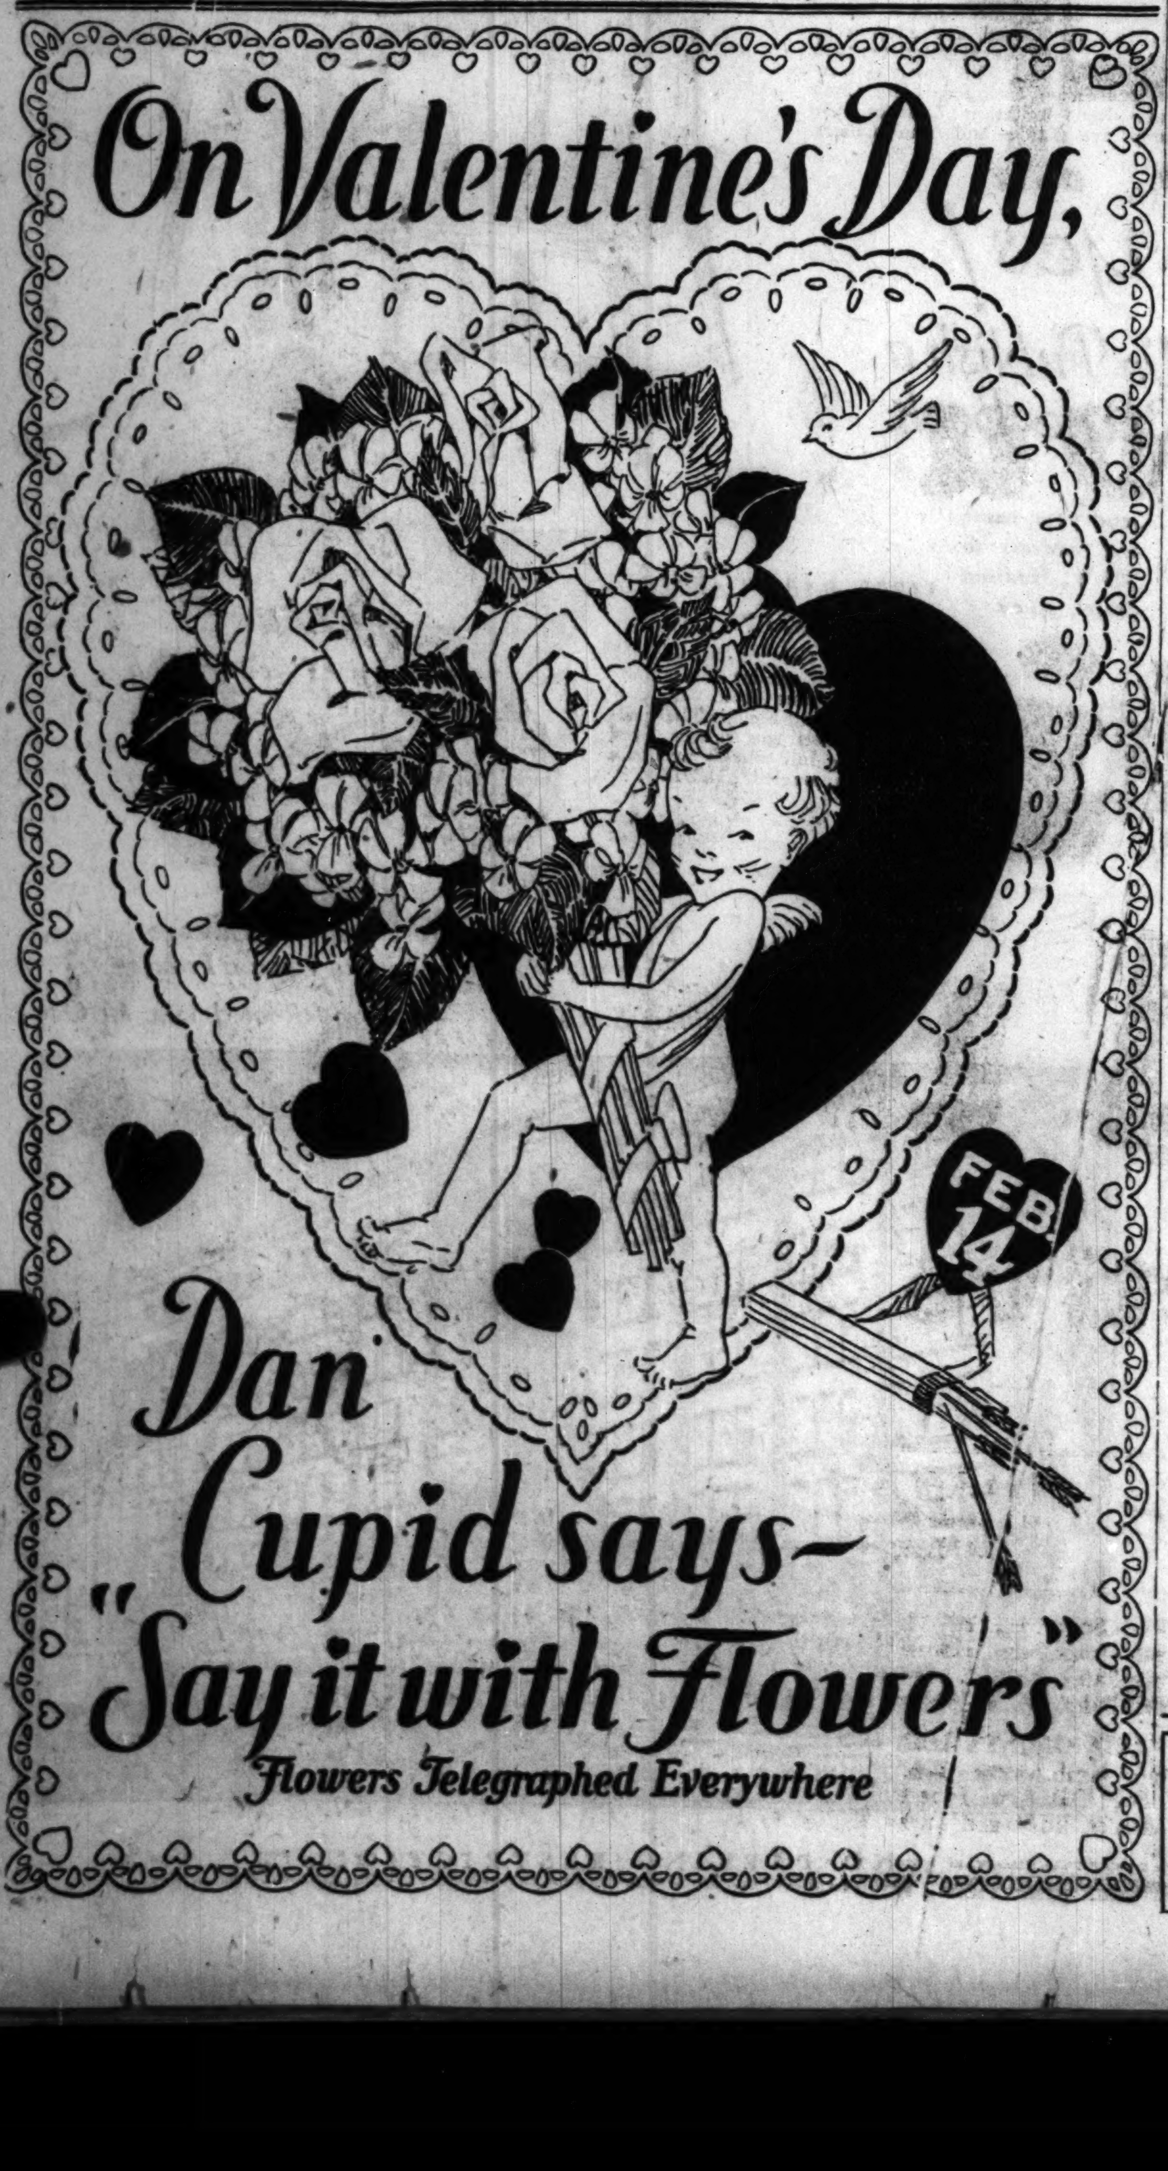
"Until this year," Mr. Braun said, "the check up on the wheel tax was not started by the police department until March 1. This unannounced drive, begun a month earlier than usual."

One death, attributed to an automobile accident in Cook county, was reported yesterday. The county's toll since Jan. 1, including that, became 112.

California Woman Giving Her Age as 120 Is Dead

Santa Cruz, Cal., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Mrs. Narcissa Arais, who claimed she was 120 years old, died today. She came here from La Paz, Mex., 80 years ago.



There Are 3 Hursen "Funeral-Homes"

Chicago has persistently demanded the unusual elegance and reasonable price which are characteristic of all "Hursen" funerals. Every part of Chicago has demanded these two things. That is why there are 3 Hursen "funeral-homes" in Chicago, one each on the North, South and West Sides of the city.

Originally there was only one Hursen "funeral-home." That was and still is now on the West Side. It was there that the Hursen revolution in funeral practice and in funeral prices began. So great was the demand for "Hursen" funerals from the start that this Hursen "funeral-home" on the West Side was compelled to serve every part of Chicago, from 'way south, from 'way north, as well as 'way west.

This is proof that appreciation of "Hursen" quality, service, and price, on a basis never before or since attempted, has been universal in this big city. The same super-elegance, and the same Hursen method are lavished on all "Hursen" funerals, whether they be large or small. They are the standard in America. They have made history. Hursen elegance at a funeral is an evidence of the depth of your own devotion. So, call Hursen, of course!

ACQUIT 3 DRYS OF KILLING OF MAN ON YACHT

Coast Guards Defended by U. S. Government.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Three coast guardsmen were acquitted today by a jury in the United States District court, where they have been on trial for the murder of Ermon H. Jones, who was shot March 14, 1927, while aboard a pleasure craft off Tahiti beach. Those acquitted were Boatswain H. P. Parry, known as "Two Gun Parry," and Guardsmen M. E. Lowery and Joseph Kaslom.

The verdict occasioned little surprise. The final summing up this morning revealed weakness in the evidence. The defendants were charged with murder. Judge William B. Sheppard in instructing the jury said the evidence did not sustain more than a manslaughter charge at the most.

Did They Warn Yacht?

At the end, the case hinged on the question of whether the coast guardsmen had given ample warning and had made their identity known to those in the Jones boat and had taken diligent precautions to make it heave to before opening fire.

The state had earlier pointed out it was handicapped in the prosecution by a dearth of witnesses. On the Jones boat there were four witnesses of the shooting. One was Jones, who was shot and later died; a second man on the boat died a few months ago; the third witness, Miss Jean McCoy, fiancée of Jones, had "absconded," so the prosecution set forth. The fourth witness on the Jones boat was John Brewer of Coral Gables, who testified those on the boat knew nothing of the shooting from the coast patrol until Jones cried "I'm shot."

Th credibility of Brewer was attacked by the government's lawyer, M. J. Morrison, assistant attorney general from Washington, who defended the case. Brewer was charged with being a professional bootlegger, known under at least two aliases, while the boat, although on pleasure bent that night, had an unsavory reputation, having twice been taken by the patrol and had been seen two or three days before tied up to a rum ship at Gun Cay, Bahama islands.

Craft Carried No Light.

The only reason ascribed by the coast guard for pursuing the Jones boat was because it was carrying no lights and it was not shown that the craft was out for anything but a pleasure trip, as Brewer said. No liquor and no firearms were found on it. But on the point as to whether the pursuing guardsmen had given full warning that they were government officials before opening fire, the prosecution had only the word of one witness, Brewer.

"If the boat were not advised by the coast guard of their identity," said the court, in instructing the jury, "and while cruising around on a Sunday evening was recklessly shot into, that would be an illegal act, manslaughter. It would be a reckless disregard for life.

"On the other hand, if the guards had a reasonable belief that the boat was violating the laws or regulations, they had a right to stop it and if they bespoke it and gave notice by a gunshot across the bows and in other ways, and if the boat disregarded it and if it became a fugitive and there was no other way to stop it except by force and by firing into the boat, they had a right to do so.

"You are to decide whether there was a reasonable exercise of prudence."

Assails Shoot-to-Kill Policy.

State Attorney N. Vernon Hawthorne assailed the shoot-to-kill policy of the enforcement forces. "Human life has become about the cheapest commodity in this country, it appears," he said.

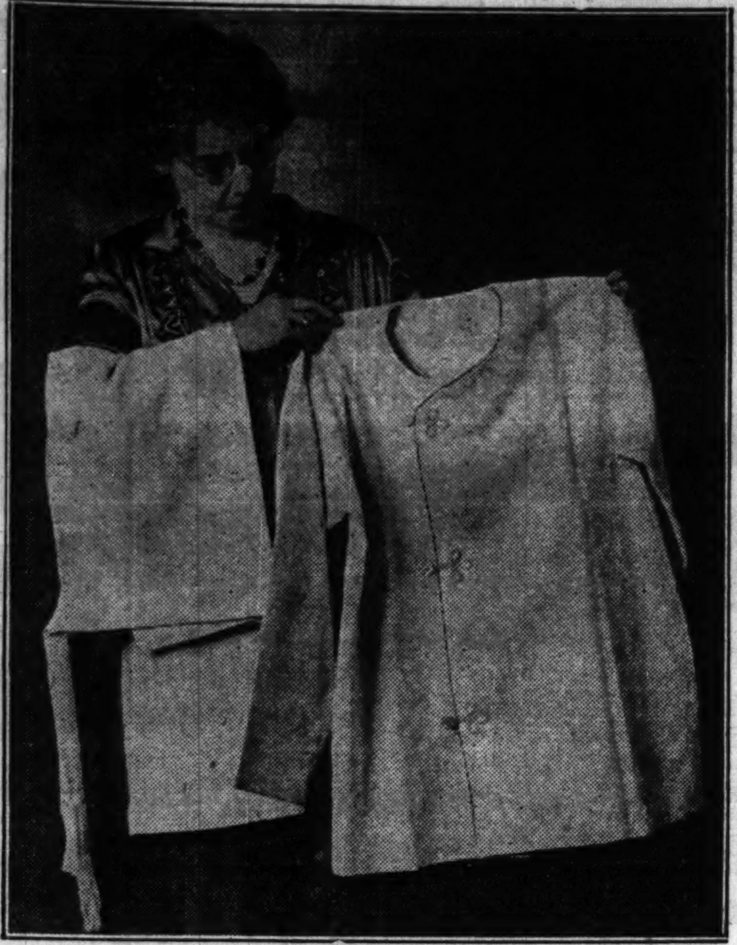
"Talk about respect for law; prohibition is on the books and its a law and I say enforce it but I say, enforce it properly and don't breed disrespect for the law and the government by improper enforcement."

"We have pirates on the seas today and it is to protect people on boats from persons running under guise of officers that the coast guard is required to identify itself when ordering a boat to stand to. Parry went out that night to get a boat and the price he paid was the life of Jones who, the testimony shows, was guilty of violating no law except running without lights.

"He took a man's life, for running without lights, before he caught up with him, although he was in a boat running at speed enough to circle the other boat. Was he reckless with human life? It is your duty to convict."

Attorney Morrison, in summing up for the defense, said the indictment was filled with "vindictiveness and venom." It charged Parry with murder, he said, "because he was too efficient in his operations against bootleggers."

"Thrift" Pajamas for Coolidge



Mrs. David Hayes, 2444 East Lawndale avenue, with "thrift" pajamas the Women's society of the Millard Avenue Presbyterian church have sent to President Coolidge as an appreciation of his economy program. The pajamas are made entirely of used flour sacks. It is not known whether the President will "choose" to wear them.

HELD AS SUSPECT IN SHOOTING.

Robert Butler, colored, 30, of 507 East 13th street, was held by the Cottage Grove police yesterday after it was learned that Charles Williams, colored, 2827 Calumet avenue, whom he is alleged to have shot, is in a critical condition at the county hospital.

U. S. STRIVING TO PROTECT AGENTS IN WINE SUIT

"No Search Warrant," Plaintiffs Charge.

The federal government, which has sought successfully in other states to throw the protection of the federal court around dry agents under state accusation in criminal cases, now is seeking in Chicago to extend that theory to civil cases.

Frank D. Richardson, former federal prohibition director, Lawrence Kilcourse, and Gustave A. Johnson, former federal dry agents, are facing a $10,000 damage suit brought by O'Razic de Stefano, who charges that they entered his home at 924 South Marshfield avenue on Dec. 10, 1920, without authority and destroyed 4,000 gallons of wine which had been his prior to the Volstead act and was intended for home consumption.

U. S. Asks for Change.

This case was set in the court of Judge Hugo Pam. Yesterday Assistant United States District Attorney James G. Cotter appeared in that state court and asked that the case be transferred to federal jurisidiction. He contended that prohibition agents are authorized to their duties under federal statutes and that the sole right to interpret the statutes is vested in the federal courts.

Attorneys for the plaintiff contended that the acts of the agents are individual acts and that they are responsible under state law. Argument on the petition to transfer the case is expected to be heard on Feb. 25, to which date the case was continued.

Are Defended Free.

This theory of the supreme rights of the federal government in cases involving dry agents has been tried out in several states, notably in Florida and Maryland.

In Florida yesterday three agents were acquitted in federal court after trial on a murder charge, after the case had been transferred on indictment in a state court. In Maryland a farmer was shot and killed on the doorstep of his home in defying prohibition agents to enter. The agents were indicted for murder in the state court and the cases promptly transferred to federal jurisdiction. The federal attorneys, in these cases, act as defense counsel for the accused.

Death Toll in Explosion in Oil Refinery Reaches 12

Everett, Mass., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The toll of dead in the explosion and fire which destroyed a section of the Beacon Oil company's refining plant here yesterday was placed definitely at 12 tonight following a check of employés. All bodies recovered from the ruins had been identified. All the employés who had been listed as missing have been accounted for.

Daughter of Wilmette's School Head Asks Divorce

Mrs. Florence Vivian Hunter of Wilmette filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday against Allison Hunter, to whom she was married on June 26, 1924. She is a daughter of James G. Wray, president of the St. Louis Blue Print and Supply company, president of the Wilmette board of education, a director of the Chicago City Missionary society and an active leader in the University of Wisconsin alumni. A decree is asked on a charge that Mr. Hunter deserted his wife on Jan. 20, 1926. They have one child, Nancy May, 2 years old.

ANALYSIS OF NEW CAR BILL SHOWS FLOP IN COUNCIL

Aldermanic Group Gives Way to Companies.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

The views of the aldermen on the sort of a "terminable" permit bill they desired have changed materially in two short months, according to the comments of members of the council subcommittee in charge of drafting transit bills.

On Dec. 9 the aldermen urged a bill which provided for amortizing the properties of the local transportation agencies. On Feb. 10 they considered a bill which made no mention of amortization. This second bill, dubbed the "flop bill" in the city hall yesterday, was prepared by First Assistant Corporation Counsel James W. Breen, who said it was on the order of the aldermen.

City's Powers Weakened.

In the "terminable" permit bill, prepared, sponsored and presented by the companies to the legislature last May, the power was conferred upon the city for the "amortization of the purchase price." This bill of the companies—which was lambasted by the aldermen, last May, June and July—appears to give more advantage to the public than the "flop bill" does, on which the aldermanic subcommittee is scheduled to take formal action tomorrow.

The bill of the companies last summer provided that a "terminable" permit "shall be terminated for misuser or nonuser, according to law." The latest aldermanic bill does not provide for terminating the proposed franchise for "misuser or nonuser" or for any other violation of the franchise within a year after the violation has been committed, and even then the franchise cannot be terminated except by finding a suitable purchaser who will pay the franchise holders in full for their property.

On Dec. 9 the aldermen turned out a bill which reserved the right to the city to say "what acts, events or occurrences shall constitute cause for the termination of said permit."

Alleged Joker Found.

The "flop bill" of Feb. 10 says that, "in addition to the option to purchase (by city), it shall be lawful to include in any such terminable permit any other terms, conditions, and provisions not in conflict or inconsistent with this act and not infringing upon the right of the state to exercise its police powers in respect to public utilities, and any court of competent jurisdiction shall have power to enforce the same by means of injunction, mandamus, or other appropriate proceedings."

A previous provision says that the companies shall have the right to operate until the city has purchased their property; and lawyers say it follows that no terms, conditions, or provisions could be inserted in the permit to terminate it, because that would be "inconsistent" with the previous clause.

In a word, it appears that the aldermen before the state legislature last summer, and as late as Dec. 9, advocated a bill giving the city the power to name the causes upon violation of which a "terminable" permit could be terminated. Now they are considering a bill which prevents the city from deciding what causes shall be sufficient for terminating a franchise.

The new Breen bill provides only one exception. If the companies "fail to substantially observe a material obligation," and such failure continues for a year, then the city may designate a purchaser. Such an outsider purchaser will be hard to find without an effective provision for amortization in the franchise, it is stated by critics of the bill.

A Legal Stone Wall.

It is reasoned further that the "other terms, conditions, and provisions" placed in the "terminable" permit cannot be cause for terminating it. They cannot relate either to service or fares because that would infringe upon the state's right to exercise its police power, as it has done in the state commerce act. These "other terms, conditions, and provisions" cannot relate to capitalization or indebtedness, because those two are under the jurisdiction of the state commerce commission.

In their bill of Dec. 9 the aldermen asked enabling legislation conferring power upon them to deal with these and like matters, but are now considering a bill which will prevent them passing upon such matters in the proposed "terminable" permit.

The explanation of the change in front is that the aldermen stand for another bill creating a local utility commission which shall take over the powers of the state commerce commission in so far as they pertain to local transportation. But, it is pointed out these aldermen also stood for that same local transportation commission act last year and they still asked that the right be reserved to them of naming the causes for terminating a "terminable permit" in the bill creating that franchise devise. They also followed that same course on Dec. 9. Now the policy under consideration is different.

In the "terminable" permit bill before the legislature the aldermen insisted upon inserting a provision that nothing in it should prevent the city from granting a fixed term franchise for not more than 40 years. At the meeting last Friday Ald. McKinlay suggested such an amendment to the bill under discussion. There was much talk against it. It was argued that such a clause would clutter up the "terminable" permit bill. But just such a clause was placed in the bill at Springfield last summer at the suggestion of the aldermen.

There are other comparisons which could be made; but sufficient have been related to indicate that the aldermen have changed their views between Dec. 9 and Feb. 10.

OWNERS OF TWO TAXI DANCING SCHOOLS WILL FACE COURT THIS WEEK

Owners of two so-called taxi dancing academies, where men patrons pay young lady instructors 10 cents for each dance, will face Municipal Judge Holmes at 11 a. m. Wednesday on charges of operating without licenses.

The two places, the Chicago Dancing academy, 400 South State street, owned by Thomas Korbos, and the State-Congress Dancing academy, 525 South State street, owned by George Gary, were raided Friday night by a squad of investigators from the office of City Prosecutor Frank Peska. Neither of the proprietors could produce city licenses.

BRITISH BAR U. S. ACTRESS; WAR ON FOREIGN STARS?

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 11.—War on foreign actors employed on the London stage is seen in the ministry of labor's refusal to permit Miss Alden Gay, an American, to act in a new comedy, "Married Bachelors," opening Monday night. No reason is given. The management must find a British substitute.

"The refusal is incomprehensible," the theater manager said. "Miss Gay played a few months ago, and there was no trouble then. At the time I did not know she was American. When I discovered it I immediately notified the ministry, requesting the usual permit for the new rôle, stating that Miss Gay was not to be paid a salary, but only expenses the same as other actresses in our theater.

"Other Americans are playing in London. I cannot understand the barring of Miss Gay."

Bandit Holds Up Hammond Bank; Escapes with $800

More than $800 in silver was taken from the Maywood Savings and Trust bank of Hammond, Ind., yesterday by a bandit who covered Paul Siegrist, the assistant cashier, with a gun. The bandit was frightened away before he could secure more loot.

NO LONGER WILL ERIE BARGE TIE UP LOOP TRAFFIC

Road Yields to Protests on Bridge Delays.

Busy crowds, hurrying to and from the loop across the Chicago river, soon will no longer be compelled to wait while bridges swing open to allow a barge loaded with a single box car to crawl through.

Officials of the Erie railroad announced yesterday that their barge service to North Pier terminal warehouses is to be discontinued "out of respect for public opinion created and fostered by THE TRIBUNE." For the last four years the Erie freight car barge, once a day, has tooted its way up and down the river, requiring the opening of five bridges twice on each trip.

Attorney Announces Reform.

"Hereafter you will never be able to look out of the windows of your luxurious building and see the link bridge raised while a carload of chewing gum is being taken over to the warehouse," Mitchell D. Follansbee, attorney for the railroad, notified THE TRIBUNE.

"This policy will result in a loss in daily traffic of a considerable amount, possibly more than you think, but this is the kind of a sacrifice that a forward looking carrier must make from time to time to gain the favor of the public and influential big shippers. You may say this is a slow reform, but permanent reforms, I think, you will agree, are not usually accomplished immediately."

Calculating each bridge opening at an average of 3½ minutes, removal of the Erie service will save a loss in street traffic time of 35 minutes a day or 212 hours annually, it was pointed out.

Abandonment of the barge trips is the second important step in the last two years taken toward fixed bridges over the river. In 1926 all upstream docks of lake passenger vessels were removed to Navy pier, eliminating 12,394 bridge openings a year with a consequent delay of 723 hours in street traffic.

Suspect Denies Bombing, but Admits Hat Is His

A hat, which was lost by one of two men seen running from the scene of an explosion in a building at 1022 West 14th street on Friday night, was claimed yesterday by William Backer, 1323 West 13th street, agen for the blasted building. Backer, who had been arrested on an arson warrant obtained by Scott M. Hogan, city fire attorney, denied knowledge of the explosion. Witnesses who saw the pair running followed them to Backer's home.

FLAMING YOUTH KILLS FOE, SELF IN DEATH PACT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 11.—All the psychoanalytical and educational wizards of Germany are assembled in a courtroom in Berlin to solve the mystery of the revolution of growing youth, which is baffling the present age. They are dissecting the emotions, thoughts, and background of 16 year old Hildegard Scheller, and 19 year old Paul Krantz, who appear in court as participants in a love pact and death pact in which one boy was killed and another committed suicide.

The Scheller girl, though still going to school, was the mistress of the high school boy Krantz, and of Prentice Cook Stephen. Her brother, Guenther, hated young Stephan because he denounced the brother's perversions to Herr Scheller, the father.

In the absence of his parents, Guenther organized an orgy, with Hildegard, a girl friend, and Krantz. Toward morning Guenther found out Stephan was hiding in the house. He signed a death pact with Krantz, who was to kill Hildegard, then commit suicide, while he, Guenther, was to kill Stephan, then commit suicide. Guenther carried out his part of the pact, but Krantz could not shoot the girl.

Krantz now is accused of originating the death pact. Hildegard is a witness. Germany is studying the exceptional mentality of these adolescents to understand the generation which already has revolutionized age-old conventions.

POLICE SLAYER OF BANDIT WINS TRIBUNE AWARD

Lieut. Andrew Barry Is Hero of January.

Quick and deadly use of his gun in frustrating holdup wins for Lieut. Andrew B. Barry of the Des Plaines street police station THE TRIBUNE'S $100 award for the most outstanding act of bravery in the police and fire departments for January.

Lieut. Barry, in a brief but vicious revolver battle, shot and killed one of three bandits trapped in an attempted robbery at 18th street and Western avenue on Jan. 8. Although a fire rescue and three other acts of bravery by policemen during the month made the judging close, it is considered that Lieut. Barry's demonstration of nerve in several ways, outranked the rest. He knew in advance that his life was in danger; he acted intelligently and swiftly; and he got his man.

Veteran on Force.

Lieut. Barry is 36 years old and has been in the police department twelve years, in that time having been promoted from patrolman to lieutenant. He is married, has a small son, and lives at 7808 Emerald avenue.

At the time of the shooting Lieut. Barry was assigned to the Wabash avenue station. About 11 p. m. on Jan. 8 the station received a tip that a holdup was expected near the C., B. & Q. 18th street suburban station, and Barry, with Policemen John Adair and Michael Toohey, 38th district, and Frank Gavin, 35th district, were dispatched to the place to thwart it. A few minutes after they hid themselves behind a nearby gate three gunmen accosted Emil Holmquist, a commuter to La Grange, who stepped off a street car to transfer to a train.

Chief's Story of Battle.

"As Holmquist raised his hands Lieut. Barry interfered, shouting for the holdup men to surrender. Instead, one of them, Valentine Sliwa, wheeled toward him, pistol in hand. Barry fired one shot at him, but, meanwhile, the second man, using Holmquist as a shield, aimed and fired at Barry point blank.

"Rushing toward them Barry flung Holmquist to one side. In his endeavor to escape Sliwa got in the line of fire and was wounded by one of the officer's bullets. The second man, John Bonk, then fired again and Barry, at twenty paces, shot him dead. The other officers pursued and fired at a third bandit, chauffeur for the group, who left his machine and escaped."

Praise from O'Connor.

The other policemen receiving honorable mention in this month's award are Patrolmen Patrick H. Devine and Michael Shannon, 12th district; Patrolmen Walter L. McGloon and Harry E. Klick, 27th district; Patrolman Jeremiah Mahoney, 32d district, and the members of bureau squad 18-A, commanded by Sergt. James Devereaux.

Devine and Shannon displayed an unusual combination of quick thinking and courage in shooting it out with a crazed man at the Pullman shops, 114th and Langley avenue, Jan. 14, and afterward quieting a mob of employés who threatened to kill them. Devine, according to Capt. John Prendergast, his commanding officer, showed "remarkable presence of mind" in pacifying the crowd by an extemporaneous speech, explaining the situation.

Catches Robber Single Handed.

McGloon and Klick killed a holdup man Jan. 20 in a running fight, after he had robbed a store at 413 South Western avenue, while Mahoney, single handed, apprehended two alleged robbers at 1622 Spaulding avenue on Jan. 4, after exchanging shots with one of them.

Sergt. Devereaux's squad cleared up a murder and forty robberies by capturing three members of a gang, after a thrilling automobile chase on West Roosevelt road, Jan. 27. Clinging to the side of their car while moving at top speed, the squad members returned the gangsters' fire, wounding two of them. Their capture, Capt. John E. Ptacek declared, "cleaned up one of the worst gangs operating in Chicago for years."

Answering an alarm from 6348 Drexel avenue at midnight on Jan. 22, Capt. Cannaven's squad discovered a three story building in flames with occupants of the upper floors cut off from escape. Four persons were carried down ladders, while a fifth man, James Miller, 60 years old, appeared at a third story window apparently ready to jump out. Cannaven with Cronin's assistance flung up a 26 foot ladder which missed three feet of reaching the window ledge. Mounting the captain's shoulders, Cronin brought the man down on his own shoulder.

"It did not look possible to me that such a feat could be performed," said Division Marshal James Costin in his report, "so I took the two men back to the place and had them repeat the performance. They did it and I recommend them for honorable mention."

RAIN PROTESTS ON CONGRESS TO BLOCK BIG NAVY

Anti-War Society Opens Nation-Wide Drive.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Floods of protests against the eight hundred million dollar navy strengthening bill, most of them resulting from the activities of Pacifist propaganda organizations in Washington, are rolling into congress as the house naval affairs committee prepares to submit its final report.

Reports now indicate that the naval bill calling for the building of 74 ships in the next eight years will be revamped and a measure substituted which will provide for only half that number of ships.

While the bill now provides 25 cruisers, 35 submarines, 9 destroyer leaders and 5 aircraft carriers, even the so-called "big navy" men predict most of the submarines, two or three of the carriers, some of the destroyer leaders and 10 of the cruisers will be eliminated from that part of the bill which will call for a time limit on the completion of vessels. Some predictions were that the bill would be cut to something like $500,000,000.

For Prevention of War.

An appeal given widespread publicity by Frederick J. Libby, executive secretary of the national council for prevention of war, furnishes an illustration of the fight now being made by Washington propaganda organizations to defeat the bill. The Libby message, which went to the more than 50 church and reform organizations cooperating and participating with the council, urges every member to telegraph his or her congressman in opposition to naval building.

"You urge your congressman by telegram to defeat this bill," reads the Libby message. "Will you get up emergency protest meetings? Will you crusade against this evil program? Send to us for material."

That this program is bearing fruit is evidenced by the flood of telegrams descending on Chairman Butler [Rep., Pa.], of the naval committee.

All Voice Opposition.

"In all my experience in congress covering a period of 32 years, during which I have had continuous service on the naval committee," said Chairman Butler, "I never have known such widespread protest to be registered against any measure under consideration or about to be considered. These letters and telegrams, all voicing opposition to the bill we now have before us, come from all over the United States."

"It looks to me as if there is a well organized movement against expansion of the navy among the churches," said Representative Britten [Rep., Ill.]. "Many of the letters in protest are written by women. Many of them are going to the White House. I am inclined to believe that they will have the effect of at least persuading congress to hold the appropriations way below the amount named in Secretary Wilbur's plan."

COOLIDGE DISCUSSES FLOOD CONTROL WITH ENGINEERS, SENATORS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Methods of solving the flood control problem in a way that will result in early legislation was the topic discussed at a White House breakfast this morning. The guests included Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Secretary of War Davis, Maj. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of army engineers; Senator Robinson [Dem., Ark.], minority leader in the senate; Senator Harrison [Dem., Miss.], and Senator Ransdell [Dem., La.].

Gathered around the White House table were the three men having most to do with the formulation of the President's flood control program and three of the Democratic leaders most closely connected with the flood disaster area. No announcement was made regarding the conference, but it is understood the principal point discussed was the question of whether local residents should be compelled to pay 20 per cent of the flood control construction bill.

RIVER PROJECT NEEDS ONLY O. K. OF STATE BOARD

Expect Approval Soon, Then Digging Starts.

Approval by the Illinois commerce commission of negotiations between the city and the railroads appeared yesterday as the final piece of official tape to be cut before contracts are awarded for the actual work of straightening the south branch of the Chicago river.

Representatives of all the railroads involved, called into conference by Commissioner of Public Works Richard W. Wolfe, announced that their petitions will be ready to be filed with that of the city before the commission at its meeting tomorrow.

"As soon as the commission O. K.'s the contract agreements, $4,000,000 worth of trustee certificates will be issued, giving us the cash to proceed," Mr. Wolfe said. "Digging of the new channel ought to start in two weeks and the whole project be finished before the end of 1928."

Early Finish Predicted.

Present at yesterday's conference, in addition to the railway men, were officials of the surface lines and Chicago plan commission, Ald. E. J. Kaindl, chairman of the council railway terminals committee; Edward J. Noonan, the committee's engineer; City Engineer Loren D. Gayton, and Assistant Corporation Counsel Joseph Savage. All of them agreed that the prospect of fulfilling Mr. Wolfe's time schedule is highly optimistic.

No mention was made at the conference of bids for the construction contract, which occasioned considerable comment recently with the disclosure that the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company, thought to have the inside track, was underbid $991,951 by the Construction Materials company.

No "String" On Deal.

"I have no idea yet who will get the award," Commissioner Wolfe asserted. "It depends on which firm can do the job right and cheapest." Ald. Kaindl explained that there is no council "string" on the river straightening appropriation and that expenditure of the money will be at Mr. Wolfe's discretion.

Official tabulation of the bids, handed out by the commissioner, showed totals approximately the same as the unofficial figures printed in THE TRIBUNE Thursday. They are:

Construction Materials Co.	$3,005,390
Great Lakes Dredge and Dock Co.	3,997,350
Fitzsimmons & Connel D. & D. Co.	4,082,320
Dunbar & Sullivan Dredging Co.	4,377,074

The Construction Materials company offered a better price than the Great Lakes company on 10 of the 14 phases of the project and on 6 out of 11 types of material listed at prices contingent upon the amount used. For excavation its bid was $323,000 below the Great Lakes concern and for the pile dock wall $343,700 below. The comparative bids were:

	Gt. Lakes Co.	Con. M. Co.
Excavation [950,000 cu. yds.]	$ 940,500	$ 617,500
Removal ledge rock [1,000 cu. yds.]	25,000	20,000
Removal concrete and masonry [2,000 cu. yds.]	24,000	44,800
Pile dock wall [7,000 ft.]	1,323,700	980,000
Treatment of same [440 ft.]	16,940	59,400
Pile crib dock wall [1,190 ft.]	337,960	250,420
Timber crib dock wall [440 ft.]	173,800	139,040
General fill [900,000 cu. yds.]	841,500	675,000
Top fill [100,000 cu. yds.]	90,000	90,000
Concrete sewer, 3 ft. [1,200 ft.]	60,000	38,160
Concrete sewer, 4 ft. [170 ft.]	9,350	8,024
Concrete sewer, 8 ft. [800 ft.]	152,000	72,000
Tile sewer, 1 ft. [100 ft.]	500	855
Concrete manholes [12], each	2,100	1,200
Totals	$4,082,320	$3,005,390

The bids, Mr. Wolfe said, were opened at 11 a. m. last Monday, but were not made public until yesterday, due to the time required to tabulate them.

U. S. TIGHTENS BAR ON HANDLING OF SOVIET BONDS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—The state department ban on the participation of banks in the sale of soviet bonds in this country has been clamped down so tightly that financial institutions are not now accorded permission even to clip coupons for American investors in these securities.

Responding to an inquiry by a New York bank, which had arranged to facilitate the marketing of the soviet $30,000,000 railroad issues, department officials recently stated that it objected to the bank's participation in any way in the flotation of the loan.

According to department officials, the Chase National bank of New York, which had arranged for the payment of interest and principal on part of the proposed railroad loan in American dollars, has now agreed to have nothing to do with the securities. The bonds are still being sold by it, but no steps against this practice are contemplated, it is said.

Russian Peasant Types.

We stopped at Smolensk and a boy came through the train selling newspapers. He had a round face and red cheeks and chubby hands. He wore big overshoes and a warm but patched coat. The peasant women's skirts came right down to their ankles. They wore long coats, fitted at the waist and flaring over the hips like Godey's Ladies' Book advertised in 1896. Big boots, and the shawls they wore over their heads were other features of the women's dress.

But whenever we passed a town, I could see that the flapper movement has penetrated even Russia, as there were slim little girls with cloche felt hats pulled down to protect their ears, and long legs in flesh colored woolen stockings. Their chic fur-edged doe-colored overshoes had the new contraption for closing them which slides up and down. Warm little coats with big collars hid their faces but stopped just above the knees, as did the girls' skirts.

A Russian Luncheon.

The men were mostly in uniform, but whether it meant they were in active service or just wearing out old uniforms the czar handed them when they went to war in 1914 I couldn't make out. Only a few had guns, though, and most of them seemed to be sporting rifles, and some more had revolvers strapped to their hips.

For luncheon in the dining car we had boiled fish with some sauce and mushrooms, then half a partridge and some jelly with cherries in it for dessert. It's the first time I had ever eaten jelly in Europe. The coffee was weak but if it had been stronger the chicory taste would have been worse. Some wines were served with Russian labels, and all I could tell about them was they were red or white, and every one had a little drink of vodka, ice cold and tasteless, almost like charged water. A ruble and a half, about 75 cents, for lunch, and they did take the 10 per cent tip I left for that.

All the way across Russia for the four or five hundred miles I didn't see a single auto, nor a road indicating any motors had used it. For that matter, I saw only two or three in the waking hours of crossing Poland the day before.

There were no crowds around the railway stations such as one sees in some of the Bulgarian or Turkish towns where a through train is seen maybe twice a week.

The houses and cars have double windows. Big Russian stoves heat the indoors everywhere. These keep the nation busy all winter cutting and hauling wood or digging frozen coal from the dumps.

TROTZKY HAILED AS MILLIONAIRE IN TOWN OF EXILE

Moscow, Feb. 11.—(AP)—The arrival of Leon Trotzky, former soviet leader, at his place of exile in a special car encumbered with seventy pieces of baggage caused the natives to suppose that he was an American millionaire, says the correspondent of the official Tass agency.

M. Trotzky and his family traveled in "lordly comfort" to Frunze, where his exile is to be spent. Besides his baggage, he took a hunting dog and considerable hunting equipment.

[At the time of his exile with other opposition leaders of soviet Russia, it was said Trotsky had been given his choice of several places of exile, including some far in Russian Central Asia. Frunze was not named at that time. It does not appear in available atlases.]

COURT REFUSES TO LIFT BAN ON PARKING IN LOOP

Test Will Be Extended to April 20.

The parking ban in the downtown district is apparently to be given an extended test. Judge Oscar Hebel declined yesterday to interfere.

JUDGE OSCAR HEBEL.

The court's action was a refusal to issue a temporary injunction restraining the enforcement of the ordinance, passed Dec. 14 and made effective on Jan. 10. Sundry business interests assert that the ban on parking is detrimental to business and others claim that it has relieved traffic congestion and has not materially affected business. These views were expressed in two public hearings on the effect of the ordinance held by the council traffic committee on Jan. 20 and 28.

Samuel Pancoe, wholesale stationer on Wells street, sought a temporary injunction, on legal grounds, against the enforcement of the ordinance. Other interests joined him in his fight and the cartage exchange, surface lines and the aldermanic committee rushed to the aid of Assistant Corporation Counsels John G. Drennan and E. C. Higgins in defending the ordinance.

Interprets Word "Stand."

The opponents of the measure charge the ordinance is "unreasonable, prohibitory, vexatious, unequal and oppressive" and that the city exceeded its authority in passing it. The ordinance prohibits a vehicle from "standing" in the prohibited territory and around the word "stand" the lawyers argued for two days.

"As the court understands it, the words, 'to stand' means to occupy or hold a place or location, and that the stopping of a vehicle by the driver for the accommodation of himself or passengers in stepping out of or into a vehicle, or for the purpose of delivery of goods or merchandise from such vehicle, is not a violation of the ordinance."

The court said that the contention of the complainants that to even stop a vehicle is a violation of the ordinance, "is rather a strained construction."

Three Months' Test.

No evidence was presented in the case so Judge Hebel's opinion does not decide whether the ordinance is an aid or a hindrance to the city. The attorneys for the complainant, who only asked for a temporary injunction, asked leave to amend their petition so that they may ask for a permanent injunction. They requested and received a week in which to file an amended bill. After that evidence will be taken on whether the parking ban is an injury to downtown business.

In the arguments on the law, attorneys for the objectors to the ordinance said that the taking of testimony would require 60 days or more, which was not disputed by proponents of the ordinance. This would extend the case to about April 20, which would give the ordinance a test of more than three months. Its advocates have said that such a period is probably sufficient to determine definitely whether the ban should remain in effect.

MOVIE ACTRESS IS INJURED

Leading Man Hurt

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood, Cal., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Bebe Daniels and her motion picture leading man, James Hall, were seriously injured in an accident during the filming of scenes on a Pasadena street this afternoon.

Hall was taken to Pasadena Emergency hospital, where it was found he had suffered fractured left ribs. Miss Daniels suffered a badly wrenched back and possibly internal injuries. From Pasadena hospital they were conveyed to Hollywood hospital.

The actress and actor were being driven along Arroyo boulevard in an imitation Pullman compartment which had been built onto a truck. The truck was driven below a tree with an outstretching limb, which swept the structure off the vehicle and buried Bebe and Hall in a mass of wreckage in the street.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 11.—A fierce hurricane swept Great Britain last night and today, attaining the phenomenal velocity of 104 miles an hour in Liverpool and fifty-nine miles an hour in the London area. Seven deaths are reported and there have been more casualties and much damage in all parts of the island.

The gale tore off the side of a brick house near London, shattered a brick wall, burying two children, who now are in a hospital, and brought down eight tons of masonry in a house at Tottenham.

A boy was killed in Gloucester and a man and his wife were seriously injured in Birmingham by a falling roof.

Several vessels are reported in distress in the channel. Two ships were wrecked. The crews were rescued.

Reports from Germany said a five ton crane in the Hamborn Rhine harbor was hurled into the Rhine by a hurricane, endangering navigation. Cyclones swept the Dutch province of Limberg and there are severe storms along the Dutch coast.

LENINGRAD, Russia, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Fear is felt for 400 fishermen who were carried out to sea last night on an ice block during a heavy storm that swept the Finnish bay.

Child's Head Caught in Bed Bars; Neck Broken

CITY MOTORISTS BEGIN TO WONDER WHERE TAXES GO

Use Car Tracks Because Streets Are Rough.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

The question of the propriety of motor traffic using the center pavements on city streets, which were built at the expense of street car riders primarily for their convenience as such, has been raised by officials of the surface lines.

Quite as important, it would seem, is the question born of that situation, which concerns the status of the automobile user.

The question, briefly, is: Why is it impossible to provide thoroughfares for motor traffic in the city from the numerous special taxes on Chicago motorists—the license fee, the wheel tax and the gasoline tax? Nearly 40 per cent of the automobiles of the state register from Chicago and its immediate suburbs. In the Chicago area it is estimated that automobiles pay in fees and licenses about $14,000,000 a year. This is in addition to all property taxes used for street improvement. From these fees and special taxes apparently only a minute portion finds its way into Chicago street improvement.

Motorists Pay and Pay and Pay.

There are approximately 500 miles of 15 foot center pavement on main arteries of the city, all of which are being paid for by street car riders at 7 cents a ride. The street car patrons, through the surface lines administration, have come into possession of that for which they have been paying.

The motorists of the city, however, have been paying and paying and paying, but as yet have received little for their outlays in the city of Chicago.

Other taxing bodies have provided 79.9 miles of continuous boulevards, practical for motor traffic. These have been improved by the park systems. The city itself has improved and protected a few miles of city boulevards. These lack the quality of continuity, however.

Paving Plentiful Outside City.

Outside the city things are different. In the county, surrounding Chicago, are 585 miles of concrete roads, and there soon will be nearly 1,000 miles. In the state outside Cook county there are some 5,460 miles of concrete highways, and 1,200 more miles are to be added this year.

The answer to the question regarding the Chicago motorists' facilities seems to be that the highways they are paying for are out in the country and down in the state.

It is not difficult to concede to the surface lines administration that there is fairness in their objection to the overwhelming use of street car paving by motor traffic. Information made public by the trolley administration appears to be good ground for its objections.

Surface Lines State Case.

"There is constant danger to street car passengers, either entering or alighting from cars, from automobiles which pursue and pass moving or standing cars," the Surface lines' statement declares.

"The surface cars lose on an average of nine hours a day because of stops caused by the breaking down of vehicles on the center pavements.

"The speed of street cars is materially reduced because of the heavy motor traffic which brings about congestion at intersections by developing long lines of solid traffic that must move alternately across corners.

"The street car riders have expended $32,000,000 for the center pavements and their maintenance. Rightfully, the street car users should reap the benefits that such pavements give.

"If the city maintained the pavements at the sides of the street car centers in as good condition as the centers are maintained much of the danger, delay, and inconvenience would be done away with."

Where the City Fails.

In other words, the city fails to provide good pavements for its motor traffic and the motorists are forced to use the paved street car tracks to enable them to travel about the city.

Meanwhile, it is pointed out, the automobile owners are subjected to numerous fees and licenses, the proceeds of which are largely spent for road building and maintenance downstate, out in the county and in other places than the city itself, which makes it necessary for them to use the pavements paid for by the street car riders.

The surface lines point out that their obligation to that part of the public which uses their equipment includes the elimination of personal danger, traffic congestions which cause delays, and accidents which result from traffic congestion when the car tracks are heavily invaded by motor vehicles.

Surveys Show Traffic Load.

According to surveys made by the company, the surface lines are bearing 75 per cent of the city's traffic load. The average number of rides per day is four and one-half million. The figures give the elevated roads 20 per cent of the traffic load and private motor cars and buses 5 per cent.

"It is only fair," the surface lines state, "that 75 per cent of the traffic burden of Chicago should be protected from the dangers, delays and inconveniences heaped on it by about 5 per cent which travels by motor. Aside from the fact that the street car riders have paid for the pavement, there is a distinct preferential in traffic regulation that rightly belongs to a preponderance of the traffic units."

An article in yesterday's TRIBUNE concerning the use of street car pavements by motor traffic included what purported to be an interview with Maj. George A. Quinlan, superintendent of county highways. Maj. Quinlan's view on the subject was sought, in the preparation of the article, but he explicitly declined to express an opinion. Through a combination of misunderstandings the quotation was printed as being the view of Maj. Quinlan, which was wholly erroneous.

DOG DIES TWICE; SAVANT BRINGS IT BACK TO LIFE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, Russia, Feb. 11.—"The dead can be brought back to life and science eventually will keep people alive until old age claims them," Prof. F. A. Andreyef, a member of the Moscow university, said in a lecture in the Polytechnic museum today.

"Ban death by disease as unnatural and humans will succumb only to extreme age," he said. Skin, blood, and tissues in all parts of the body constantly are dying, being eliminated and replaced by healthy material. Technically, man is dying partially, continually. We can restore life to various portions of the anatomy.

"I revived the head of a decapitated dog so it turned its eyes to its master when he called it by name, and I have made a human heart beat again. A month after death I cut off fingers and revived them into living digits. I revived a dog that expired from diphtheria, then poisoned the canine and revived him again. I injected a solution of bloodmaking salts and adrenalin in the jugular vein and the heart recommenced beating.

"Death is a gradual process, the heart and lungs ceasing first, but this does not prove complete demise. Real death comes only when all the heart cells are completely dead. It is possible to revive persons if no serious changes of organism result from disease. We revive still borns by injecting adrenalin."

British Explorer Thrills Children with His Stories

Stories and motion pictures of Africa and its strange animals thrilled several hundred children at the James Simpson theater in the Kjeld museum yesterday gathered to hear Maj. A. Radcliffe Dugmore, noted British explorer. Starring in the 6,000 foot film was a rare species of giraffe that can see a great distance and who dine on "thorns like cats' claws with the same apparent enjoyment that we take in strawberries and cream."

Biggest January in Studebaker history

See these four great Studebaker lines of fine cars and you will understand why

ACTUAL retail deliveries of Studebaker dealers for January, 1928, exceeded those of January, 1927, by 58 per cent. They were the largest in the history of the Corporation for that month, which so often sounds the sales keynote for the year.

The reason back of this sales record is the championship performance of Studebaker motor cars—demonstrated by a succession of spectacular feats of endurance and speed—culminating in Studebaker's unique position of holding all the highest endurance and speed records for fully equipped stock cars, regardless of power or price.

See the four great lines of Studebaker cars which are sweeping the country today. But do more than simply see them on the showroom floor—ride in them and drive them! Then you will know that they embody the most advanced engineering of 1928 combined with Studebaker's 76-year-old traditions of quality.

BULLETIN.

TIMMINS, Ont., Feb. 11.—(U. P.)—Relief parties had rescued fifteen imprisoned miners from the burning Hollinger mine tonight. They also discovered additional bodies, bringing the official death list to eleven. Officials estimated that thirty-four men were still imprisoned in the lower levels.

TIMMINS, Ont., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Almost two score miners were still trapped in the depths of the Great Hollinger gold mine tonight, the second night since fire imprisoned them, but hope ran high among their praying families at the shafthead. For, during the day, a dozen men were brought from the mine alive and only six were positively known to be dead.

As the rescued men were brought up and their wives and children embraced them, hope was reborn in the hearts of the relatives of the other trapped men that they too might survive.

The fire started yesterday at the 550 foot level in a rubbish heap. Smoke and fumes drifted down the shafts as far as the 1,800 foot level and while most of the large day shift of miners reached the surface, more than fifty were cut off from all escape.

Rescue Train Arrives.

All efforts at rescue were futile until the arrival of a special train from Toronto today with fire fighting equipment and oxygen respirators. A United States mine car was also on the way from Pittsburgh and was expected to arrive either tonight or in the morning. Rescue parties wearing respirators descended into the mine and came back to report that life still existed. It was found that in one place, then inaccessible to the rescuers, a group of men had broken an air line and by gathering about it had been able to keep alive through the night and day.

All the trapped men were believed to be in total darkness, since they had only eight hours of carbide in their head lamps when they went down.

His Signal Saves Six Others.

Hope of getting any of the imprisoned miners out alive had almost died when one bell was heard sounded weakly at shaft No. 11. The cage was immediately lowered and at the bottom was found George Zolob, who had risked his life to crawl to the shaft through dense fumes. He told the rescuers where six of his comrades were awaiting the outcome of his attempt and all were saved.

As the rescued men were brought to the surface there were scenes of wild emotion. Wives threw their arms about the husbands whom they had feared were dead and their children shouted with joy. Zolob was given a stirring reception when his comrades gave him full credit for saving all their lives.

Later five more men were brought up alive from another part of the mine. Rescue work was speeded up.

U. S. Rushes Aid to Mine.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Extraordinary efforts by the American government and by American and Canadian railroads are being made to help save the lives of men trapped in the Hollinger mine at Timmins, Ont.

BRITONS SEEKING PAYMENT OF OLD CARPETBAGBONDS

Hold U. S. Responsible for Repudiation.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Senators and represenatives are being deluged with appeals from British subjects for action by congress authorizing the federal government to assume and pay the repudiated debts of the southern states contracted chiefly in reconstruction days following the civil war.

Ten southern states repudiated bond issues aggregating $155,525,856. With interest, the total repudiated debt now exceeds $600,000,000.

A large portion of these bonds are held by Britishers whose fathers and grandfathers purchased them as gilt-edged American securities. The present owners have banded themselves together as the council of foreign bondholders, which is directing the campaign.

The British appeals stress the argument that it is the duty of the United States government to pay the debts repudiated by individuals, particularly because the eleventh amendment to the American constitution prevents an individual, whether a citizen or a foreigner, from suing a state for recovery.

Credit on War Debt.

The British bond holders are also pressing their own government to take up the matter with Washington officially with a view to seeking an arrangement whereby the amount of the repudiated debts with interest that is due British subjects would be credited on the payment of Great Britain's war debt to the United States, the British government thereafter to settle with the British security owners.

Louisiana	$27,780,924
North Carolina	26,270,534
Alabama	20,338,330
Virginia	18,045,613
South Carolina	17,607,452
Tennessee	16,177,584
Arkansas	12,473,646
Georgia	9,863,500
Florida	4,120,911
Mississippi	2,847,362

Every senator and congressman has received a letter from Kinnear & Falconer, solicitors for the council of foreign bondholders, inclosing a reply to Prof. J. G. de Roulhac Hamilton of the University of North Carolina who, in a magazine article, argued that the southern states were justified in repudiating the debts incurred by the carpetbag governments foised upon them by the federal government during the period of reconstruction.

Wary of United States Securities.

"We hope, for the credit of the United States, as a people," says the letter, "that the matter of the repayment of these bonds will engage the attention of the members of congress. Personally, the credit of the United States is of no interest to us, except that we would be very careful not to handle any more of their obligations, and probably the question whether we and our friends get repayment of the bonds is not of interest to you.

"We are, however, very much interested in the question of repayment and no doubt the credit of the United States is a matter of interest to you. Repayment would, therefore, serve the double purpose of satisfying the bondholder here and in the United States, and of restoring the credit of the people of the United States. The actual money involved is not, we should imagine, of material moment to the states."

"From a national point of view," says their letter, "the repudiation of the bonds is felt more acutely by the British holder—taxed almost beyond endurance to repay a debt to a confederation of states, which, while claiming and obtaining payment of that debt, repudiates its obligations to these same British taxpayers.

"Illegitimate Children."

"Further, the stricken condition of this country, as the result of the recent war against a common enemy, through which its debt arises, compared with the unexampled prosperity of the United States—a prosperity arising largely from the same cause—adds greatly to the contempt and disgust with which the British bondholder views the attitude of the states, individually and as a whole, to the bonds. At the same time, we recognize that the American bondholders are just as much entitled to have their bonds paid as are the British holders."

"In concluding his article, Prof. Hamilton says that the southern states are not responsible for the 'carpetbag bonds' and that if responsibility is to be placed anywhere it must be with the federal government, whose illegitimate children the carpetbag governments indisputably were.

Unwelcome Administration.

"Had the southern states of Mississippi and Florida not repudiated the obligations incurred by them before the war, the holders of the so-called carpetbag bonds would probably have regarded, with some sympathy, at least, the plea of helpless compliance on the part of the southern states to the dictates of the federal government.

"Either the excuse put forward by the southern states, that bonds were issued under a legislature and an administration imposed upon them by the federal government during the reconstruction period after the civil war provides a justification for the default of the states, or it does not. The unfortunate bondholders in this country cannot say one way or the other, but it is not for them to decide such a question.

"If the default by the southern states is not justified, then the federal government should see that they are made to pay. If the default is justified, then, ipso facto, the responsibility for meeting the bonds rests with the federal government."

MAN SLAIN, WOMAN SHOT AT DRINKING PARTY

JEALOUSY FLARES INTO GUNFIRE AT PARTY; ONE SLAIN

Woman Wounded; Police Hunt Bootlegger.

A bartender, his common law wife, and a bootlegger met at 4 a. m. yesterday in a flat at 512 Diversey parkway. There was a flare of jealousy on the part of the two men and a pistol was drawn and fired.

Last night the police were searching for the bootlegger, Thomas Rogers, of 3618 Lake Park avenue. The bartender, Leland Brian, 27 years old, was killed in the shooting and the woman, Mrs. Irene Ford, 26 years old, was possibly fatally wounded.

Host Tells of Shooting.

"Brian worked in a café at 935 Wilson avenue," he said. "He and Irene lived in a flat on the second floor at my address. There was a party in our flat and Irene came to it. The liquor ran out and I telephoned to Rogers to bring some more.

"He came with a bottle and was paid for it. But he decided to stay, although he wasn't invited. He sat down beside Irene, who was in negligee. That's where they were when Brian arrived.

Draws Gun and Fires.

"'Who is that guy?' he asked, pointing to Rogers. 'You're drunk again.'"

At this, Bosma continued, Rogers sprang to his feet and drew his pistol, shouting that he would kill the other man. The girl stepped between them and was thrust aside. Then two shots were fired.

Brian, struck near the heart, died at Columbus Memorial hospital. Mrs. Ford, with a wound in the abdomen, was said to be in a critical condition last night.

In a brief period of consciousness she said that she was a widow, that her husband had been killed in the world war and that she formerly lived in St. Paul, Minn. Brian, she said, was the son of a physician at Vincennes, Ind.

Quarreling Over Gin, She Says.

"There was no reason for the shooting," she gasped. "Brian should not have been jealous. I was only quarreling with Rogers over the kind of gin he brought in."

Lloyd O'Farrell, a friend of Rogers, is also being sought by police. According to Bosma, the bootlegger was accompanied to the party by O'Farrell, who stood by him while he shot the couple and then helped him to escape. An inquest into Brian's death was continued indefinitely pending the outcome of Mrs. Ford's condition.

MOTHER WINS COURT FIGHT FOR GIRL, BUT DAD STILL HAS HER

Mrs. Julette Price, 736 East 87th street, won her long fight for the custody of her child, Jean, 5 years old, yesterday, but it was an empty victory. Superior Judge John J. Sullivan awarded her the child with a decree of divorce, but her husband, Roscoe C. Price, former auditor for the Chicago Civic Opera company, still has the girl at his home in Portage, Wis. The court gave him permission to take his daughter home for the midwinter holidays and he never has brought her back, it was reported.

The contest for the custody of the child attracted attention when Mrs. Price charged that Zona Gale, auther of Portage, Wis., was behind the father's fight. She alleged that the writer wanted the father to win so that he could consent to the novelist's adopting the girl. Miss Gale denied the wife's charge.

Sal Hepatica
..by its gentle saline action

Helps banish these 7 common ills and keeps you feeling fit

THE saline method is the great natural way of clearing the system of poisons. It ends, and ends quickly, the discomforts and pains due to headache, upset stomach, constipation, rheumatism, colds, Auto-Intoxication, skin blemishes and many other every-day ills.

For a flushing of the system with pure water and with the cleansing saline tinge of Sal Hepatica, clears intestinal stoppage, corrects acidity and washes away the poisons which are really the cause of 9 out of 10 physical ailments.

The great saline springs of Europe are famous for their cures. For centuries they have been patronized by the wealthy who regain health and a real joy in living through drinking the saline waters.

Sal Hepatica contains the same health-giving salines as these natural springs. For 32 years it has been the world's foremost saline combination—endorsed by thousands of physicians.

DISSOLVED in a glass of water Sal Hepatica makes a sparkling, effervescent drink. It has a refreshing tang all its own—it acts gently and promptly—usually clearing the intestines within a half hour. Don't let the poisons of waste make you miserable and depressed. Keep well—take Sal Hepatica when you need it. For sale at all drug stores in 3 sizes, $.30, $.60, $1.20.

How to use Sal Hepatica for each of these 7 ills

1 · RHEUMATISM

The pains of rheumatism are usually traceable to systemic poisons which settle in the joints and muscles and cause neuritis, lumbago, arthritis and other rheumatic troubles. Thousands of rheumatic sufferers find grateful relief in Sal Hepatica. It clears away the poisons of rheumatism, promptly neutralizes acidity, and helps keep the blood alkaline.

As an eliminant in rheumatism flush out the system at once with a laxative dose of Sal Hepatica—2 to 4 teaspoonfuls in a large glassful of water. And then keep your system free of poisons and acid conditions by taking 1 to 2 teaspoonfuls in a glassful of water half to one hour before each meal and at night just before retiring.

2 · COLDS AND GRIPPE

Nine times out of ten a cold comes from congestion. The first step in clearing a cold is to flush out the body with two to four teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a glassful of water. This clears the clogged intestines and permits the purified blood to combat the congestion in the affected parts of the body. Continue the use of Sal Hepatica each morning before breakfast until every sign of your cold has gone.

3 · CONSTIPATION

Sal Hepatica flushes away waste products by stimulating the release of the natural secretions in the intestines. Whenever you wake up in the morning with a thick, coated tongue—with a headache or any of the other enervating symptoms of constipation, clear away the stoppage by taking two teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a large glass of water. For most prompt results use hot water.

4 · AUTO-INTOXICATION

Over-eating, late hours, rush and worry disturb the system and cause intestinal stoppage. Waste products remaining within the system for more than 24 hours ferment and set up a condition of self-poisoning popularly called Auto-Intoxication.

If you are bothered with that dull draggy feeling due to Auto-Intoxication take one or two teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in your morning glass of water and see what a difference in your condition it will make.

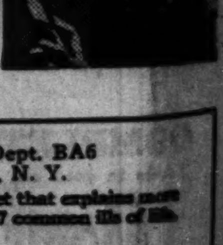
5 · HEADACHES

More often than not a headache comes from congestion in the stomach or intestines which produces excessive blood pressure.

To relieve headache pains—remove the congestion that causes them by taking 1 or 2 teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica dissolved in a large glassful of water, preferably hot. Repeat in 15 minutes if not relieved.

6 · INDIGESTION

The gentle saline action of Sal Hepatica relieves indigestion, biliousness and upset stomach by correcting acidity and promoting the discharge of undigested materials. If you are subject to indigestion guard against trouble by taking a teaspoonful of Sal Hepatica in your morning glass of water.



7 · A BAD COMPLEXION

Eruptions, pimples, blotched or muddy skin are indications that the poisons of waste are polluting the blood. To clear the complexion you must get at the cause of the trouble. On arising flush away the poisons of waste and purify the blood stream by taking one or two teaspoonfuls of Sal Hepatica in a large glassful of water. Do this for a week or as long as necessary to completely clear up the skin.

CAR OF MISSING DEPUTY SHERIFFS LEFT IN DECATUR

Two Fugitives Abandon Machine in Garage.

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The trail of John Burns and Samuel Baxter, youthful convicts who disappeared Tuesday, was definitely followed to Decatur, Ill., today when the automobile of Deputy Sheriff John P. Grove was found there in a garage. The fate of Grove and Deputy Wallace McClure, however, who dropped from sight while transporting the prisoners to the Pendleton, Ind., reformatory, was still an unsolved mystery.

A hat bearing the initials J. P. G. and identified as belonging to Deputy Grove, and a belt from a corduroy coat, believed to have been worn by Burns, were picked up on a road near Maple Point, two and one-half miles east of here. Authorities said this indicated that the prisoners began a fight for freedom immediately after leaving Lafayette.

Evidence of Struggle.

The automobile found at Decatur bore the Indiana license of Grove's car. There was a bullet hole in the lower right hand corner of the windshield, but there were no other evidences of a struggle in the machine. The car was left at the garage last Tuesday by two men. Burns and Baxter previously had spent a short time in Danville, Ill., riding in an automobile similar to the one located at Decatur.

Identification of the automobile was the result of telegrams sent to a score of middle western cities last night by the state bureau of criminal identification at Indianapolis. The telegrams, followed by printed matter sent by mail, gave a complete description of the missing prisoners and the automobile.

Anonymous Letter Sent.

Burns was sentenced from Vermillion county, Ill., in 1924 for one to twenty years on a larceny conviction. He again was sentenced from here on Feb. 3 of this year for five to twenty-one years for robbery.

Baxter received a one to fourteen year sentence here in 1925 for larceny and this month received a one to twenty year sentence on a robbery charge.

Sheriff C. M. Johnston spent another day here running down fruitless clews. An anonymous letter, mailed on a Wabash railroad train last night, said the deputies would be found in the new barn near Attica, Ind. The letter gave specific directions, but investigation failed to locate the officers.

Arrests Are Made.

Another valuless clew was that the men may have been dropped in a gravel pit near Shawnee Mound, where Baxter lived as a child. Search of the pit, however, disclosed nothing.

Another report this afternoon said that two men, answering the general description of Burns and Baxter, had been arrested on a robbery charge at Edwardsville, Ill., and taken to St. Louis. The St. Louis chief of police denied any robbery suspects had been brought there from Edwardsville. Two men, arrested in a stolen automobile at Warern, Mo., were brought to St. Louis, but it was established they were not the men wanted at Lafayette. Two suspects also were being held at Orlando, Fla., and descriptions of Baxter and Burns were sent to the police of that city.

Boost Drive for Japanese College

Force for Peace

There are reasons why America and Japan will not go to war with each other and two of these reasons are Miss Isabelle MacCausland and Miss Katsu Yonezawa, the former a professor in Kobe college, Kobe, Japan, and the latter a graduate of the college, both of them now in Chicago.

Miss Yonezawa is studying music here and when she graduates will go back to Japan as a teacher.

Just now a campaign is on to raise $1,000,000, of this amount $700,000 will be raised in America and $300,000 in Japan. Churches of all Protestant denominations are coöperating. Members of the Kobe College corporation include Dr. Shailer Mathews, chairman; Charles R. Holden, Cuarles L. Cobb, George W. Dixon, Mrs. Albert W. Palmer, Mrs. Arthur E. Holt, Mrs. Catherine Waugh McCulloch, Miss Jane Addams, and Mrs. George R. Wilson.

One of the startling statements made as a reason for helping higher Christian education among young women in Japan is "that nearly as many young women in Japan are sent annually into houses of ill-fame as into the nation's high school."

JUDGE DECLARES WOMAN'S RIGHTS TO PRISON TERM

Heeds Plea, Makes It Lighter than Men's.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Rudolf Christman, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary; Emil Gatterfeld, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 10 years in Pontiac reformatory; Elizabeth Christman, robbery, sentenced to 1 year in the Bridewell by Judge John P. McGoorty.

Equality for women in everything, including punishment for crimes, was advocated from the bench yesterday by Judge John P. McGoorty in the Criminal court, but, it appeared, he didn't quite carry out his theory.

When he disposed of a robbery case, involving a husband and wife and a youthful boarding house acquaintance, he gave the woman the lightest sentence.

For Equality—In Theory.

"Jurors and judges always are reluctant to inflict the same punishment on women as they do on men," the judge said at the start of the hearing. "However, women insist on equality with men and I think they are entitled to it in everything."

The judge had heard a taxicab driver tell that while Rudolf and Elizabeth Christman were busy robbing him Mrs. Christman did the actual searching, swearing meanwhile with masculine zeal and art. The judge declared it would be unusual consideration to give her only a 1 to 20 years' sentence, such as he imposed on Emil Gatterfeld, 18, of 1353 North La Salle street, a boarder in the Christman home.

Attorney Tillie Cecile Levin, appearing for the husband and wife, continued her pleading for the woman, insisting on probation on the theory that Mrs. Christman was a dupe of her husband. The judge then over the objection of Assistant State's Attorneys Clarence Piggott and Duance Reed allowed Mrs. Christman to plead guilty to petit larceny and receive the minimum sentence of 1 year in the bridewell. The husband, taking all the blame, was given 1 to 20 years in the penitentiary.

Piggott Asks for Real Equality.

"This woman is a despicable criminal and her sex should make no difference," Prosecutor Piggott said in opposing a small sentence. "Her presence in the taxicab made the driver feel secure when he was told to drive to a remote part of the city."

IOWA MINE WORKERS SIGN NEW WAGE SCALE AGREEMENT

Centerville, Ia., Feb. 11.—(AP)—A new wage scale, to go into effect April 1, was agreed upon here last night by a joint committee acting for the Southwest Coal Operators' association and the United Brotherhood of Miners.

Slight increases over the 1917 scale now in effect were granted in some classes by the agreement, which members of the committee said was designed to bring about equalization between the different classes of labor.

Leaders said that complete harmony existed in the conference and satisfaction with results was expressed. Twenty-one mines and 850 miners in Appanoose county were parties to the agreement.

BAYER

ASPIRIN

The whole world knows Aspirin as an effective antidote for pain, But it's just as important to know that there is only one genuine Bayer Aspirin. The name Bayer is on every tablet, and on the box. If it says Bayer, it's genuine; and if it doesn't, it is not! Headaches of all sorts are dispelled by Bayer Aspirin. So are colds, and the pain that goes with them; even neuralgia, neuritis, and rheumatism promptly relieved. Get Bayer—at any drugstore—with proven directions.

Physicians prescribe Bayer Aspirin; it does NOT affect the heart

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Health and Beauty

"Do you suppose that people realize what they look like when they walk?"

"No, if they did, they wouldn't," came the swift reply.

All of our lives we long to be free—to think freely, to live freely, and richly, to move through life with a sense of gracious space.

But always we are captive to something.

Now and then one seems to escape and be free. And that one will carry about with her the spirit of high adventure, a joyous "What beyond the turn? Anything may happen!" She will fling the dust aside as she walks as though she knew it was star-dust and pleasant to fling. Beauty is to her not a luxury but one of the first decencies of life. She enters a room as though she had just made a sunrise. She is Health. She is Joy. She is Free.

Until Wednesday, such a woman is at Elizabeth Arden's Salon. She has come from New York where she is the head of Miss Arden's Exercise Department to give to the women of Chicago this triumphant freedom. When one has talked with her and has watched her swift, sure, penetrating diagnosis of each individual's needs, has seen her flow through the rhythmic half-dance, half-exercise movements that are the foundation of Elizabeth Arden's amazing success as a beautician of the whole—not merely the face but of the whole person, one feels, "Here is a true and beautiful thing. The whole point of living is here—the bringing up of all things to the highest point of beauty possible, to use beautifully all that you have, to live freely, with a body that is like strong supple wings, singing with health in every cell, as the base on which you build your spiritual and emotional life. A sound body and a free mind—they are here."

Miss Wedekind—who exemplifies this rhythmic joy of living—will be glad to see you from ten to four. Ask her about the new Vienna Youth Mask that is making life over for women.

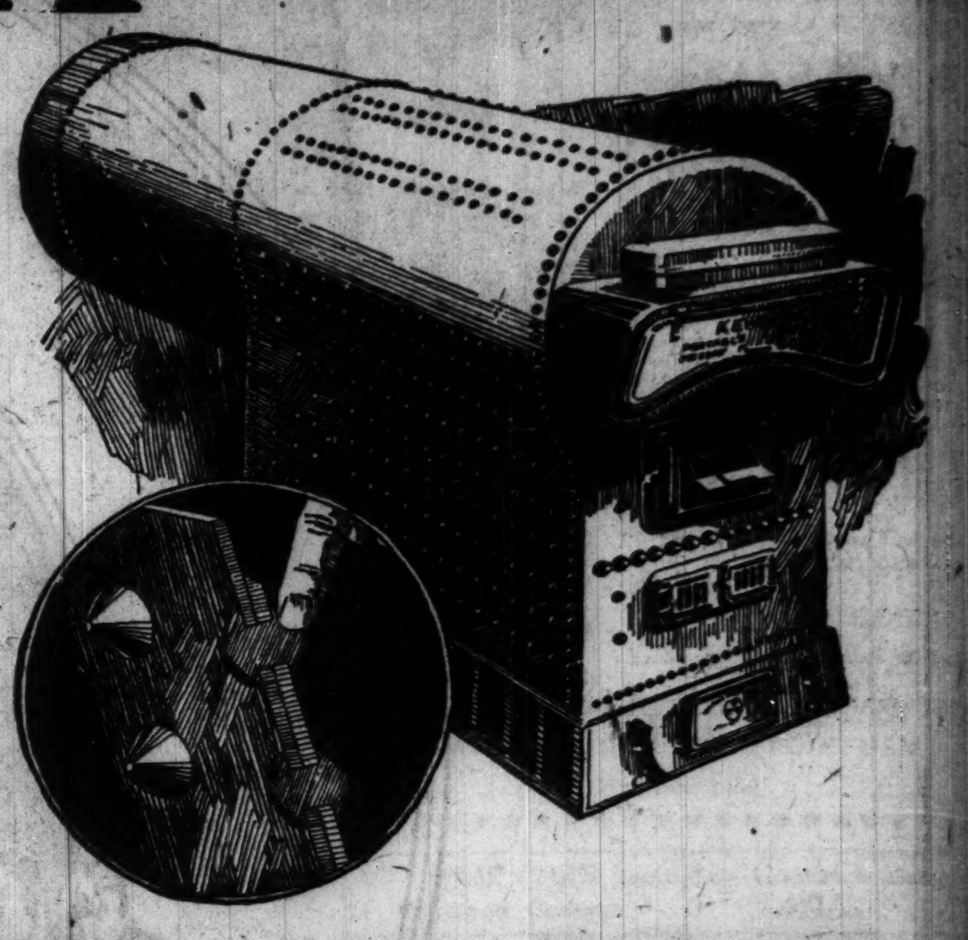
KEWANEE



The Ace of the Boiler Field

The real cost of a heating boiler is not the price you pay when you buy it—but the money you invest in its operation over a period of years.

Even if the price of the KEWANEE ALL-STEEL FIREBOX BOILER were immeasurably greater than it is, it would be an insignificant sum compared with the savings this boiler effects in fuel.

It is true that you can buy some other type of boiler for less money than a Kewanee costs—but that would be false economy unless the boiler can perform as well as the Kewanee. We have never been able to find one in forty years of experience.

A cheap boiler is always a cheap boiler and for that reason it can't do the same good work as a boiler of perfect design and lasting qualities. You can save money on the materials in your building if you wish but you can't accomplish anything but expense if you choose a boiler because of its first cost.

The Kewanee All-steel Fire-box boiler is designed and built to outlast the building. In the vast majority of cases it does. Moreover, it will burn any kind or grade of fuel. If you are a big user of fuel, think this statement over seriously.

The saving it effects, because of its scientific design and superior workmanship, easily reaches 25 per cent. Just imagine how this saving grows over a long period of time. When other boilers are succumbing to atmospheric conditions, creating distress and untold inconvenience, the Kewanee Boiler pursues the even tenor of its way and earns its first cost many many times by the excellent service it renders.

If you want details and proof, write the Old Man Behind the Boiler and get the information he has collected during an experience of 40 years in steel boiler making.

GOOD WILL TOUR THROUGH DIXIE TO START TONIGHT

W. R. Dawes Heads Group Celebrating Freight Cut.

An extensive good will tour of Dixieland is to be undertaken this and next week by 30 Chicago shippers and manufacturers, headed by William R. Dawes, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce. The party will leave this evening at 6:15 o'clock by special train over the Illinois Central and will return on Feb. 28. Eighteen cities in seven states will be visited.

In view of the revised freight rate tariffs which the carriers have at last put into effect between the middle west and the southern states, the trip is regarded as the most important of the trade conferences promoted by Chicago business men in many years.

The freight rate revision, which was ordered by decision of the interstate commerce commission on July 7, 1925, but which was held up by protest of carriers, is now in force. The new rates mean that for the first time in history midwest and southern products will be exchanged on a fair basis.

For New Prosperity.

The new rates cut substantial percentages fro mthe cost of shipping southern goods of all kinds into northern markets and likewise reduce the cost of moving midwest manufactured goods into the south. The new rates will give, according to spokesmen for the business interests, a big increase in commodity exchanges, increased prosperity to north and south, and a lowering of living costs in both areas.

The freight rate battle has extended over forty years, with the Chicago Association of Commerce, in coöperation with other commercial interests, on the firing line. John T. Pirie Sr. is the chairman of the association transportation committee which successfully completed the long fight for rate equity.

"It is fitting that north and south join in looking forward to the results of this epoch making rate change," he said. "Both sections wish to take full advantage of its meaning in trade expansion and to do so it is vital that both the people of the north and of Dixieland get an understanding of its full meaning. It gives both areas tremendous advantages. We all need to work together to develop this great opportunity, and Chicago is showing in this tour its eagerness to do its part."

Millions for Each.

"It means many millions each year in trade and economies to the southern states as well as to middle west commerce and industry," said Mr. Dawes. "It means mutually broader markets, both for southern products and those of the north; and we hope by our tour to make this idea clear to thousands of merchants and manufacturers in the seven southeastern states."

V. L. Alward of the American Furniture Mart is chairman of the delegation which will be entertained by business bodies in all the cities visited.

PROSECUTION LOSES ITS STAR WITNESS IN JACKSON TRIAL

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb .11.—(AP)—The prosecution in the trial of Gov. Ed Jackson lost one of its star witnesses today when Robert W. Lyons, Richmond attorney and former financial agent of the Ku Klux Klan, underwent an operation for appendicitis at Dayton, O.

Loss of Lyons' testimony, however, will not weaken the state's case against the governor, who is charged with conspiracy to commit a felony in an attempt to bribe, Prosecutor William H. Remy declared. It strengthened the belief that D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the klan and now in Indiana state prison, might be the first witness for the prosecution.

Stephenson was named in the Jackson indictment, as having been a party to the alleged conspiracy to bribe Gov. Warren T. McCray in 1923 to name James E. McDonald as Marion court prosecutor. Robert I. Marsh, local attorney, and George V. Coffin, Marion county Republican chairman, were indicted with Gov. Jackson. They will be tried later.

CHILDREN'S HOME CAMPAIGN FOR $100,000 OPENS

A campaign for funds with which to pay off existing indebtedness on the Norwegian Lutheran Children's home at Edison Park was inaugurated yesterday by officials of the institution. The goal is $100,000 and the drive will last until Feb. 25.

Through its thirty-one years of existence the Norwegian Lutheran Children's home has obtained its support for the most part through the voluntary assistance of societies and individuals. The last and largest gift received was the Moe-Seaver building, dedicated last December, which greatly increased the capacity of the home.

A power plant, erected at a cost of $45,000, as one of the conditions of the Moe-Seaver donation, constitutes a part of the $100,000 debt that must be canceled. A. E. Seaver is honorary chairman of the appeal committee. Headquarters are at the Inland Trust and Savings Bank building, Milwaukee avenue and Irving Park boulevard.

Believed Dead, Explorer Wires He, Wife Are Safe

LONDON, Feb. 11.—(AP)—The English explorer, Thomas Glover, and his young wife, who were reported on Feb. 3 to have been killed in central Africa while on a zöological expedition, are safe. Mr. Glover's mother has recieved a cable from his agent at Kano, in the Sudan, stating: "Report untrue. Glover telegraphs safe arrival of both at Mas Tshad Feb. 3."

Noted Sculptor Also Is Chicago Visitor.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

Two visiting artists of distinction are in Chicago now. The one is Arthur Cahill, a prominent California painter, and the other is the sculptor, Allan Clark, whose oriental point of view is beautifully expressed in his current show at the Arts club.

Mr. Cahill is here painting John Borden. The portrait is practically finished and the artist has made a stunning thing of his canvas. The painting is in blues and browns, to match the room in which it will be hung, and Mr. Borden is shown as the master of his yacht. Much of the work was done in Seattle, where the yacht was stationed before the Bordens' Alaska trip last summer.

Gruppe Paintings on Exhibit.

At the O'Brien Art galleries there is current a beautiful exhibit of paintings by Charles P. Gruppe, an American with Dutch tendencies. Mr. Gruppe has studied there. The influence of his ha sstudied there. The influence of his teachers is obvious. The atmosphere of Holland, the country of canals and misty sunshine, permeates many of his loveliest compositions.

Not all of the pictures were done abroad. "Black Creek" is American, a sunshine, bright and clear, burning upon a field of snow through which the half frozen stream runs. "Rain Clouds," a harbor with ships, the water piercingly blue and broken by white crests of foam, is extraordinarily good. Other pictures which linger in one's memory are "Low Tide," "Canal in Holland," "October Reflections," and "Hickory Nut Time."

Tea Today for Carl Krafft.

This afternoon the Illinois Woman's Athletic club is to give a tea for Carl Krafft, the painter whose exhibition in their studio is proving so successful. Mrs. Alice L. Bidwell, chairman of the committee on art, will be hostess.

An exhibition of work by Illinois women artists will open tomorrow in the assembly hall of the Illinois Woman's Athletic club. The exhibit has been gathered and is sponsored by Mrs. Bidwell, herself an artist of talent.

REPORT INTEREST ON RUSS FUNDS TO PAY BRITISH DEBT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Lively speculation regarding who is the mysterious donor of £500,000 ($2,500,000) to the British government, from which the cumulative interest is to be used to pay the national debt, has produced a rumor that the donor is Lord Revelstoke, chief of the famous bank, Baring Bros. & Co., in which the sum is to be held in trust.

Well informed quarters say Lord Revelstoke is only the figurehead for a peculiar financial transaction, based upon the fact that Baring Bros. & Co. remain in the unique position of holding millions belonging to the old Russian imperial government. These deposits are immovable.

EX-CONVICT SEIZED AS ROBBER.

William Barz, 32, of 5518 South Halsted street, an ex-convict, was arrested yesterday as he was attempting with hammer and chisel to break into a drug store at 1159 West Garfield boulevard.

Today six splendid daily trains operate over this historic route to San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland, providing every luxury and comfort known to modern day transportation.

YANKS PLAY BIG PART IN CHILE'S INDUSTRIAL LIFE

Boom Nitrate Business; Help Improve Land.

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SANTIAGO, Chile, Feb. 11.—From the first days of Chilean independence the United States has maintained the friendliest diplomatic relations with this republic, and North American money and technical knowledge have played a large rôle in the development of the country.

We are already the largest foreign investors in Chile, both in the mining and nitrate industries, and in loans to the Chilean government. In the next few years quantites of North American investments are contemplated. Our total moneys now in Chile are about seven hundred and fifty million dollars, which is considerable in excess of those in Brazil and somewhat more than in Argentina.

Chilean patriots made their first bid for independence during the southern winter of 1810, and by midsummer (January, 1811) the first diplomatic representative of the United States, Joel Roberts Poinsett, arrived at Santiago to assume the post of consul general of the United States. Mr. Poinsett left the country a year later, but from the time Bernardo O'Higgins, with the aid of San Martin, established the independence of Chile, our diplomatic relations with this country have been unbroken.

U. S. Aids Nitrate Industry.

American technical knowledge only recently performed a service of vast importance to the country, in reorganizing the processing of nitrates to enable the industry to meet the competition of the "fixation" products of Germany and Great Britain, which, for a time, threatened to wipe out this great industry on which Chile depends for no small portion of its public revenues. The Guggenheim interests have reduced the costs of processing to a point which seems to defy competition of artificial fertilizers, and Chile is again shipping large quantities of nitrates from Antofagasta and Inquique.

A new call for American money will shortly be made by the fiscal agents of the government, the National City bank of New York, to enable the president to carry out his vast program of public works.

One of the most important acts of President Ibanez was to place the finances of the nation on a budget system, with a rigid control over expenditures. The operation of this plan during the first year showed the nation that a sufficient surplus would exist in future without increasing taxation, to enable carrying out of a six year program of public improvements, involving an expenditure of nearly two hundred million dollars.

Calls for $200,000,000.

Two hundred million Chilean pesos, or about $25,000,000, will be asked. It will be divided as follows: 15,000,000 pesos for the service of immigration, 22,000,000 pesos for railways, 53,000,000 pesos for ports, 17,000,000 pesos for drinking water installations and sewage, 30,000,000 pesos for public buildings, 5,000,000 pesos for an automobile road from Valparaiso to Casablanca, and 57,000,000 pesos for other public works. During the second year two hundred and twenty-five million pesos will be spent for the continuation of this program; two hundred and fifty million pesos each for the third and fourth years will be appropriated, three hundred million pesos for the fifth year, and three hundred and fifty million pesos for the sixth year, a total of roughly two hundred million dollars.

When the program is completed the ports of Valparaiso, Antofagasta, and Iquique will boast modern docks, warehouses, and handling equipment. There will also be a network of automobile roads.

In addition to the $25,000,000 to be asked for the first year's improvements, $45,000,000 for the funding of outstanding Chilean 8 per cent bonds on a 6 per cent basis will be sought.

Sees More Automobiles.

Only a small portion of the highway construction Chile plans to undertake will be carried out under the president's program. Many of the roads will be constructed by municipalities and paid for out of special taxes on motor cars and accessories. The government is looking forward to a time when the automobile population of the country will be increased; it is not waiting for the automobile to force road development. At present there are only 18,000 motor cars in Chile, of which 12,000 are in Santiago. But sales are increasing and Chile promises to be an important automobile market. More than 90 per cent of the pleasure cars and trucks are manufactured in the United States.

Chile nearly reproduces the climatic and soil conditions of our own Pacific coast. The country stretches from 17.17 south latitude to 55.01 south latitude.

Fertile Valley Between Ranges.

A coast range of mountains runs the length of the land. To the east lie the Andes. Between these two ranges lies a valley of increasing fertility, narrower by far than that which stretches from the Canadian border to Southern California, but just as rich. Chilean apples rival in flavor and quality the best our western coast produces. Oranges of the finest quality are grown on the irrigated lands north of Santiago as far as the nitrate deserts. And while the rainfall of these regions is not abundant there is an ample supply of water for irrigation from the high Andes. In the vicinity of Santiago grapes are grown in quantities, and wines of fine quality are produced.

Development of these lands to full production has been slow, chiefly owing to lack of markets. But plans are now under way for government assistance in marketing fruits, and preferential rates will be given on certain lines to New York and Europe. Fruit growers are to be organized on a scale similar to those of the United States. A loan will be floated, guaranteed by the government, to make this possible.

Chile is turning to the United States for financing these projects because its experience with North American enterprise has been the happiest.

BATTLESHIP'S CREW OF 1,200 IS QUARANTINED TO CURB EPIDEMIC

San Pedro, Cal., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Twelve hundred officers and men have been placed in quarantine aboard the U. S. S. battleship Colorado as the result of an outbreak of several cases of cerebro-spinal fever, which the ship doctors say is practically identical with spinal meningitis.

The Colorado arrived this morning from Puget Sound, but no one was allowed to leave the ship. Later an official bulletin was issued from the flagship California stating that hte ship would be under quarantine until Feb. 15 or later.

EXPERTS TO TURN SEARCHLIGHT ON CHILD CHARACTER

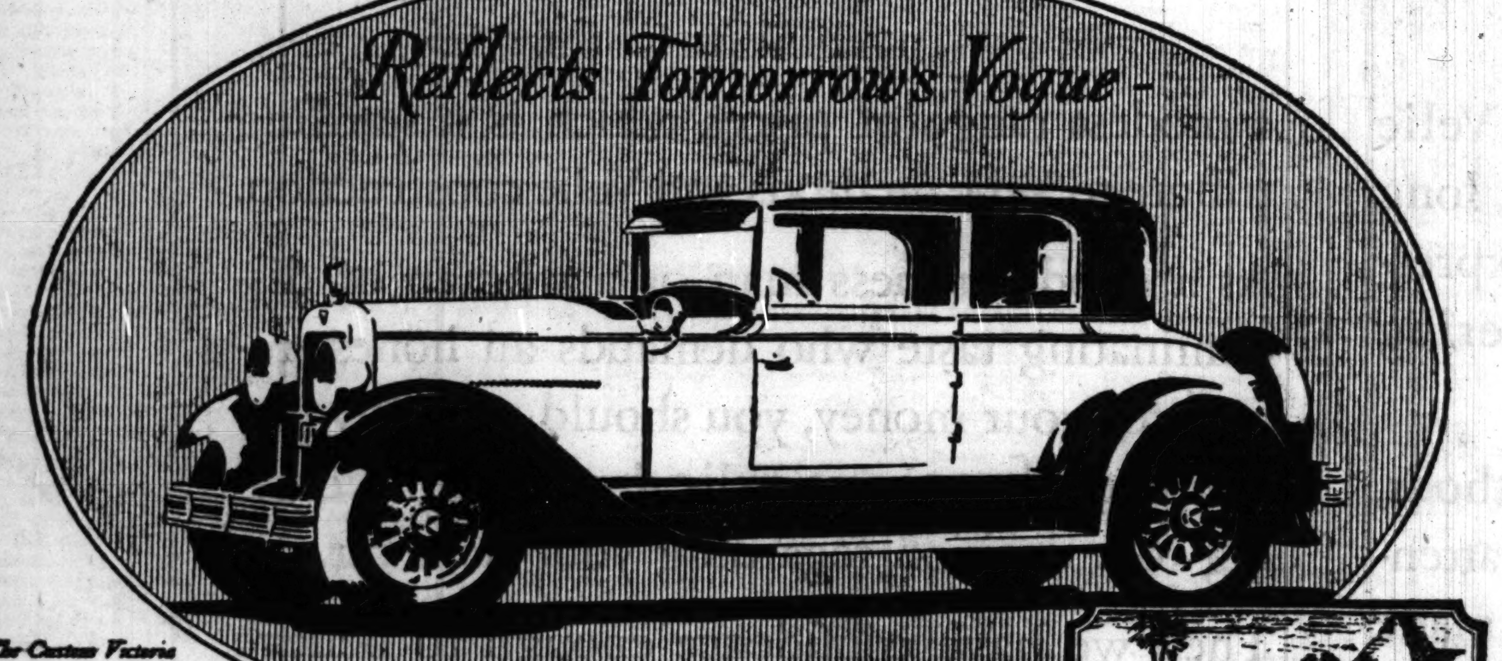
Why does little Junior pull the cat's tail? Why does he fib about getting into his mother's doughnuts? Are these indications of a weakness in his moral makeup? And, if so, how can his character be corrected?

The thousand and one questions that run through a mother's mind as she watches the development of her child from day to day will be answered by experts at a three day conference of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education. The sessions will open Thursday in the Palmer house.

Prof. Mark A. May of the department of education, Yale university, one of the several well known authorities on the program, will deliver a report on the results of tests given 12,000 school children to determine the tendencies of juveniles to practice deception.

Another speaker is to be Dr. George A. Dorsey, author of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings." He is of the opinion that environment is almost entirely responsible for the development of a child's character. He will talk on "How to Make or Break the Child."

Other speakers scheduled for the conference include: Dr. Max Mason, president of the University of Chicago; Dr. E. D. Starbuck, director of the institute of character research, University of Iowa; Miss Jane Addams of Hull House; Dr. M. C. Otto, department of philosophy, University of Wisconsin; Dr. William Kilpatrick, professor of the philosophy of education, Columbia university; Prof. Henry C. Morrison, department of education, University of Chicago; Dudley Crafts Watson, of the Art institute; President Ralph C. Hamill of the Illinois Society of Mental Hygiene; and Prof. T. V. Smith, University of Chicago.



The Custom Victoria

Capping the Great Pyramid of Value to the Greatest Reception in Hudson History

Hudson's long, constantly improved leadership of chassis values, riding qualities, performance supremacy, and operation smoothness, is this year rounded out with the most beautiful modern and varied line of body designs we have ever presented—and to the greatest public applause in all Hudson's long score of triumphs.

From pre-showings in hundreds of cities including Detroit, from the brilliant New York Automobile Show, from the trade, the press and the man on the street come the most significant and powerful endorsements that Hudson has ever won.

Its leadership of mode extends to every detail and marks a new Hudson supremacy, as definite as its mechanical dominance through the Super-Six principle, and its companion invention which set today's standard for motor performance.

There are seven body styles on Hudson—three on the 118-inch chassis and four on the 127-inch.

Until you have examined and ridden in the new Hudson Super-Six you cannot know the most outstanding advancement in motordom.

VELIE is Never Compromised by Mass Production

Quality Methods are Paramount in Velie Manufacturing Policy

Into each Velie car are incorporated Velie personality, speed, smoothness, stamina, long life and those numerous refinements expressive of the more advanced engineering thought and practice.

Owing to Velie quality production methods, each car is built with that microscopic attention to detail and individuality which has made the name Velie paramount in the fine car class.

Seven body styles are presented in the 20th Anniversary Series of sixes and straight eight models, each a symbol of Velie achievement and each the embodiment of all that a fine car should be.

As a good business man or a woman of discriminating taste who demands an honest return for your money, you should certainly pay a visit to the nearest Velie dealer before coming to a decision regarding your next car.

Then we have confidence enough to believe you too will elect to become a member of the select and discriminating group owning one of the characteristic models of this great car.

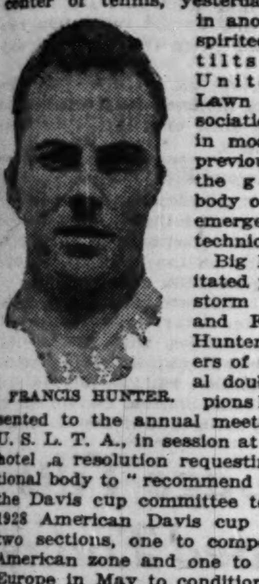
TABLE PLAN TO SPLIT UP 1928 DAVIS CUP TEAM

Tilden Heads List of Rankings.

BY HOWARD ROBERTS.



FRANCIS HUNTER.

William T. Tilden II, long the storm center of tennis, yesterday engaged in another of his spirited verbal tilts with the United States Lawn Tennis association, and, as in most of their previous clashes, the governing body of the sport emerged with a technical victory.

Big Bill precipitated yesterday's storm when he and Francis T. Hunter, co-holders of the national doubles championship, presented to the annual meeting of the U. S. L. T. A., in session at the Drake hotel, a resolution requesting the national body to "recommend and urge" the Davis cup committee to split the 1928 American Davis cup team into two sections, one to compete in the American zone and one to be sent to Europe in May to condition itself for the interzone and challenge rounds. The plan called for the consolidation of the squad in Europe later.

Myrick Protests Plan.

Scarcely had the echoes of Tilden's plea died away than Julian S. Myrick, former president of the U. S. L. T. A. and long termed the "czar of American tennis," leaped to his feet stating the Davis cup committee should not be tied down by any expression of opinion by the national meeting. In this view Myrick was supported by Jones W. Mersereau, retiring president, and others.

After more than an hour of spirited and at times bitter wrangling the meeting passed a resolution referring Tilden's proposal "for the consideration of the Davis cup committee" without expressing approval or disapproval of the plan.

In urging the adoption of his proposal, Tilden repeated the arguments he advanced in its behalf before the Western association meeting Friday, stating it would be impossible for a team which played through the American zone matches to get into condition for the interzone and challenge rounds in the limited time it would have to compete abroad.

"Ridiculous," Hunter Argues.

"It seems ridiculous," Hunter argued, "that the U. S. L. T. A. and the players it controls cannot get together in a unified effort to bring the cup back to America. Tilden and I are willing to play in either zone the association chooses, but we will not play in both, for we know we would not have time to reach anything approximating the peak of our form. We are willing to do most anything to regain the cup, but we will not make fools of ourselves."

"Conditions in Europe are entirely different," said Tilden. "The balls, food, courts, and light all are vastly different than in America, and a player must become accustomed to hostile crowds. We are faced with two alternatives—either go after the cup with full power by training one team abroad, or admit we have no chance to win and seek to develop our younger stars.

"If it is the committee's wish that the latter step be taken, Hunter and I gladly will step aside and teach the youngsters all we can in the hopes they will be able to regain the cup in future years."

Want Full Power.

"The committee should be free to act with full power," argued Myrick in rebuttal, "and any definite expression of opinion by this meeting will make it impossible for the committee to do so."

Tilden and Hunter sail for Europe within a month, so unless the cup committee approves their plan before that time it is possible the nation's two ranking players will be lost to the American squad which will endeavor to regain the Davis cup from France next July.

Tilden, for the eighth successive year, is the ranking player in the United States, according to the national ranking list approved by the U. S. L. T. A. yesterday. But aside from his name at the top of the list, America's vaunted "first ten" presents a strangely altered appearance.

Second place is held by Francis T. Hunter of New York, co-holder with Big Bill of the national doubles championship, whose sensational play throughout the last season skyrocketed him upward from the twelfth position.

Alonso Slumps to Fourth.

George M. Lott Jr. of Chicago, the youth who for several years has been knocking at the doors of tennis' hall of fame, is given third ranking, despite the fact he was unable to compete in the national championships because of an attack of ptomaine poisoning. Lott had his most successful season on the courts, climaxing a year of sensational play with a straight set victory over Rene Lacoste, king pin of the French Davis Cup team. The Chicago boy also had a triumph over Tilden to his credit. Last year Lott was given ninth ranking.

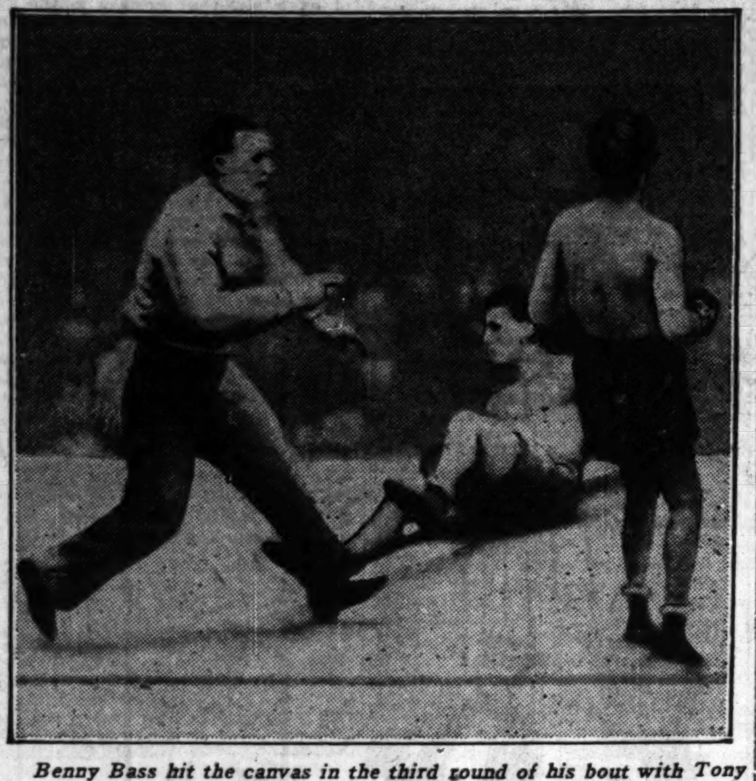
DOWN BUT NOT OUT



Benny Bass hit the canvas in the third round of his bout with Tony Canzoneri in New York Friday night. He got up at the count of eight and almost fought his opponent even the rest of the way.

Broken Collar Bone Keeps Bass in Bed

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—A game little ring terrier, Benny Bass of Philadelphia, lay in a private hospital tonight and pondered the vicissitudes of a fight "racket" that brought him a broken collar bone in the midst of the greatest opportunity of his fistic lifetime.

About his right shoulder snuggled a plaster cast, holding together a fractured clavicle, suffered in the third round of his brilliant but unsuccessful bulldog effort to wrest the featherweight crown from Tony Canzoneri in a fifteen round slugfest last night.

Besides the broken main bones the cast held in place splinters of bone ground away in the final 12 rounds, when Bass, despite the agony of his hurt, smashed and tore at the elusive Italian in a thrilling effort to win the title.

Toronto Held to 1 to 1 Tie by Americans

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Americans played 70 minutes to a 2 to 2 tie here tonight. Lowery put the Leafs in the lead early in the first period, but Himes and Burch combined to bring the Americans on even terms half way through the same session. In the next stanza, Connacher added another counter for the Americans, which was immediately equalized by Herberts on a rebound from Duncan's shot.

Thirteen penalties were imposed, including two majors, which went to Connacher and Bowcher.

BRUINS, CANADIENS TIE.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens battled to a 1 to 1 deadlock in an overtime clash in a National Hockey league game here tonight. Frederickson pushed over a goal for the Hub sextet in the opening period, and in the second session Howie Morenz forced the tie by scoring on a pass from Mantha.

MAROONS WHIP PIRATES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 11.—(AP)—The Montreal Maroons beat Pittsburgh in a fast National Hockey league tilt here tonight, 3 to 1. Each goal was registered with at least one player in the penalty box.

I. W. A. C. Swimming Team Sets New Relay Record

The Illinois Women's Athletic club 400 yard relay team of Ethel Lackie, Mary Lou Quinn, Dagney Van Maarth and Emma Shematis smashed the national record for that event last night at the Whiting, Ind., Community Center pool. The girls clipped 2 seconds off the old record of 4:35 2-5 held by the Women's Swimming association of New York.

Olympic Games Inaugurated in Mountain Blizzard

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

EDDIE MURPHY.

ST. MORITZ, Feb. 11.—The gods on Mount Olympus poured forth a regular mountain blizzard today, but it only enlivened the spirits of some 800 athletes from twenty-five nations who inaugurated the winter Olympic games with the traditional parade through the steep, winding streets which help make this town one of the most picturesque in Europe.

Aside from the opening ceremonies—and the Swiss hosts, from the president of the confederation down, outdid themselves to make them good—there was little doing today except the opening round of the hockey series. France defeated Hungary, 2 to 0; Great Britain swamped Belgium, 7-3; Sweden blanked Czecho-Slovakia, 3-0, and Austria tied Switzerland, 4-4.

The Yank speedsters will not swing into action until Monday, and the fact that the United States did not send a hockey team this year caused a lack of interest in the tournament, which every one concedes to Canada, the 1924 champions.

Two Chicago skaters tonight were conceded the best chance of putting America high in the point column when the speed skating contests get under way.

Oneil Farrell and Eddie Murphy, both from Chicago, made better time in the tests today than they ever did before, as did Irving Jaffe and Valentine Bialis, the latter from Utica, N. Y.

All four of these speedsters are entered in the races Monday and Tuesday, with Farrell counted on to make the best showing in the 500 meter event and Murphy over the longer distances.

Rolf Monsen, one of America's three ski hopes, with Anders Haugen and Charles Proctor, still was hobbling around tonight following an accident during practice Monday, but declared he would be in shape to compete the end of the week.

Interest in women competitors centers chiefly on what is expected to be a duel between Beatrice Loughan, the American skating champion in 1924, and Sonia Henie, 16 year old Norwegian star, who competed in the last Olympics at the age of 12.

BAKER REACHES SEMI-FINALS IN SQUASH TOURNEY

Baker disposed of J. Scott Burke, young Pittsburgh player, 15-5, 15-7, 15-5, in the morning and had a hard tussle to overcome Wallace F. Johnston, Philadelphia, 15-15, 11-15, 15-9, 14-17, 15-5, in the afternoon.

Ralph Powers, Boston, will be Baker's opponent in the semi-final round tomorrow. Powers drew a bye in the first round and then conquered Sydney P. Clark, newly crowned Pennsylvania champion, in four games in the afternoon.

In the team championship Philadelphia had an easy time defeating both Washington and Buffalo in love matches. Philadelphia will meet New York in the semi-final round today, while Boston opposes Detroit.

ELEVEN CUBS LEAVE TODAY FOR CATALINA

Grimm Joins Party at Kansas City.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Eleven Cubs flanked by the customary quota of scribes, trainers, and coaches, and with Chief Owner William Wrigley leading the parade, set out today for the annual siege of hard work and sunshine on Catalina island.

From 1:35 this afternoon, when their train pulls out over the Santa Fé, until Wednesday noon the squad will be on the move, and Thursday morning will mark the inauguration of muscle stretching activities calculated to put the battery men in prime trim before the flag race opens April 11.

Eleven athletes are leaving from here, but Capt. Charley Grimm, accompanied by Coach Jim Burke, climb aboard tonight at Kansas City, and six others will appear at Los Angeles Wednesday in time to get in on breakfast at the club's expense.

Three Still Missing.

In the final checkup of talent last evening three men were reported missing. One is Mike Gonzales, who promised to reach here from Cuba in time to make the train this afternoon. Another is Jack Churry, the bullpen receiver, who sent an eleventh hour notice from Congo, O., that he was ill and would report later. The other absentee is Pete "Gink" Fowler, the left handed mound rookie, who seems to be having difficulties the Cubs cannot control.

Fowler was purchased from the Atlanta, Ga., club last midsummer and his complaint is that he should be given 10 per cent of whatever the Cubs paid for his transfer. This is a matter he will have to thresh out with officials of the Atlanta club and until the kid gets the money demanded or alters his stand the Chicago club will not be able to enjoy the privilege of providing him with free board at Catalina. Fowler insists he will not sign his contract until Atlanta does its bit by him.

Will Try Butler at Third.

Among those joining up at Los Angeles is Johnny Butler, the Brooklyn purchase, who is to be given first shot at the third base job. Butler could have remained away from camp until the main squad reports Feb. 27 but he asked to be included among the early birds. Thus he'll have an extra ten days to become acquainted with Manager McCarthy's ideas of how third base should be handled. Others in the Los Angeles contingent will be Root, Nehf, Osborn, Jones, and Malone.

Out of here the diamond talent will be Blake, Guy and Granville Bush, Carlson, Grampp, Hansen, Weinert, Welch, Heathcote, Hartnett, Gonzales, and Coach Mike Doolan with Secretary Bob Lewis in charge. Some of these had the fever so badly yesterday that they went out to the park and tossed the ball a bit.

It is McCarthy's intention to hold only one workout a day until the remainder of the squad arrives. This will leave plenty of leisure time for golf and fishing and the athletes won't mind doing either.

1927 PRO GRID GAMES ATTRACT 500,000 FANS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Officials of the National Professional Football league transacted their slate of business in one day instead of the two they planned, and adjourned their annual meeting tonight with the decision to meet at Providence, R. I., in July to formulate schedules for next fall.

Discussion on moving the goal posts to their former position on the goal line instead of ten yards behind it, and of eliminating the lateral pass were tabled until the July meeting.

President Joe Carr stated the league played to 500,000 spectators last fall, the most successful season in its history.

ALLEN POTTS WINS INDOOR SKATING TITLE

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—Allen Potts of Brooklyn won the all around senior men's championship in the national indoor skating meet here tonight by taking third place in the three mile. Lloyd Guenther of Detroit, Melvin Johnson of Minneapolis, and Andy Roesch of New York were tied for second place with ninety points each.

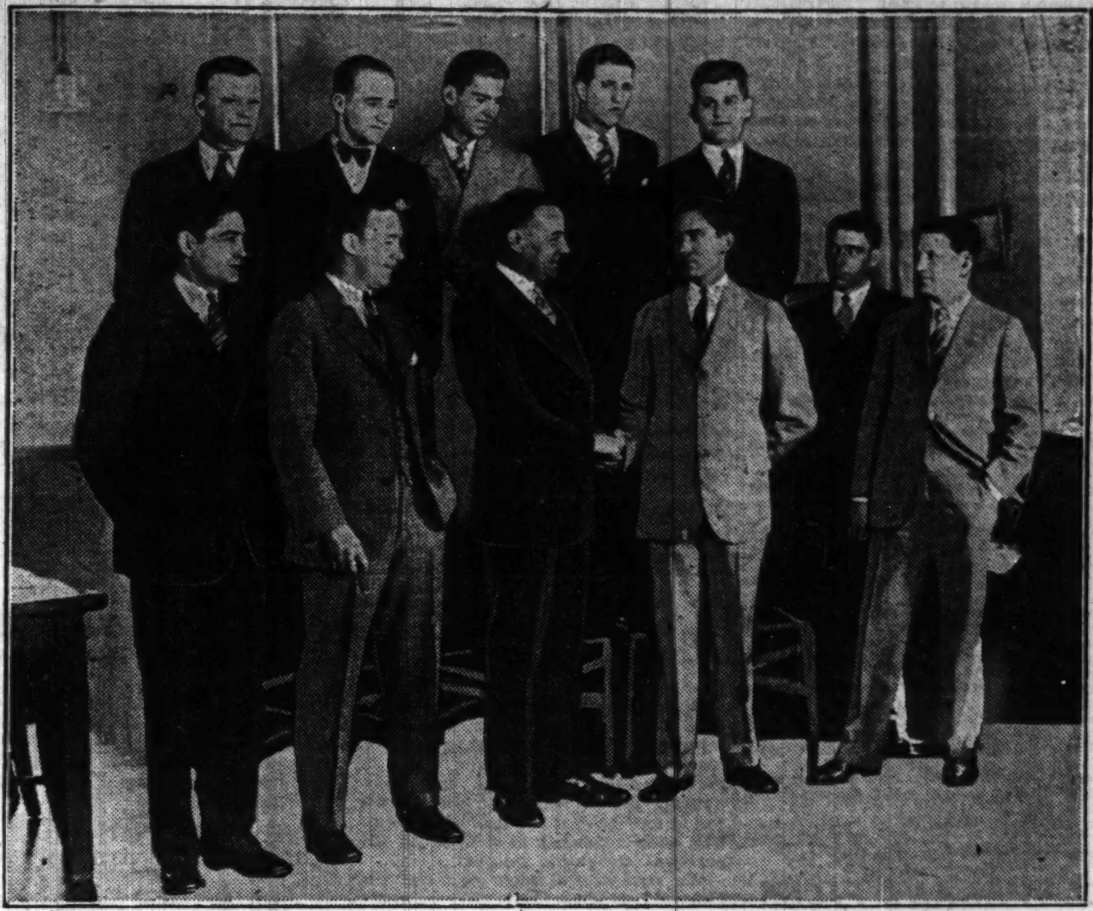
Elsie Mueller retained her title as national indoor skating champion when she made a clean sweep of the four women's events skated at the Olympia, taking the mile final in 3:41 2-5.

George Ade Backs Sarazen to Beat Jock Hutchison

Miami, Fla., Feb. 11.—[U. P.]—Gene Sarazen and Jock Hutchison, two of the leading professional golfers, will meet in a "grudge" match here Sunday for a large side bet. They will play 36 holes. The feud between Sarazen and Hutchison started when Gene won the $3,000 Miami open tournament by a one stroke margin over Jock.

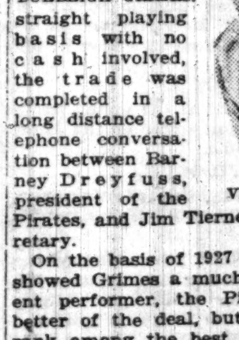
Charles Smalley, Chicago millionaire, offered to wager that Jock could defeat Sarazen over 36 holes. The bet was taken on behalf of Sarazen by George Ade, the humorist, and Jess Andrews, the Indiana author.

CUBS GET MARCHING ORDERS

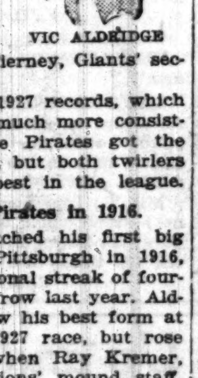


Cub players let the camera look them over as they gather at club offices in the Wrigley building to pick up meal money and their Pullman reservation preparatory to the start for California this afternoon. From left to right (back row): Trainer Andy Lotshaw, Henry Grampp, Johnny Welch, Roy "Snipe" Hansen, and Phil Weinert. Front row—Guy Bush, Gabby Hartnett, President William Veeck, Granville Bush, Fred Blake, and Cliff Heathcote.

Pirates and Giants Trade Star Pitchers



BURLEIGH GRIMES.



VIC ALDRIDGE

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Burleigh Grimes veteran spitball pitcher of the New York Giants, was traded to Pittsburgh today for Vic Aldridge, curve ball star of the National league champions.

Made on a straight playing basis with no cash involved, the trade was completed in a long distance telephone conversation between Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pirates, and Jim Tierney, Giants' secretary.

On the basis of 1927 records, which showed Grimes a much more consistent performer, the Pirates got the better of the deal, but both twirlers rank among the best in the league.

Grimes with Pirates in 1916.

Grimes, who pitched his first big league game for Pittsburgh in 1916, turned in a sensational streak of fourteen victories in a row last year. Aldridge failed to show his best form at the start of the 1927 race, but rose to great heights when Ray Kremer, ace of the champions' mound staff, was injured. At this point the Hoosier schoolmaster won two games in one five game series against the Giants, and continued to turn in victory after victory until Kremer returned to the lineup.

So far as figures go, Grimes outranked Aldridge both in games won and lost, and in earned run allowance. Appearing in 39 games, Grimes won 19 and lost 8 to rank third among the league's pitchers in the won and lost column. Aldridge, with 15 games won against 10 lost, stood eleventh in the list. In earned runs, Grimes stood 15th and Aldridge 24th.

Both Men Are Veterans.

Both hurlers have seen long service in the big leagues. Grimes, who is 34, started his professional baseball career with Ottumwa in the Central association in 1913. Aldridge, who is 33, has been in the big leagues for seven years. He was with the Chicago Cubs in 1917 and 1918, and then was sent back to the minors.

After three years on the coast, Aldridge returned to the Cubs in 1922. For three years he turned in more victories than defeats for the Cubs, and then was traded to Pittsburgh in the winter of 1924.

Three more players turned in their signed contracts to the Giants today. They were Frank Hogan, catcher, and Bill Clarkson and Jim Faulkner, pitchers.

Young Australian Tennis Player Beats Jean Borotra

MELBOURNE, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Australia's 19 year old Davis cup player, Jack Crawford, today defeated Jean Borotra of France, 6-1, 6-4, in the last day's play in the tennis test between Australia and France. Last week Crawford ran Borotra to five sets in the Sydney championships before the Frenchman won.

Dempsey Eye Story Helps to Revive I in Sharkey

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 11.—Certain developments of a sinister aspect have taken place recently in the heavyweight department of the prizefight industry which would seem to merit the attention of the Carnegie Foundation, which is a great hand to investigate sinister aspects.

Advice is to hand that the current story concerning the condition of Mr. Jack Dempsey's eyes was invented and disseminated by Mr. James J. Johnston, manager of 10 per cent of Mr. Jack Sharkey, for the sole purpose of bolstering Mr. Sharkey's courage.

It appears that Mr. Sharkey having made several hundred thousand dollars already, wished to retire from pugilism because he was afraid that even if he should come through the current elimination contests without being eliminated unduly he would then be asked to fight Mr. Dempsey again before being allowed to fight Gene Tunney. Remembering how roughly Mr. Dempsey had worked on his middle that night last July, Mr. Sharkey was in such a state of mind that only the total withdrawal of Mr Dempsey would reassure him.

Recalls Jack's Glasses.

Naturally Mr. Johnston did not wish to see his 10 per cent of Mr. Sharkey retire so he bethought himself of a small item which he had seen in some newspaper stating that Mr. Dempsey had had himself tailored for a set of spectacles for use in reading the captions on the pictures in the books in his library.

Two days later at one of the afternoon teas of the smart cauliflower set, Mr. Johnston referred to this item and remarked that he had caused an investigation to be made.

"I have it on very good authority," he stated, "that Mr. Dempsey is almost blind now and will not fight any more."

I do not know what the Carnegie Foundation could do about this, even if it should make an investigation, and, in the fullness of time, turn out a neatly bound 500 page report illustrated by graphs comparing the steamship Leviathan to the Woolworth building. I do not know what the Carnegie Foundation ever does about any of the sinister matters that it investigates, but there the situation is and it seems very sinister to me.

This act of Mr. Johnston's has caused serious consequence already, as it has disrupted the classical friendship between Mr. Johnston and Mr. Leo P. Flynn. As manager-in-law of Mr. Dempsey, Mr. Flynn became greatly annoyed at Mr. Johnston for starting this report about his sterling man-eater and there were recriminations when they met in the lobby of the new Garden Friday evening just before the Canzoneri-Bass contest for the featherweight championship.

Mr. Flynn accused Mr. Johnston of attempting to deceive the public, and Mr. Johnston accused Mr. Flynn of putting green spectacles on his favorite charger and feeding the charger excelsior. One word led to several million others, and under the goad of Mr. Flynn's scornful denunciations, Mr. Johnston lost his temper and revealed a chapter out of Mr. Flynn's past.

"That man is an imposter," Mr. Johnston exclaimed. "He adopted the name of Hurley one night many years ago so that he could engage in a fraudulent boxing match with his own brother, Mr. Splash Flynn. This man was his brother's manager and as manager he instructed his brother to lead with his right. And when the brother did so, this contemptible character tagged him on the countenance and knocked him insensible with a cross. The only saving feature of this disgraceful performance was that it came under the head of petty larceny from the customers, as the bout drew only $17."

Threatens Revenge by Proxy.

At this, Mr. Flynn's rage mounted and he threatened Mr. Johnston with violence by proxy after the custom of prize fight managers.

"One more word out of you and I will call my gladiator, Jack Renault, and Jackie will take a slug at your gladiator, Julius Okun," he threatened.

"You can't bluff me," Mr. Johnston said. "You get a promoter and my Julius will fight your Jackie any time for 30 per cent."

At this point the quarrel became so bitter that I walked away, leaving the feudists in a violent wrangle over the terms upon which Mr. Flynn's Jackie is to fight Mr. Johnston's Julius for the honor of the house of Flynn.

CHARLES MURPHY.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Any hopes that Michigan's basketball team may have entertained with regard to stopping Purdue's championship hopes were blasted today when "Stretch" Murphy and company ran through the Wolverine defense for a 35 to 26 win. It was Purdue's fourth straight Big Ten victory.

If the Wolverines still entertain any idea that they are capable of licking the Boilermakers, they have at least definitely decided that something will have to be done about that Murphy giant.

The game tonight might have been an even affair, for Chapman surprised all followers by outjumping the Purdue bean stalk, but the five baskets and one free throw which Murphy accounted for in the first half was the margin of victory.

Checks Michigan Rally.

In the second period he devoted his efforts to playing the Michigan backboard on the defense, and although he did not add to his scoring total, Murphy at least succeeded in checking the last minute rush of the Michigan team, which scored 13 points in the last few minutes.

Michigan played the Boilermakers off their feet at the start. In less than two minutes the score stood 8 to 1 against Purdue, but time out for reorganization was all that the Hoosiers needed. From that point on the home quintet was helpless before the backboard lambasting of the much touted pivot man.

Murphy also succeeded in crossing up the defense. Michigan continually was stopped with two of its own men fighting for the ball. Seldom did the team succeed in getting the ball off the board and jump tosses continually gave Purdue the ball.

Harmeson Tops Purdue Scoring.

All the glory of the battle was not confined to the Boilermakers' center. Harmeson handled the visitors' floor offensive during the greater part of the game and did a fine job of it, scoring six baskets and a free throw.

Michigan had its own redeeming feature despite the defeat. Benny Oosterbaan gave the home crowd its share of thrills. Despite Murphy's work under the basket, Benny's skill in backboard slapping totaled four baskets in the second half as well as two free shots. These, added to his five points of the first period, gave him high individual scoring honors with fifteen counters.

Eleven thousand saw the game. Lineup:

INDIANA SWAMPS IOWA

Coach Everett Dean evidently had the Hawks well scouted. Instead of using the usual short pass and working the ball in, Indiana on most occasions shot from a distance. Rarely did the Hoosiers play for a chance at close in work.

It was a thrilling game during the first ten minutes. After that, except for an Iowa spurt at the start of the second period, Indiana was never worried. It was merely a case of how many baskets Dean's players could total.

The only time Iowa had an edge was in the first half, when Wilcox counted a field goal and free throw to take a two point advantage. Johnstone and David registered six points at the start of the last half before Indiana scored.

BADGERS WHIP GOPHERS

Madison, Wis., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Back in form after losing to Illinois and Notre Dame in their last two games, Wisconsin outspeeded and outshot Minnesota in a Big Ten engagement here tonight, 38 to 18. Meanwell started pulling his regulars out of the fire early in the second period, and before the last gun he had used eleven men.

With the Rockford twins, Capt. Behr and Charley Andrews, leading the attack, Wisconsin jumped off to an early lead of 11 to 2. Stark, rugged Gopher forward, and Williams, center, shot a couple of baskets to make things interesting, but then Andrews collected a goal and two free throws and Behr got a basket and free throw to make the score 18 to 10, at half time.

Minnesota was held to a single basket and half a dozen free throws in the second period. The substitutes sent in by Dr. Meanwell put up a furious battle for the ball, and one of them, Lycan Miller, was ruled out after running up four personals in less than ten minutes. Miller's two spectacular dribbles the length of the floor for neat baskets provided the thrills of this half.

Tennis Chiefs Refuse Plea of Bill Tilden

a year ago, has slumped to fourth, while Johnny Hennessey of Indianapolis has climbed to fifth in the national list.

The passing of "Little Bill" Johnston, the game little Californian, from the ranks of the first ten, is the most notable feature of the new rankings. "Little Bill" competed but little last year aside from the Davis cup challenge round and was not given an official ranking for lack of sufficient data. Brian Norton, Eddie Chandler, Alfred Chapin, Tachieki Harada, and Dr. George King are others who have passed out of the select circle.

Sixth place is held by John Van Ryn of Orange, N. J., former Princeton star, while the remainder of the first ten is made up, in order, of Arnold Jones, John Doeg, Lewis White and Cranston Holman. White and Holman are the only ones who have invaded the select circle in previous years. Lucien Williams of Chicago dropped back to 27th place, while Emmet Pare, also of Chicago, is placed twenty-second.

Samuel H. Collom of Philadelphia was elected to succeed Jones W. Mersereau, for the last three years president of the U. S. L. T. A. Louis B. Dailey, New York, was named vice president; Harry S. Knox, Chicago, secretary, and Louis J. Carruthers, New York, treasurer. Harry S. Walsh, Chicago; Arthur Hellen, Washington; G. Peabody Gardner Jr., Boston, and William Rowland, Philadelphia, were elected delegates at large.

Urge Coöperation with Pros.

The meeting also adopted a resolution of the amateur rule committe urging the fostering of the U. S. Professional association, thus paving the way for possible open tournaments in the future. Any such tournaments, however, must be sanctioned by the U. S. L. T. A.

Martin Captures High Point Honors.

The University of Chicago recorded its second dual track and field triumph of the season from a Hoosier opponent last night when they defeated Purdue, 51½ to 34½, at Bartlett gym. A strong showing in the hurdles, shot put, and quarter mile run gave the locals the meet. O. J. Martin of Purdue took high scoring honors with firsts in both the half mile and mile runs.

Martin's performance in the mile was the feature of the evening. He turned in a time of 4:28 2-10 to beat Capt. Dick Williams of the Maroons, who finished second by about forty yards.

Jackson of Chicago and Wagner of Purdue fought out the closest race of the evening in the two mile, the former winning in 10:11 9-10. Summaries:

CLEVELAND FILES A $20,000 SUIT AGAINST BEARS

Cleveland, O., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Estimating a professional football game, with Red Grange as the star, worth $20,000 profit, the Cleveland Professional Football company filed suit for that amount against the Chicago Bears in Common Pleas court here today.

George A. Parratt, manager of the Cleveland professional team in 1925, charges that the Bears, with whom Grange began his professional gridiron career in that year, defaulted on an oral contract to play his team in December, 1925. The Bears went to Florida instead, according to Parratt's petition, resulting in a loss of $20,000 to the Cleveland team.

Both Grange and his manager, C. C. Pyle, are named in the suit. Stanley B. Wilson and William J. Hawley, attorneys for the Cleveland team, took a deposition today from Charles B. Coppen, owner of the Providence Steam Rollers, in which he said oral contracts were customary between teams in professional football leagues.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Miss Ella Popp, 2419 Burling street, was awarded $5.

The Question.

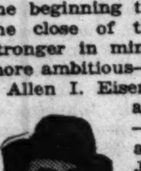
Do you think the Cubs will be as strong at the start of this season as they were at the close of the 1927 race?

Where Asked.

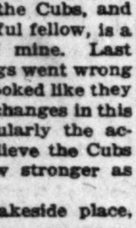
Clark street at Randolph.

The Answers.

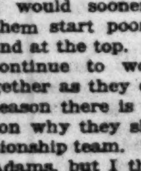
Arthur E. Swanson, Detroit, Mich., investments — I believe they will be equally as strong, if not stronger. They have made some changes which apparently will add strength. Then, too, most ball teams are stronger at the beginning than at the close of the season; they are stronger in mind, more enthusiastic, more ambitious—that's human nature.



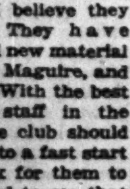
Allen I. Eisenstadt, 3245 Fullerton avenue, druggist-broker —I'll have to back Manager McCarthy. Besides John O. Seys, vice president of the Cubs, and a wonderful fellow, is a friend of mine. Last year things went wrong when it looked like they might win, but with the changes in this year's personnel, particularly the acquisition of Cuyler, I believe the Cubs will start well and grow stronger as the season progresses.



P. D. Lamson, 943 Lakeside place, insurance — I hope so. They started out wonderfully last year, but I would sooner have them start poorly and end at the top. If they continue to work together as they did last season there is no reason why they shouldn't have a championship team. They may miss Sparky Adams, but I think McCarthy will be able to plug the hole.



Ben Mark, 155 North Clark street, lawyer—I believe they will be. They have some good new material in Cuyler, Maguire, and Malone. With the best pitching staff in the league the club should get away to a fast start and I look for them to hold the pace. I was glad to see that Charlie Root came to terms.



Albert Sandler, 3148 West 15th street, chauffeur—I think they will be stronger. They have all their star 1927 pitchers and I look for Malone, their new hurler, to go big in the majors. The outfield was a little weak last

Signs O'Farrell to New Contract

Bobby O'Farrell, catcher and former manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Miss Arolene Edwards, 1617 Thome avenue, yesterday obtained a marriage license. They eluded reporters but it was learned at Miss Edwards' residence that the couple had not revealed the date for their wedding.

Grabiner Recites Batting Deeds of Lightnin' Rookie

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Well, it seems since they dug up that Carthaginian child's bank containing six copper pennies which the kid saved 2,500 years ago, a lot of mathematical strong men have been figuring up how much his descendants would now have if the half dozen coins had been deposited in a bank at 5½ per cent compound interest.

We read a full page editorial the other day which said the amount would be $3,600,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000—enough to purchase a ball of solid gold with a diameter 62,500,000,000 times the diameter of the world.

As we studied these figures we couldn't help thinking about the way Harry Grabiner, genial and efficient secretary of the White Sox, puts in his winter training season. Instead of figuring up sums of money, however, Harry uses bush league batting averages, but he can make the totals just as imposing.

For instance, if some one were to suggest to Mr. Grabiner that the Carthaginian child was a ball player with a batting average of .060 in the Phoenician league it wouldn't take Harry any time to accurately compute the maximum size of the ball park in which the Carthaginian child now could knock a home run every time he came to bat, either with or without the lively ball.

"A streak of Lightning!"
TIMOTHY HOLLOW
E.B.

This isn't to say that Harry is a fanciful or futile person. He's one of the shrewdest baseball men in the business. But for conditioning during the winter he finds nothing more soothing to his nerves or more bracing to his general well being than daily numerical calisthenics.

If you knew Harry you'd enjoy his constant effervescent optimism. For a young man with as many serious duties as he has, his unrequitted exuberance truly is inspiring.

Permit us to visualize a playlet opening in the executive offices at Comiskey park a January afternoon of any year. The dramatis personnae include Mr. Grabiner and a member of the baseball writers' union:

THE AUTHOR—What'd 'e ever do?

MR. G. [opening up his filing cabinet]—Well, last season he led the Wild Oats league in hitting. He was at bat 102 times and batted .420 against some of the best pitching in Alabama.

THE AUTHOR—But, Harry, ain't they got awfully short fences in the Wild Oats league?

MR. G.—What if they have? This lad weighs 180 pounds, is 21 years old, six feet two and a streak of lightning. Jack McGarlic writes us he's the best prospect he's seen in ten years.

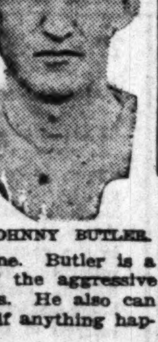
CURTAIN.

Mr. Fan, Step Up and Shake Hands with the New Cubs

Stray bits of information about some of Joe McCarthy's new Cubs whose names will help to decorate the sports pages for several weeks, and maybe longer.

Johnny Butler—Deemed by Boss McCarthy as the man who will prove sufficiently skilled to win the third base job from the other aspirants. This is Butler's third big league opportunity in a span of four years but the first in which he is going to have a shot at the position he wants to play. The Sox tried him at short in '25 and later Brooklyn bought him for cash and a half dozen players but employed him at short most of the time. Butler is a skilled fielder and of the aggressive type McCarthy favors. He also can be used at first base if anything happens to Capt. Grimm.

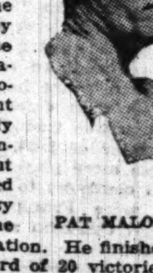


JOHNNY BUTLER.

Fred Maguire—For two years the outstanding youngster in the American association, the Cubs having given in the neighborhood of $30,000 for his services. The Giants uncovered him originally at Holy Cross college and later sent him to Toledo, but McGraw neglected to attach a string. A snappy fielder of the tall, rangy variety. Hit .326 for the Mudhens last season and had a fielding mark of .863 at second base.

Norman McMillan—An old timer coming back for another fling. Served up for several years on the infield of the New York Yanks and Boston Red Sox. Drafted last fall by the Cubs from the St. Paul club on the strength of his showing made during the season. He batted .305 and fielded .969 at second base for the Saints. Was in 137 of a record breaking number of double plays made by the team. McMillan can play either second or third.

Perce Lay Malone—Finished pitchers come up only with every blue moon but McCarthy thinks he has one in this fellow. Malone is one of those moundsmen who kick around for season after season from league to league because they can't locate the plate. Last season at Minneapolis this big right hander suddenly learned what control was all about and he blossomed into the Dazzy Vance of the American association. He finished the race with a record of 20 victories and 18 defeats, the while fanning over 200 batters.



PAT MALONE.

Granville Bush—Signed on the recommendation of his brother Guy who several years ago came up as green as a pea and has since developed into a National league notable. Granville is 21 and has been pitching for a military school down in Mississippi. Guy Bush made a pitcher of himself by sticking to it. The kid brother, says Guy, has the same stickativeness in his make up.

WISCONSIN BEATS MINNESOTA, 68-18 IN TRACK MEET

Badgers Win Eight of Ten Events.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Winning firsts in eight of the ten events and scoring a slam in the 880 yard run, Wisconsin track team swamped Minnesota in a Big Ten indoor meet this afternoon, 68 to 18.

Several of Coach Tom Jones' sophomores came through brilliantly in their conference debut. One of the second year men, Thompson, gave the crowd a thrill when he made a fast finish to tie Johnny Petaja, veteran Badger distance runner, at the end of the mile gallop.

Ziese, Milwaukee, another sophomore, took the forty yard high hurdles by a close margin from his teammate, Phalmeyer, after Phalymer had been set back a yard for jumping the gun. Larry Shomaker, Herrin, Ill., football lineman, making his initial appearance in a track suit, beat out the grid captain-elect, Rube Wagner, in the shot put. Larson, a sprinter, who took the forty yard dash, was the other sophomore to distinguish himself.

The Gophers captured the 440 yard dash when Catlin led Ramsay across the line, while Crowley was first in the pole vault. Summary:

In Which Holleran Yell Gives 20 Tips on Refinement

The Story of Young Insults as Told

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

New York, Feb. 11.—[Special.]—I notice that refinement is spreading like hot cakes among the ranks of the pugilists of the fistic arena, and you have no idea how it pleases me to see this fine, clean sport receiving recognition from socially exclusive society, as I was one of the pioneers in this work. It has always been my idea that you could take almost any fairly smart bum of the fistic pastime and make a refined bonvivant out of them if they would take it seriously and make an effort not to be ignorant for fifteen minutes a day.

You can purchase books where it tells all about refinement in twenty lessons with interesting pictures showing the refined way to do things and the ignorant way. So it seems positively preposterous to me for any bum with a shred of ambition coursing in his veins not to study the subject in a serious way.

Owe it to Traditions.

In the first place, they owe it to the fine traditions of the splendid heritage of posterity to do everything they can to interest exclusive society in the sport of the resined square, because they are the kind of people who buy the forty dollar seats and this is a very wholesome thing for the best interests of the sport, but, furthermore, these people spend most of their time at gay society functions and they never get any exercise, so I think it is a good thing for them, too, to set down and watch two highly trained young artists of the fistic science pasting each other in their kisser because it shows them that they could win laurels of acclaim, too, if they would live right.

I did my pioneer work in this line some years ago, when I was the proprietor of a bum by the name of Young Insults, but, like all pioneers, it seems I was a sucker and all I did was to prepare the way for the refined bums of today. I thought up the idea of refining Young Insults because he was always going around insulting people and it did not make any difference to him whether you were an officer of the law or a taxi driver of the most exclusive millionaire's wife in town if he decided to insult you.

So one day I got him the book where it positively guarantees to refine the most ignorant kind of a bum inside of a month and told him he would have to spend fifteen minutes a day reading the lessons, of course; he immediately cracked some insult at me, but I ignored it and went on to tell him how it would really be a great thing for him to get into society, as most of the exclusive millionaires have got beautiful daughters. I told him how these daughters get weary of the gay whirl of debauchery and no-account saps of society men and long for some good natured, high spirited young he-man of his type who is making their own way in the manly art of the squared circle to take them away from it all. It was my purpose to refine him just enough so he would not be so insulting, but when I told him this about the society debutantes he said "Give me that book" and made a grab for it like he was going to clip about ten days off the record and get refined in ten days flat.

My Escutcheon Gets in Trouble.

Well, just about this time there was some misunderstanding with the government about the war tax on some gate receipts and the government seemed to think I was not doing just the right thing. This was such a blow to my escutcheon that I went to a friend's house and stayed indoors for a whole month, worrying about the misunderstanding. In the meantime my lawyer took the matter up with our congressman and the congressman explained the whole affair to the government. Then, rather than to have any misunderstanding about the matter, I donated the amount of the misunderstanding to the congressman's campaign fund and my escutcheon was fixed up again.

I then went looking for my bum and found him sitting in the gymnasium reading the refinement book. He was way over near the last chapter. So I said, "Well, old chap, I am fearfully pleased to see that you have perused that little tome way over to the last chapter."

"Thanks, awfully, old fellow," my bum replied in a remarkably refined way, "that is frightfully decent of you, but really I found it jolly interesting, upon my word."

I was so surprised at hearing that that I could hardly believe my eyes, so I grabbed the book and gave him an examination, just picking questions here and there.

"What would you do if you dropped your fork?" I inquired, and Young Insults replied, "If you drop your fork, you do not pick it up yourself, as that is ignorant, but you should holler for the waiter as that is the refined method."

"All right," I stated. "Then what do you do if your hostess leaves the room?"

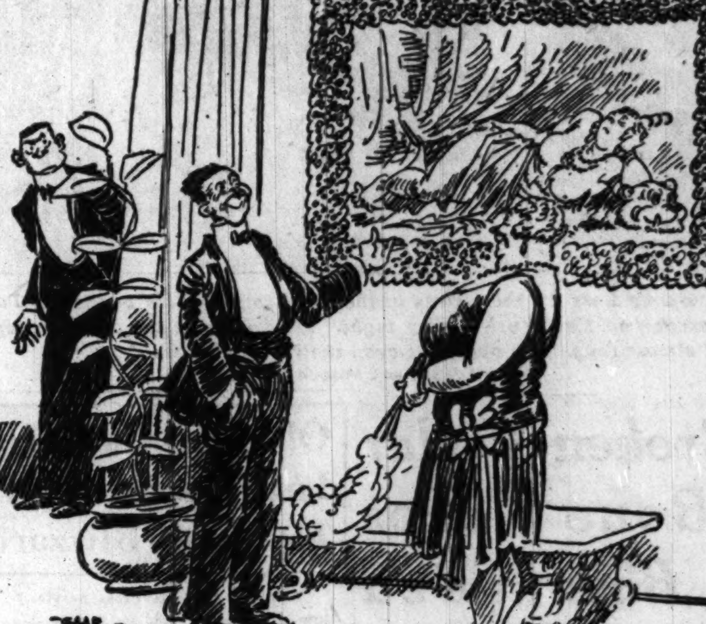
"Well now," he responded, "I was puzzled about that because I want to know if they have hostesses in exclusive society mansions the same as they do in a dance hall."

Our Society Debut.

I explained that hostess is the exclusive way of saying the landlady or the lady of the house, and went on with the examination, and my bum got an average of about eighty, which struck me as very encouraging.

The next day, a book agent told me he had an order for a bum about the size of Young Insults, to go to a function at an exclusive society mansion out in the suburbs and box some debauched young bon vivant from London, England, by the name of Sir Vivian Tewksworthy, as this bon vivant was considered a very good fighter and almost as good as some of the bums of the roped arena. We were offered an honorarium of $250 for this work, but the booking agent was full of dubiosity as he knew how Young Insults went around insulting everybody.

"Ha, ha," I laughed confidently, "you do not have to worry about that kind of dubiosity, as my bum will not only give this bon vivant a paste in the kisser, but out gentleman him as well."



"Is that a picture of you, hostess?"

Study All Night.

And just to make certain, we spent all that night studying the refinement book together. Of course, I did not really need it because refinement is something that sticks to you and you cannot cast aside like an old chew. But I was afraid I might be rusty on some points.

So the night of the contest we went to the mansion and walked right in, wearing our tuxedo suits and impressing everybody with our good manners and democratic ways. I walked right over to the hostess and started talking about art, as they had a painting of a big fat lady laying on a tiger rug without much clothes on. The lady was very pretty, although I do not like them as beefy as that, myself.

However, I wished to pay a compliment to my hostess, so I inquired:

"Is that a picture of you, hostess?"

The hostess laughed at the compliment and replied: "Ha, ha, my dear sir, no, that is not I, as that is just one of the noods."

"Well," I inquired jokingly, "where do these noods live?" And I made a playful motion like I was going to write the noods' telephone number on my cuff.

Young Insults Makes a Social Error.

So the gay function went along nicely until all of a sudden, there was a yell and the hostess' young daughter bounced into the room screaming.

"That terrible Mr. Insults," she stated; "that insignificant, contemptible low-down bum, dragged me out into the hall, and told me he was a high-spirited, refined young he-man, making his own way in the squared circle and he was going to take me away from the gay whirl of debauchery and dumb saps of society bon vivants. Then he grabbed a book out of his pocket and started reading the refined way to propose to a society debutante."

Well, at that Sir Vivian Tewksworthy tore into the room and let fly one paste, catching my poor bum square on the kisser and knocking him prostrate in a state of unconsciousness. Then the rest of the bon vivants grabbed the both of us and gave us the bum's rush out of the mansion and we did not even get our honorarium.

After that I gave up trying to refine this bum as he was just too low grade to understand such radical novelties, but I have always thought that my own polished ways with the hostess sowed the seeds of the cornerstone for fistic pugilists who are now breaking into society like wildfire.

TRIBUNE BOXING TOURNEY ENTRIES PASS 200 MARK

Tickets Go on Sale Early Next Week.

With more than 200 entries now received for THE TRIBUNE's annual amateur boxing tourney, to be held at the Ashland Boulevard Auditorium on March 5, 6, 7, and 8, boxers are becoming interested in the fights, which may develop material for the American Olympic boxing team.

Out of town amateurs, particularly, are showing increased interest because all fighters who win championships and who live outside of Chicago will have their expenses to the tourney paid. This inducement is increasing the out of town entries and will furnish keener competition for Chicago contestants. This expense allowance will not include that incurred by hiring sparring partners.

Expect 500 Entries.

Most of the entries received so far are from individuals who have no club affiliation. The universities, colleges, academies, and clubs have not nominated their teams, which will be chosen during the next ten days after a series of tryouts. When the complete entry is in at least 500 boxers will be nominated. Of this number 400 are certain to appear for the preliminary rounds. Such an entry will insure spectators of plenty of action on each night.

Members of the Forty and Eight, which will receive all profits of the show to build a cabin for convalescent veterans of the world war, are encouraging the amateurs to enter. Col. A. A. Sprague is chairman of the committee which will receive the profits and it is estimated that $5,000 will be realized.

Harry Berz, local amateur official, who is classifying the entries, announces that the entries include some very good boxers. Berz requests that all names be written plainly and that fighters refrain from using professional surnames, such as Kid, Knockout, and Young.

Roy E. Davis, chairman of the registration committee of the Central A. A. U., will have assistants on hand each night of the tourney to look after the registrations of those who are not members of the A. A. U. No boxer will be permitted to compete who has not taken out a card in the governing body of amateur athletics. Such a card can be secured for twenty-five cents. This is the only requirement for entry.

Tickets on Sale Tuesday.

Tickets will go on sale at THE TRIBUNE's public service office at Madison and Dearborn streets not later than Tuesday. Admission seats for the entire four days may be purchased at this time. The prices will be fifty and seventy-five cents and one dollar. There will not be any government tax, as Mrs. Mabel Reinecke, collector of internal revenue in the Chicago district, has ruled that such a show, which is not staged for personal gain, is not taxable.

Officials of teams are requested not to wait too long before sending in their entries. The final list must be sent to the printer so that programs, which will be distributed free of charge, can be prepared and be distributed on the opening night.

Individuals can make entry by clipping the blank from the sports pages, while team nominations should be made by classifying the boxers on a single piece of paper, which must be signed by an official of the team.

N. DAME DEFENSE STOPS BUTLER; IRISH WIN, 32-24

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Notre Dame tonight scored its first basketball victory over Butler, 32 to 24. It was a roughly played contest, Crowe, flashy Irish forward, being knocked out at the initial tipoff and Smith, Notre Dame guard, being floored a minute later.

Notre Dame showed some of the defensive skill which beat Wisconsin Tuesday, holding the downstaters to one chance at the basket during the first ten minutes. Butler was baffled by the short and fast passing attack of the Irish who kept the ball most of the time through the first period. The count at the half was Notre Dame 19, Butler 8.

Hamilton, relief center substituting for Colerick, who is on the bench with a fractured wrist, was the star of the game. The lanky center mixed in every play and boosted the Irish score with five field goals and one toss from the foul stripe. Holz, who went in for Hildebrand, was high for the Bulldogs with ten points. SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY DON MAXWELL.

There is a silly old notion still prevalent among the lower classes of society that the rules of boxing make the sport brutal and unrefined.

Some folks still believe that when one boxer knocks another boxer down the referee counts 10. If the prostrate boxer hasn't gotten up before the ten is tolled he is considered down for good or bad which ever way you happen to look at it.

Other folks, equally ignorant, consider that when one boxer hits another boxer below the belt line the blow is called a foul and the boxer who delivered the wallop is the loser. "He lost on a foul" is an old saying.

There's really no reason for Chicago boxing fans to be deluded by these obsolete notions. Belief in them may be excused elsewhere but the Illinois boxing commission has done its best to spread the light of a new era.

◆

Recall, for instance, that interesting seventh round in the Dempsey-Tunney fight. Dempsey, you'll remember, socked Gene so hard that he slid down on his back and lay there for a second or so before feeling able to pull himself up to a sitting position. Under the old and obsolete rules Gene would have been permitted to lie or sit for just 10 seconds.

But under the new and more gentlemanly customs of the Illinois boxing commission, Gene was given a good fat 14 seconds to clear his head.

Of course Gene might have been able to get up before Referee Barry conted ten; he says he could. And he might have whipped Dempsey anyway. He says he would. But it certainly didn't hurt him any to get the extra sitting time. So you see the courtesy of the Illinois boxing commission in changing the time from 10 to 14 seconds proved a fine thing for boxing. It made sure that a scholar and a gentleman would hold the championship.

Now recall the recent Taylor-Sangor fight. In the seventh round Joey plunked Buddie with an extremely questionable plunk. Taylor claimed a foul. A few seconds later Taylor sat down and the question popped up: "Was Taylor fouled?"

In the old days and under the old rules the referee would have had to decide right then and there whether the blow was foul or fair.

But the crude old days are gone. Under the enlightened régime of the Illinois boxing commission the procedure is neither so simple nor so brutal. The referee chatted with the chairman of the commission, Taylor chatted with the referee, the commission's doctor examined Taylor, and the the commission chatted with itself. And after several seconds of chatting the commission decided to give Mr. Taylor five minutes to reconsider his rash claim of foul.

I forget to mention the judges. They also conferred with the commission, the referee and their consciences. But as they reached no conclusion and as they afterwards disagreed, their conferences really didn't count.

Well, after five minutes Mr. Taylor hadn't been converted, that is he still thought he had been fouled, so the commission ordered the referee to raise Joey Sangor's right hand and the announcer to proclaim him the victor.

◆

Some folks didn't quite get the logic of this, but that was because they were reasoning along the old theory that the boxer who hit the other boxer either hit him low and foul, or high and fair, and that the decision lay with the referee.

These folks didn't realize that the Illinois boxing commission has ruled the old rules are passé.

Of course, Joey was whipping Buddie and Joey probably would have won the decision anyhow. But it certainly didn't hurt him any to get the decision in the seventh round, so you see the courtesy of the Illinois boxing commission again helped to prove that boxing isn't the brutal sport that the lower classes think it is.

The only phase of the matter that smacks of unfairness is the difference in time given Tunney and time given Taylor. Gene didn't claim a foul, but then he might have. And to give him only four seconds extra and Taylor five minutes is a piece of partiality that should be a bit too raw for fans who believe in equality for all.

The explanation is that the commission wasn't quite so enlightened last September as it was last week. You really can't say just how long a sitting boxer may be permitted to sit next summer. There are limits, of course, to everything and I'd say offhand that even the commission will stop at an hour. That should be fair enough for any one.

If a boxer can't get up in an hour he ought to be considered down for ever.

◆

And while the commission is considering the welfare of the boxers, it ought not forget the convenience of the fans. After all, they pay $7.70 apiece to see the show. It's rather boresome to idly sit and wait for a sitting boxer to get his wind. A good vaudeville act could be put on; a dance or a song.

The customers could be entertained, the sitting boxer could enjoy a quiet laugh, the referee could chat with the judges.

And if the act proved a little longer than scheduled the commission could extend the time.

SCHOOLBOY ICE TEAM READY FOR EASTERN RACES

Saranac Events Carded Feb. 15 and 16.

Chicago's schoolboy ice skating team, composed of sixteen of the best racers in the city, will leave tonight for Saranac Lake, N. Y., where the Adirondack gold cup championship tournament opens on Wednesday. The team will compete Wednesday and Thursday at Saranac lake and then move over to Lake Placid, N. Y. for races on Friday and Saturday.

The team was selected by members of the executive ice skating committee appointed by Mayor W. H. Thompson after a series of trial races which brought more than 10,000 skaters into competition. The trial races were conducted by the committee working in coöperation with the Chicago Playground council. Races were held at each playground. Then district meets were held in which the winners in the playgrounds' individual meets competed and finally a city-wide final tourney was staged in which only the district meet winners yere allowed to compete.

Team Has Three Divisions.

The boys selected on the team are classified according to three age groups. The juvenile division contains five boys all under 14 years of age. The junior group has five boys under 16 years, while the intermediate division has six boys under 18 years. Following is the personnel of the team:

JUVENILE.

Wilbur Marks, Senn High school.
George Moore, Austin High school.
Stanley Baginski, Reilly Grammar school.
William Burgmeier, Kelvyn Park Junior High school.
Wallace Fee Jr., Belding Grammar school.

JUNIOR.

Edward Stundl, Harrison High school.
James Bentley, Lane High school.
William Beck, Waller High school.
Robert Moran, St. Patrick's High school.
J. Norman Aff, Our Lady of Mercy High.

INTERMEDIATE.

Vinson Sahlin, Schurz High school.
Arthur Conroy, Tilden High school.
Herbert Hansen, Lane High school.
Raymond Ward, Tilden High school.
Edward Schroeder, Tilden High school.
Douglas Ellison, North Park college.

A special car will carry the team east tonight. In addition to the skaters, Walter Wright, vice chairman of the mayor's committee; H. J. Fischer, secretary of the committee, and Theodore A. Gross, director of sports, will make the trip. John Mock, director at Henry playground, also is making the trip as coach of the team. Other Chicagoans in the party include Walter Sonnenleiter and Jay Watt, officials of the Interstate A. A.

Arrive Tomorrow Night.

Plans call for the team to arrive tomorrow night at Saranac lake and a workout for the boys will be held Tuesday. The tourney starts on Wednesday afternoon. Officials of the committee have attempted to schedule other meets for the Chicago team, but up to the present time, none of the five cities to which challenges were sent have responded. The cities challenged for schoolboy tourneys included New York, Cleveland, Detroit, Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh.

Four other Chicago skaters, all senior men and selected by the Western Skating association, also will compete at Lake Placid and Saranac lake. They are Herbert Knudten of the Northwest Skating club; Henry Nelson, Midwest A. C.; Edward Jacobson of Opal A. A., and Wallace Mitchell of the Henry Playground A. A.

These skaters already are on their way east, having competed yesterday in a series of events in Detroit.

Peltzer Has No Alibi for His Defeat

Dr. Otto Peltzer, the German middle distance runner who was defeated by Ray Conger of the Illinois A. C. in a 1,000 meter race at the Chicago Riding club last Friday night, will leave for New York on Wednesday. The German will run in the Knights of Columbus games on Feb. 29, when he hopes to redeem himself for the setback by Conger.

Peltzer, who holds the world's half mile record at 1:51 3-5, offered no excuses for his defeat by the former Iowa State college athlete. The German repeated the statements he made following his defeat by saying the track was too soft and the turns too sharp. He lauded Conger and hopes to meet the tri-color club star in the Olympic games to be held this summer at Amsterdam, Holland.

FOOTBALL RULES MAKERS INDORSE NEW TIMEPIECE

Inaccurate timing, long an evil on the gridiron, will be minimized greatly in the opinion of prominent coaches and athletic directors by the use of the new 75 minute watch designed by J. J. Lipp of Chicago, Western conference official. The watch is so accurate in clicking off the exact time and is so protected by safety devices that it is said to be fool proof.

Adoption of the watch was discussed at the recent meeting of the football rules committee but no special recommendation was passed. Members of the committee, however indorsed the timepiece as individuals.

E. K. Hall, chairman of the rules committee, comments as follows: "I have examined Mr. Lipp's football stop watch with great interest and it looks to me as though he had found the answer. Just how he worked out the combination of what seems to me as a layman to be really two watches in one I do not understand. It ought to reduce the responsibilities of timing to a minimum."

A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago, a member of the rules committee, says of the watch: "Mr. Lipp should get a lot of satisfaction out of the results of his thought and effort and expense in his new watch. I regard it as a splendid contribution toward producing fair play through accurate timing."

The new football timer consists of two separate and distinct mechanisms, one for registering the "time of play" and the other for recording "time out." A 75 minute dial represents the four 15 minute periods and the 15 minute intermission between halves.

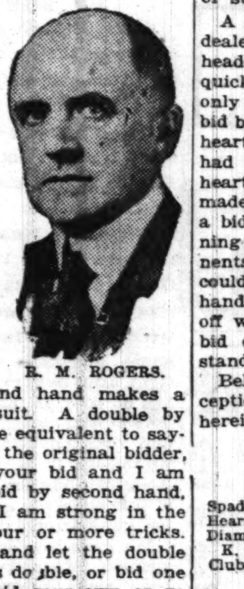
WHAT YOU OUGHT TO KNOW ABOUT BRIDGE

BY R. M. ROGERS.

Last week we gave the rule which distinguishes an informatory from a business double. Doubling one no trump, or one, two, or three of a suit, before partner has bid or doubled is informatory, other doubles are business doubles to defeat the bidding opponents.



R. M. ROGERS.

There are three exceptions to the rule and we showed the first one last Sunday. The second is as follows:

Dealer makes a suit bid and second hand makes a higher bid of a suit. A double by third hand would be equivalent to saying to his partner, the original bidder, "I can't support your bid and I am weak in the suit bid by second hand, the opponent, but I am strong in the other two suits, four or more tricks. Take your choice and let the double stand as a business double, or bid one of my suits, or rebid your own or go no trump."

As the game of bridge is one in which tricks count, the bids and doubles should show the number of tricks in the hand and, if possible, where they are. That is, in what suit or suits. Many a game hand even in minor suits is not played simply because one or both of the partners don't know how to discover whether the hand should be played at no trump or suit and how many to bid.

A hand played last Monday showed dealer with a five card heart suit headed by the ace, king, one side quick trick, and a guarded queen, but only one little spade. Fearing a spade bid by adversaries, the dealer bid three hearts, calculating that if his partner had the assumed three tricks the heart bid could be made. Game was made with the hand at hearts while a bid of only one heart in the beginning would have allowed the opponents to bid a spade, at which they could have gone game. But the spade hand was not strong enough to start off with a bid of three, and thus the bid of three hearts was allowed to stand and the game was won with it.

North:
Spades—10, 4.
Hearts—A, Q, 10, 5.
Diamonds—7, 4.
Clubs—A, K, J, 9, 4.

West:
Spades—Q, 8, 5.
Hearts—J, 9.
Diamonds—A, K, Q, 8, 2.
Clubs—10, 8, 2.

East:
Spades—J, 3, 2.
Hearts—8, 7, 3.
Diamonds—10, 9, 5, 3.
Clubs—7, 6, 3.

South:
Spades—A, K, 9, 7, 6.
Hearts—K, 6, 4, 2.
Diamonds—J, 6.
Clubs—Q, 5.

THE BIDDING.

SOUTH.	WEST.	NORTH.	EAST.
1 Spades.	2 Diamonds.	Double.	Pass.
2 Hearts.	Pass.	Pass.	Pass.

Without support from his partner, west might have bid one more, but north would have raised the heart bid and stopped the bidding.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

PROSELYTING.

WE find collegiate bodies governing athletics from time to time drafting stricter regulations to make sure that athletes of prowess do not receive financial aid or encouragement because of that athletic prowess. Most of us know that many of them do.

The Wake has long since ceased to regard "recruiting" as a direct menace. Conditions are better now than twenty or even ten years ago. The one year residence rule and scholastic eligibility, however, have done more than any arbitrary standard of amateurism to clear up the situation. Whether or not a prep star receives direct or indirect aid he must at least be a bona fide student. To our mind that pretty nearly defines amateurism.

Perhaps some of the purists would not approve our absence of horror and utter dejection when we hear that an enthusiastic alumnus or alumni body has made a loan to an athlete short of funds. Our failure to disapprove extends, however, only to cases where a boy working his way wholly or in part through college is short of funds because he has given to team practice the hours which otherwise he might have employed clerking in the library, tending furnaces, or other jobs found about educational institutions.

Nor does our approval extend to college athletic departments which need many "clock winders" and "gymnasium sweepers." Clocks must be wound and gymnasiums swept. A few worthy boys may need and do the work, but certainly not a whole squad. In these days of big stadia and field houses the incentive to win is great. Any college attempting "too much" along that line by improper methods soon finds difficulty in filling its schedules, so a ready corrective is at hand.

We always have had the question of "recruiting." We always will have it, so long as Mr. Old Grad desires so keenly to see his team win. But The Wake thinks the situation will never get out of hand so long as college authorities are sincere in their own repressive measures and in enforcing the residence rule and scholarship standard, especially the latter.

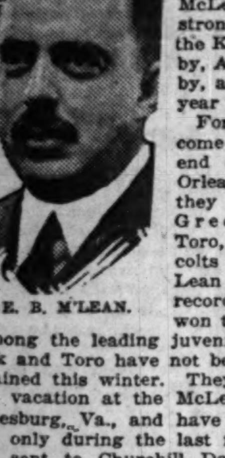
McLEAN ADDS TO STRENGTH OF HIS DERBY HAND

Time Maker, Algol Make Good Winter Records.

BY FRENCH LANE.



E. B. M'LEAN.

The sudden development at New Orleans of the colts Time Maker and Algol, both sons of The Porter, gives Edward B. McLean an extra strong hand for the Kentucky Derby, American Derby, and other 3 year old fixtures.

For when they come north at the end of the New Orleans season they will join Greenock and Toro, two other colts in the McLean barn, whose records last year won them a place among the leading juveniles. Greenock and Toro have not been raced or trained this winter. They have been on vacation at the McLean farm at Leesburg, Va., and have been taken up only during the last few days to be sent to Churchill Downs, where their Derby prep will begin.

Greenock and Toro will have to gain their Derby support from the records they made as 2 year olds. And many times a star 2 year old becomes a very ordinary horse in his 3 year old campaign. Algol and Time Maker have demonstrated their ability since turning three, and while it may have been an ordinary lot of 3 year olds they have beaten in New Orleans, they at least know how to win.

Of this pair I like Time Maker's way of going best. Algol is one of those sluggish beginners, although a stretch runner much on the order of his daddy, The Porter. Time Maker not only runs in the stretch, but has plenty of early speed to carry him clear of the early crowding which usually comes in big Derby fields. A tall rangy fellow, he was resting and growing last season, while most of those in his division were being raced and trained extensively. He looks like a running horse that will be able to carry weight and run any distance they send him.

In his first start after winning his maiden race he simply toyed with such colts as William Penn, Galahad, and the other good ones at New Orleans. It is true he didn't have much weight up, but his margin of victory was much greater than the weight advantage. And he was running under stout restraint all the way.

The fine showing of the McLean 3 year olds, the good race Jock ran in the New Orleans handicap, and the class of some of the 2 year olds in the McLean barn give importance to this young sire, The Porter. Unless all signs fail he is going to be among the leading sires of America this year. If his fine band of 3 year olds can be kept on edge for the long series of rich races in this division he may give old Broomstick, Fair Play, Man o' War, and other famous American stallions a close race for leading honors.

The Porter was a great race horse and produced winners soon after he was retired to the stud. He was the winner of twenty-six races and $73,866 during his racing career, which dates back to 1917 and 1918. He won the Laurel stakes, beat Exterminator in the Harford county stakes, won it the second time, and beat the good horse Boniface, and has many other old fixtures in Kentucky and Maryland to his credit.

The Porter is by Sweep and out of Ballett Girl a fine mixture of American and English blood. Ballett Girl was by St. Leonards-Cerito and was a half sister to the great horse Ballot. This line goes back through St. Blaise, Hermit and traces to Lexington.

The Porter's sire Sweep comes down through that good sturdy American line of Ben Brush, Bramble, and Bonnie Scotland and on Sweep's dam side there is the blood of Domino and Himyar.

Jockey Eddie Ambrose who has been riding the McLean horses this winter is given credit for keeping Algol's real ability hidden so long from the betting public at New Orleans. He was able to draw three close finishes with the 3 year old, so close that most of the spectators believed Algol was lucky to win. The first time when Algol was at 5 to 1 in the betting he came from behind and beat Elizabeth a neck. In his next start Ambrose got Algol up just in time to score by a narrow margin from Edward R. Bradley's Beauregard.

Then came another neck victory over Rosinante. Few better finishes ever were ridden and after the third triumph Ambrose told some of his acquaintances he could have won all three of the races by much wider margins.

William Penn's Driving Finish Wins New Orleans Feature

New Orleans, La., Feb. 11.—[Special.] — Showing a decided improvement over his recent effort, William Penn scored a head victory today in the Lincoln handicap, a mile race for three year olds, on a fast track at the Fair Grounds. C. T. Worthington's colt galloped the mile in 1:39 4-5 to beat out Elizabeth and Algol, the favorite, in a driving finish.

In the first half mile Doc and Ancient Mariner raced each other into the ground, and after drawing away for a lead of five lengths, their early efforts began to tell on them. As they swung into the stretch both quit badly and Algol rushed into the lead.

Algol came around the field and appeared on his way to victory, but faltered when William Penn came with a burst of speed with Elizabeth a stride behind. Elizabeth was second, half a length ahead of Algol.

Patsy Jane took the secondary feature, third on the program, leading the odds on favorite, Oh Susanna, by a head. W. Garner, who had the mount on Oh Susanna, was given a riding lesson by Pichon, on Patsy Jane. Garner put up a timid ride, taking back at the far turn and then bringing the mare around the leaders in the stretch.

Hunters Hail the Springer Spaniel All Around Dog

BY BOB BECKER.

Is the English springer spaniel the answer to the sportsman's demand for an all around dog?

During the last three years the ability of the springer has been demonstrated at an increasing number of field trials and also in actual hunting, as hundreds of these cheery little workers have been sold to hunters and many have been imported to raise the standards of American bred dogs. As sportsmen have watched the springers work on both feathered and furred game, and have seen how these efficient little dogs retrieve both in water and on land, as the springer has shown that he will smash through thick cover and rout anything from a rabbit to woodcock, it is not surprising that American hunters are beginning to see in this breed the answer to their search for an all around dog.

We have been hunting with springer spaniels for several seasons. We have been right behind them when they were working through alder thickets, bramble patches, heavy growth of weeds, hedges, broad valleys, and other types of game cover. We have seen them put out rabbits, pheasants, woodcock, and quail, retrieve these, and also swim for ducks or "hunt dead" for cripples in tules and heavy marsh vegetation. And having followed the trails blazed by these merry little workers, we are pretty well convinced that the springer is mighty close to what the average sportsman wants in a dog.

Today much of our upland game has disappeared. Quail shooting is more difficult to get now than in former years. In many states the prairie chicken has gone and the pheasant is taking its place. Grouse shooting is not what it used to be. In many states it's now a case of mixed hunting for the sportsman of moderate means. A few days on ducks and rabbits whenever one can get away, pheasants for several days during the season, and sometimes [if a fellow is lucky] a jacksnipe hunt or two. Quail and prairie chicken are for the more fortunate boys who live in states where these birds still are fairly plentiful, or for sportsmen who have the time and money for trips to the quail and chicken country where pointers and setters have been and probably will be for all time the most indispensable workers.

SPRINGER SPANIEL.

But for this mixed hunting give us the springer. He'll work rabbits and pheasants at the same time, "spring" them within range of the gun and then retrieve. He's not the greatest duck dog in the world, but he'll retrieve ducks in fine style and, in addition, one can whistle him up for a day on rabbits, a day's sport with pheasants, a day in the marsh or what have you?

AMSTERDAM TO OPEN OLYMPIC GAMES MAY 17

Winter Competition Ends This Month.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Formal opening of competition in the Olympic games at Amsterdam, Holland, will take place May 17, the American Olympic committee announces as it continues its plans for the trials which are to select the team to represent the United States. The ice skating races will be conducted in Switzerland this month, but they merely precede the grand opening.

The inaugural event will be hockey, May 17 to 26. From May 27 to June 10 football will be played, and from this latter date to Aug. 12 there will be some form of activity going on at all times. Following is the program:

May 17 to 26—Hockey.
May 27 to June 10—Football.
July 28 to 29—Weight lifting.
July 29 to Aug. 11—Fencing.
July 29 to Aug. 5—Track and field.
July 30 to Aug. 5—Wrestling.
July 31 to Aug. 4—Pentathlon.
Aug. 2 to 9—Yachting.
Aug. 4 to 7—Cycling.
Aug. 4 to 11—Swimming.
Aug. 5—Lacrosse.
Aug. 6 to 10—Rowing.
Aug. 7 to 11—Boxing.
Aug. 8 to 10—Gymnastics.
Aug. 9 to 10—Equestrian sports.
Aug. 12—Closing ceremony.

Concentrate on Track.

United States will concentrate on track field athletics. This country will be represented in practically every sport, but our teams never have been successful in some branches of the competition.

Lawson Robertson of Pennsylvania will be in charge of the American track and field team, a position he held four years ago when the U. S. athletes won decisively. The Penn coach will be assisted by other leading track and field teachers who are noted for their ability to develop record breaking performers.

It is understood sectional intercollegiate outdoor track and field championships will serve as tryouts for the university and college performers.

Watch All Important Meets.

The Olympic committee will take careful note of every meet of importance held in the country. In the past certain athletes were unable to compete in the final tests because of illness or injury. Their performances previous to the trials had been so good they were chosen for the team regardless of the final trials.

The usual number of outdoor relays will be held early in the spring. These will be followed by dual meets, and then will come the sectional intercollegiates late in May. The National Collegiate A. A. and National A. A. U. championships will be held in June.

The American track and field team then will be selected and the entire squad is expected to sail for Holland the latter part of June, so that the athletes may become acclimated before the opening events, July 29.

The Mineralite quintet—S. Thoma, Steers, F. Thoma, Kartheiser, and Collier—holds a commanding lead in the Randolph Bowling league, having won 44 games and lost only 16 in competition with the best bowlers of the city and perhaps in the country. They are averaging 1,000, which is exceeded only by the Boyle Valves' 1017 average and equaled only by the Krem Kos, the second place teams.

Lenzen continues to top the individual averages. He is toppling the pins at a 211 clip. Carlson is second with 208, and Murray third with 206. Standings:

The Alberti Jewelers ladies team leads the Duke Eyelers of Cleveland by 149 pins in their inter-city match, having gained their advantage at Cleveland. The two teams will continue their bombardment of the pins in the concluding engagement at the Randolph alleys this afternoon at 1 o'clock and "a hot contest is looked for," says the press notice from Bensinger.

With a record of 42 won and 24 lost the Mayer Furnitures are setting the pace in the North End Traveling league. Krem-Ko's are entrenched in second place with the Puritan Malts third. Outstanding team events of the week were the Malt's 3,118 total with Jule Lellinger leading with 672; the T. J. Crowe's 3,020 and the Bleck Acme 3,024. The standing:

This mark displaced Jack Sloss' 675, which had stood since Oct. 7. O. Krueger clings to high average honors with 187, with E. Cowen, 185; D. Munhall, 183, and C. Wilson, 181, his principal rivals. H. Bushling, in fifth place with 180, completes the list of those with averages of 180 or over.

COUNTY SEEKS TO ASCERTAIN GAS TAX SHARE

State Holds Up Data on 1927 Excise.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

Cook county officials have thus far failed to obtain from the state administration definite figures on the gasoline tax collections made between July 1 and Dec. 31, 1927.

One of the reasons for desiring an accurate statement of the money to be returned to the county as its half portion of gas tax payments is that the county expects to expend this revenue on highways that will not come within the state aid system—probably on streets within the city of Chicago.

Inquiry at the office of the state treasurer yesterday brought unofficial estimates of the total gas tax collection for the period, and the sum which properly should be allotted to Cook county.

Amount May Be $1,240,000.

According to this estimate, made at Springfield, the total amount of collections was $6,250,000. Of this about $50,000 has been claimed for refunds.

Under the law the counties are to receive back one-half the amount paid in, which fixes Cook county's share at about $1,240,000 for the six months. This computation is made upon the basis that this community paid 40 per cent of the gasoline tax. Officials of motor fuel concerns, however, are of the opinion that Cook county, when all returns are in, will be shown to have purchased more than 40 per cent of taxable gasoline. This is owing to the fact, they say, that automobile users in the metropolitan area employ gasoline more liberally than those of the rural districts.

The estimates of the returns from the tax, although nothing definite could be offered concerning the time an official statement and payment to the counties would be made, offer a basis for figuring what the special tax burden will mean to the average automobile owner.

Costs Motorists $10 a Year.

According to the estimate Cook county motorists paid approximately $2,480,000 to the state as gasoline tax. Assuming that the motor census of the county shows 500,000 vehicles, the added tax, at an average, will amount to nearly $5 for six months. Carried out to a twelve months' basis on this assumption, the added tax burden to the motorists of this community will be approximately $10 a year.

This places upon the motorists of Chicago operating an average powered car the following charges: State license, $10; city license, $12; gasoline tax, $10; personal property tax, $15 [if the owner is not a tax dodger], or a total of $47 for the privilege of owning and operating a car.

Overhead Nearly $100.

If the car owner considers his duty to his fellow man, it is likely that he will carry an average of $30 indemnity insurance, and if he regards his own interests fairly, he will add an average of $15 for fire and theft. The total of paper costs thus becomes $97 annually to the average car owner.

From that point the activities of the operator govern the expense, and computation of operating expenses with any degreee of accuracy becomes impossible.

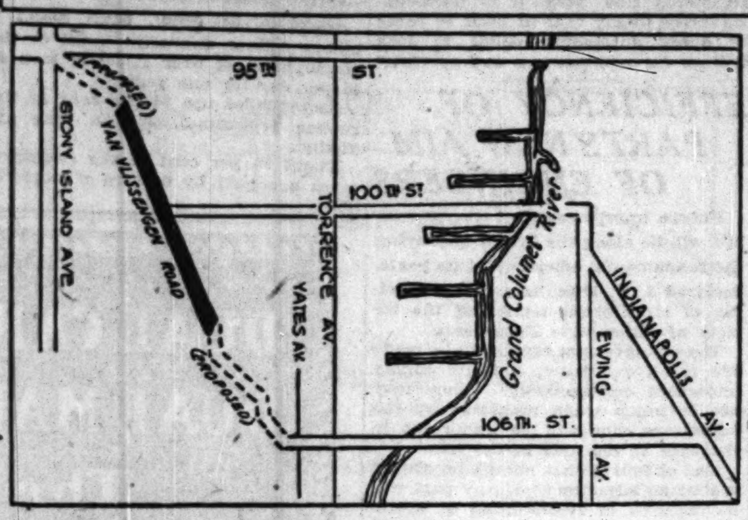
The last of the gasoline taxes were paid to the state on Jan. 1, 1928, six weeks ago. Although the officials in charge of the collections and administration of the funds stated late in the fall that the methods in use were inexpensive and simple, the treasurer's department handling this matter has apparently been unable to produce a statement within this time.

Falls Below Estimate.

At the time the tax went into effect the estimate by the state was that it would yield $15,000,000 annually, or $1,250,000 a month. From information obtainable it appears probable that the collection has fallen below the estimate about $2,500,000 over a twelve months' period.

Projects for county pavements within the city have been waiting the return to be made by the state on the gasoline tax, and are now held in the highway department. Unless state figures are forthcoming by tomorrow, it is likely that the county commissioners will make formal demand for them at a meeting set for Monday afternoon.

PLAN CHICAGO OUTLET HIGHWAY



DETOUR FEES DONE AWAY WITH UPON DUNES HIGHWAY

Some weeks ago construction blocked the Dunes highway near Baileytown, necessitating either a detour through a farmyard or taking a long way around. The enterprising owner of the lot put up signs and charged a 25 cent fee to drive over his property. Note of the situation was made in this department, but reports through motor clubs were so long in transmission that the situation had been corrected by the time the item was published. Numerous motorists traveling that highway have written to say that the route is now fine going.

Failure to Investigate Collision Proves Costly

Motorists are finding it a costly proposition to assume that it is not worth while to get out of the car and look for possible damage after a minor collision. Many have driven away in such cases only to find relatively severe damage that they were certain could not have resulted. A recent case illustrates this. A motorist who was stopped to allow cross traffic to pass was backed into by another car. He started away, assuming that the other car had struck only his bumper. When later he inspected the damage he found a fender crumpled almost beyond repair.

Honey Has Drawbacks.

Honey is advocated in some quarters as an ideal anti-freeze for the automobile cooling system. That it will protect the car against low temperatures is not to be questioned, but it may cause damage because of its high viscosity and sluggish flow. Experts of the federal government point out that this is true of all sugar solutions which are used as anti-freezes.

SEEK RELIEF FOR SOUTHEAST TRAFFIC JAMS

Van Vlissingen Rd. Solves Problem, Is View.

A movement to revive the development of Van Vlissingen road, which would provide cheaply for a new and direct artery of ingress and egress for southeast Chicago, is receiving active attention from a number of civic organizations in the southern area of the city. The artery would start at 95th street and Stony Island avenue and run to 106th street, east of Torrence avenue.

The importance of the development of this thoroughfare, in the view of its advocates, lies in the fact that it will offer greatly needed relief to the congestion resulting from the vast traffic which enters the city from the southeast over Indianapolis boulevard and then is compelled to find its way to the boulevard system over crowded, narrow, badly paved, and frequently turned streets.

Offers Easy Entrance.

According to Albert S. Bierly, the opening of Van Vlissingen road would furnish a high speed gateway artery that will go far as a temporary measure to make travel in and out of the city at the southeast less of an engineering problem for motorists than it presents today.

The fact that Indianapolis avenue bears a volume of traffic second only to that converging at the Ogden avenue gateway, and consists of a number in excess of 60,000 vehicles a day, is held to warrant the comparatively small expense involved in the suggested improvement.

"The Chicago Plan commission is committed to the development of this cutoff," Mr. Bierly stated, "with some slight changes. Since the retirement of Mr. Wacker the enterprise has been lost track of to some extent.

Starts at Stony Island.

"Van Vlissingen road is dedicated 108 feet wide from the old reduction plant to 102d street. To 103d street it follows a dedicated street which can be widened without expense, as we own the land. From 103d street around Trumbull park and down to 106th street the road can be built on vacant lands owned by the Western Indiana railway, which can be had at a moderate price.

"The completed highway would connect with 100th street, which is now open at a width of 80 feet most of the way to Indianapolis boulevard, crossing the new 100th street bridge. It would open directly into 106th street, giving access into Indianapolis boulevard over the new 106th street bridge, funds for which have just been provided.

Torrence Avenue Connection.

"It also would give access to Torrence avenue, which is to get a new 40 foot pavement this season, making Stony Island avenue, Yates boulevard, and Jeffrey avenue continuous through streets and Stony Island, instead of dying out in the railway yards at 95th street, a through highway because of the proposed artery."

News and Views of the Auto Trade

H. A. Wehmeier, general manager of Community Motors, Chicago distributors of Oakland and Pontiac sixes, reports that factory officials have completed a schedule for the sale of 270,000 of these cars in 1928. Sales records were presented which showed that Oakland went from ninth place in national rating in 1926 to fifth place last year.

"Life is getting harder for the auto tire," J. H. Eberhardt, district manager for Michelin in Chicago and vicinity, declares. "Wheels are being made smaller and the tires have just so many more revolutions an hour to wear them out, besides the sudden stops and starts that four wheel brakes have brought on. And still the tire builders are producing tires that are longer lived than ever before."

Frank Lockhart, prominent racing driver, has been working at the Stutz factory for months building a car with which he will try to exceed the record of 203.79 miles an hour made by Maj. Selection of Used Car Requires Judgment

Selection of a good used car is handicapped by a tendency to put success down to luck or a knack possessed by relatively few.

The used car should be judged purely on its merits, and not in relation to the merit or lack of merit of others produced about the same time.

WOLF HIGHWAY BOOSTERS ASK USE OF GAS TAX

Visualizing Wolf road, a straight and continuous highway at the west of Cook county, as the logical outer belt thoroughfare of the Chicago area, civic organizations of Will county are making a campaign to induce their county board immediately to provide for the paving of a six mile gap in the vicinity of Mokena.

The board of commissioners of Cook county are planning to improve the highway and in some spots paving work has already been done or ordered. In Cook county the highway is known as state aid route 81, and the effort now being made is to make the connection with Lincoln highway at that point in Will county, and further south with state highway 51 in Will county. Recently Cook county let the contract for paving Wolf road from 143d street to the Will county line.

The gap, as shown in the accompanying map, is between the county line and state highway 51. When completed, Wolf road will be a direct route froom Wheeling at the north to Kankakee to the south.

Mokena business men are endeavoring to get thousands of individuals and as many civic organizations as possible to petition the governor and the Will county board to order the gap paved this summer.

NEW TRAFFIC RULES FOR PARIS PLANNED; MAY RESTRICT HORNS

PARIS, France, Feb. 11.—A new set of traffic rules is to be formed to regulate traffic in Paris. The possibility of restricting the use of motor horns is being considered. Drivers habitually use their horns to excess; for instance, it is not uncommon for a whole row of drivers who are being held up by a policeman for what they consider an unreasonable time to blow their horns steadily in unison by way of protest.

The question of inadequate lighting on vehicles is also being considered.

Two States Worrying Along Without Trolleys

With the recent scrapping of its street car equipment by the Reno Traction company, the state of Nevada is left without a single trolley car. Busses are supplying transportation formerly given by the rail line. There are now two states which have no trolley cars, Wyoming having been the first to abandon that method of transportation.

HONOR MOLLY PITCHER.

To Molly Pitcher goes the honor of being the first woman to have an American highway named for her. In Pennsylvania, the highway which extends through Carlisle, Shippensburg and Greencastle will be known as the Molly Pitcher highway.

STATE TO BUILD $60,000,000 OF ROADS IN 1928

Program Greatest Ever Undertaken.

BY CORNELIUS R. MILLER,
[Director of State Department of Public Works and Buildings.]

In 1928 Illinois will have the greatest highway construction program in the history of the state, and will again establish a new and higher world's record for mileage of roads constructed by any state or country in one year.

According to details already completed, Illinois should complete during the year 1928 approximately 1,200 miles of paving, 400 miles of heavy grading, and 175 large bridge projects on the state highway system.

In addition the counties of the state, using their county highway taxes and their share of the state gasoline tax, will probably complete under state supervision 450 miles of paving, 100 miles of heavy grading, and 50 large bridge projects.

The total estimated cost of permanent road work to be done in Illinois during the coming year is $60,000,000.

479 Miles of Paving Started.

Contracts have already been let or bids have been received and contracts are in process of being awarded by the state division of highways for 479 miles of paving, 91 miles of heavy grading, and 113 large bridge projects. In addition detailed surveys and plans will be completed and bids received during the next three months for approximately 655 miles of paving, 296 miles of heavy grading, and 58 large bridge projects.

This will enable the state to have under contract at the end of the first three months of 1928 a total of 1,134 miles of paving, 387 miles of heavy grading, and 171 large bridge projects, which are estimated to cost $42,000,000. Additional surveys and plans are being authorized, and these will be completed in ample time to permit the letting of contracts during the spring months to insure the completion of this program.

All of State to Benefit.

Work will be carried on in all parts of the state and will connect to the paved roads already completed a large number of cities and villages which are not now afforded adequate highway facilities. It also will complete many important connections in the state highway system, and relieve materially the traffic congestion now confronting the metropolitan district surrounding Chicago.

Gov. Small, in discussing the road situation, said: "We have already completed more miles of high type paved roads in Illinois than any other state, 82 per cent of which have been finished during the last seven years. All of this work has been paid for by proceeds of state highway bonds, motor license fees, and federal aid funds, and not one cent of direct taxes has ever been used for the construction or maintenance of state highways or for the retirement of principal and interest on state highway bonds. The motorists of Illinois have received wonderful service for the amount they have paid in motor license fees.

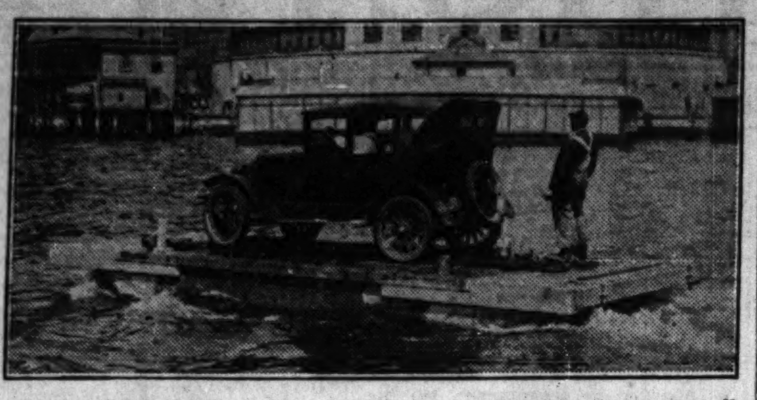
Would Connect All Towns.

"We contemplate the largest construction program in our state's history during 1928, and should the gasoline tax law be sustained by the Supreme court, we will be able to continue this record breaking rate of highway construction, and bring about the completion of our entire 9,800 mile system of state roads within the next few years. However, I will not consider our state road program completed until we have connected every incorporated city and village in the state with the state highway system.

"I will continue to push as rapidly as possible our state road work and will see to it that every section of the state gets fair and impartial consideration in determining our yearly construction program."

The state was able to complete during 1927 a total of 651 miles of paving of which 521 miles are on the state bond issue road system. Illinois now has 6,675 miles of pavement completed, of which 5,034 miles are on the state highway system.

Auto's Power Operates Ferry



Many freak things are done with light cars, but this seems unusually queer. This car owner owns a barge and saves ferry or tunnel fees by running onto the barge, hooking up a rear wheel with a propeller, and crossing the Hudson right to New York.

ANALYST SHOWS DESTINATION OF MOTOR DOLLAR

40 Cents for Purchase and 60 for Services.

America's automobile bill for 1928 will top by many millions the eight billion dollar record of 1927, and out of each dollar spent by American motorists this year 60 cents at least will go for service, supplies, labor, and maintenance parts, according to a trade report made public by William M. Webster, commissioner of the Automotive Equipment association of America.

The remaining 40 cents will represent car sales, the report continued. These percentages not only mean a new American record for dollar volume, but also disclose that the American motorist now leads the world in spending money on his car.

Basis of Figures.

These figures and predictions are based on an analysis of trade conditions and reports of advance orders, just completed by members of the association, comprising more than six hundred leading manufacturers and jobbers of automotive equipment in the United States and Canada.

"The world registration of motor vehicles, at a conservative estimate, will reach and probably pass 30,000,000 by next December," Commissioner Webster said. "This means not only that more people will purchase, own, or operate automobiles this year than ever before in motor history, but also that there will be an increased demand for service and maintenance that is certain to break all records. In the United States the demand for service and maintenance has grown in almost geometric ratio each year to the increases in motor car registrations. Where the motorist of 1915 spent 20 cents of his car dollar for service, he spent 57 cents in 1927."

Biggest Road Movement.

"This year will witness the greatest movement of motor vehicles on the roads of the United States and the greatest demand for maintenance and service since quantity production of automobiles began.

"The fact that motor car manufacturers today are building more mileage and transportation into their automobiles, and making them speedier and sturdier, is actually increasing the demand for service because the public are buying more cars than ever before, and are rapidly learning that an automobile is a piece of transportation machinery that must be taken good care of, if it is to be operated safely, comfortably and economically.

"On the basis of the number of cars that will be manufactured, sold and registered this year it is ultra-conservative to say that at least 60 cents of every automobile dollar in 1928 will go for maintenance and service."

DREDGE WORK DELAYS OPENING OF BRIDGE AT HALSTED STREET

According to information given by state and city officials to the Southern Cook County Highway association and the Chicago Motor club, the temporary bridge over the Little Calumet river on Halsted street will not be opened to traffic before April 1.

The contractors on the bridge assert that they can complete the structure within a week, but if the span is put in place it will shut in equipment of the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company which is dredging the river above the bridge location. The dredge work will require a month or more.

As a compromise the authorities and the dredge company are negotiating over the proposal that the city put the center section in and later remove it to permit the dredges to get out, dividing the cost of the operation. Unless some such arrangement is made it is admitted that traffic will have to detour off Halsted street for at least six weeks.

EFFICIENCY OF PARTS NEW AIM OF ENGINEERS

Future improvement of the automobile will lie along the line of improving the fundamental efficiency of its parts, declared J. H. Hunt at a recent meeting of the Detroit section of the Society of Automotive Engineers.

The changes that remain to be made are small relatively, but are highly important commercially. They may not be much when measured by the laboratory, but will be important in the eyes of the user of the car.

The objective that should be sought is that no adjustment of any part will be required in 10,000 miles of operation, he asserted. Real advance will be made when engineers devote themselves to such a problem. The rest is dependent on the factory and the inspection department.

Recent improvements in the automotive industry include the use of better fuels and better knowledge of their use, and a gain in the performance and efficiency of internal combustion engines by increasing the compression. Now that the construction of the chassis of each car has become practically standardized, other features, such as appearance, are stressed.

Parts are supposed to outlast the life of the car, but the makers of some parts, such as spark plugs, recommended their being changed each year. The average life of a car has been increased 30 per cent since the war. This affects the rate at which new cars can be built and necessitates their being made more desirable.

Seats for 60,000,000 in America's Motor Cars

America's railroad cars can seat 2,300,000 people. Automobiles can seat 60,000,000—over twenty-six times as many.

The automobile industry employs 3,365,000 people.

Gasoline, at retail, costs about a billion dollars annually—equal to the employment of over 1,000,000 men at $5 per day for one year.

Automobiles use 84 per cent of the rubber production, 350,000 tons annually.

About 90 per cent of the country's taxes are paid by owners of automobiles.

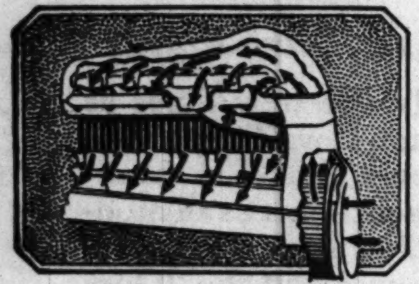
Air-cooling—

How does it work?
What are the advantages?

AIRMAN SERIES

AVIATION — with the whole world of engineering to choose from — has virtually standardized on the air-cooled motor. Backing this decision lay expert knowledge of engines and long years of experience. That the air-cooled motor was adopted is of tremendous significance to every motorist. Air-cooling was pioneered and perfected for the world — through the medium of the Franklin automobile.



Simplicity Itself

In the air-cooled motor, air is forced in by the Sirocco fan and carried in enormous volume over the tops of the cylinders—down through the vertical cooling flanges which surround each cylinder, with greater amounts allotted to points of greater heat. The whole motor is cooled by an ever-changing supply of air—once the air has passed over the cylinders it is carried away and instantly replaced by fresh air. (There is no recooling and recirculating, as in water-cooled cars.)

Water-cooled cars are forced to use radiators to bring the hot water into contact with the air so it can be cooled and used again — air-cooling means the whole motor is cooled directly by an endless supply of fresh air.

Greater Efficiency

The elimination of more than one hundred parts—parts that frequently go wrong and cause expensive delays — permits a saving in weight that is reflected in lower gasoline, oil and tire consumption. The air-cooled motor is independent of extremes in weather conditions—you go wherever you will, all year round, with no thought of danger of freezing or overheating.

The fact that a Franklin Owner's next car is so generally another air-cooled Franklin constitutes the most impressive endorsement that can be accorded an automotive principle.

Only in a Franklin do you find so complete an assembly of the factors which make motoring a genuine pleasure. We will be pleased to arrange a thorough demonstration for you. Have one this week!

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT, BUICK WILL BUILD THEM

HOOSIERS PLAN LAKE TO RIVER 30 FOOT ROAD

New Wide Highway Will Tap Chicago Area.

Another superhighway from the Chicago area is being planned by the state of Indiana. According to alignments proposed, the highway is to extend from Lake Michigan to the Ohio river, the northern end being at Michigan City and the southern at the river across from Louisville.

Although not radically "super," as superhighways go in these days, the proposed pavement is a step beyond the current standards in width. For the purpose of obtaining immediate action there was formed recently at Greencastle, Ind., the Western Indiana Lake to River Highway association.

The plan contemplates the construction of a 30 foot paved road over a route that touches Lafayette, Crawfordsville, Greencastle, Spencer, Bloomington, Bedford, Paoli, and New Albany. It is also intended to provide right of way that will permit a 60 foot pavement in the future.

Factor in Enterprise.

The attitude of THE TRIBUNE on this highway question has been an important factor in the promotion of this enterprise, according to George S. Harney of Crawfordsville, secretary of the highway association.

"Frankly, THE TRIBUNE's campaign," he said, "for wider roadways is largely responsible for the present urge. This line of road has rather slept on its rights, and is just now awakening, with THE TRIBUNE's slogan."

A complete report upon the research made by a special committee of the association was made public last week, together with an appeal that the communities of western Indiana get actively back of the enterprise at once.

Serves Important Units.

According to the tentative plans and map work, the new highway would serve communities in which are situated two state penal institutions, two state universities, two other universities, two health resorts, two state parks, and through lateral connections will give most efficient service to many communities now in need of it.

At present there is no continuous through paved highway north and south in Indiana. The highway by way of South Bend and Indianapolis to the river has many gaps which may be completed as a continuous route in a short time. By that time, the officials of the association believe, the necessity for the western paved route will be acute, and it is intended to urge at least a commencement of work in the next year.

Registrations in October of Motor Cars Large

There were 134,775 new automobiles registered in the United States during the month of October, according to the American Automobile association.

New York led with a total of 16,852, Pennsylvania was second with 13,270, and California was third with 13,256. Illinois was fourth for the month with 7,717 registrations. Wyoming, with 327 registrations, had the smallest number for the month, about 100 less than was registered in New Mexico.

HIGHWAY TO COST $75,000,000 IS STARTED IN CUBA

700 Mile Road Will Bisect Island.

HAVANA, Cuba, Jan. 28.—The largest road building project ever undertaken, representing an investment of $75,000 and employing an army of 5,000 men, has been started.

Bisecting the island of Cuba, the new roadway will extend 700 miles. In length it will double the historic Appian way which was laid down in Italy by the ancient Romans 2,000 years ago.

It will be 20 feet wide in the country and will widen to 26 feet in the cities, being somewhat broader than the average highway.

When completed, the highway will connect Guane of the Pinar del Rio province with Santiago de Cuba. It will be known as the Central highway.

Cities through which it will pass are: Pinar del Rio City, Consolicion del Sur, San Cristobal, Artemisa, Guanajay, Havana, Madruga, Matanzas, Limonar, Colon, Santo Dimingo, Santa Clara, Sancti Spiritus, Ciego de Avila, Camaguey, Tunas, Falma Soriano, Bayamo, San Luis, Santiago de Cuba. Five years will be required for construction.

The Cuban government has already appropriated $3,400,000 for the new central highway and expects to pay for it in full within six years through taxes on gasoline, vehicle sales and other taxes.

Cuba has been collecting $18,000,000 per year from these sources and is expected to collect even more in future years. It is quite likely, however, that Cuba will float an American bond issue to pay off the cost in full.

It is also anticipated that the Cuban people, when the highway is finished and they find out its value through use, will start widespread agitation for connecting roads.

Entirely apart from the national road building project, it was revealed that Havana itself is contemplating about $8,000,000 of roadwork in and around the city.

At the opening of the spring season a picture of the state's hard road system is contained in the accompanying illustration. Ten years ago little of this 6,000 mile network was in existence. Some 1,500 miles are to be added this year, which will materially alter the picture for the spring of 1929.

SLOW STARTING CAR PRODUCTION WORRIES TRADE

Parts and Material Lack Halt Activities.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 11.—The mid-February condition of the automobile industry as a whole can be summed up in the three words: "Not so good."

With the beginning of the year, manufacturers visioned capacity production and demand, and set their schedules accordingly, and the slow start so far experienced by a majority of the plants is not quite to the builders' liking although the passenger car output is operating on a fairly satisfactory schedule.

One major difficulty experienced is the inability of producers to get sufficient materials. This is one result of the hundreds of changes made in new models and inability of part makers to meet the increased demand.

Some manufacturers more fortunate report they are being plentifully supplied with materials and parts, but are unable to supply the demand being made upon them for the finished product.

Ford Still Lagging.

The Ford plant is listed as one of the unfortunates. What is considered mass production at this plant is still some days away. Reliable but unofficial information is that the model A Ford as offered in the early weeks of December, is undergoing changes of minor importance, which has held up production.

That a greatly increased output is contemplated at an early date is indicated by the fact that labor at the Ford plants is increased daily, and the number of men now employed is well over the 90,000 mark, according to official announcement. Part makers are well ahead of the assembly division. Figures are not available on what the present output is.

Chevrolet Heads List.

Seven motor car manufacturers report substantial increases in production or shipment of cars in January compared with the corresponding period of 1927. The Chevrolet headed the list with 91,681 cars, which was an increase of 18,005. February, although a short month, will show a still further increase over January.

Hudson's combined output for the initial month of 1928 was 25,390. This included both Hudson and Essex, and was a 100 per cent increase.

Packard shipped 4,150 cars in January compared with 2,300 in the same month last year. This output taxed the capacity of the plant. Official announcement is made that this rate of production will continue for several weeks on orders already booked.

Hupp showed a 31 per cent gain for the month with 3,160 cars, and orders now on hand indicate a greater gain in February. Graham-Paige production for the month was 1,497 cars of the new models. Oakland shipped 19,273 cars compared with 8,041 in January last year. Buick showed a slight increase in output and Reo was in the "increase" column.

The truck and bus productions showed but little change for the month from what it was one year ago. Orders already booked for early spring deliveries, however, indicate there will be a substantial stepping up of production for the next ten weeks.

Labor Figures Grow.

Employment in the various automobile plants and accessories shops continues its upward climb, and now totals 223,502, which is an increase for the week of 2,322. One year ago the same plants employed 215,601, a decrease of 7,091 from present figures.

Orders for automobiles placed at the three leading automobile shows show large demand and exceeded those of one year ago nearly 100 per cent. As expected, low priced cars were in greater demand than higher priced vehicles. The Chevrolet, Whippet, and Star gathered such a crop of orders that capacity production is assured for months to come.

Ford eventually will get into mass production. The number of cars the four plants will produce by the close of 1928 will make interesting reading and also give an idea of the popularity of each.

Each of these four cars underwent either partial or complete remodeling, and at reduced prices—all bunched in a little exclusive price class of their own. The quartet is sure to make history, and their ability to "stand up" eagerly watched.

SEEK CHARTER FOR MOTOR BUS LINE OVER NEW CAMDEN BRIDGE

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 11.—The Public Service Transportation company, for the purpose of operating busses through the Holland vehicular tunnel and over the Philadelphia-Camden bridge, has filed a charter with the secretary of state under the transportation act of 1893, with the same corporate name.

The new company has an authorized capital stock consisting of 1,500,000 shares of non-par stock. The incorporators are: Wendell J. Wright of Hackensack, William S. Barker of Montclair, and Edward A. Tuson of Orange, public service officials.

The corporate existence of the company is 100 years. A deposit of $25,000, required by the traction act, was made with the state treasurer. The state's fee for filing the charter was $15,000.

Demand for Belt Line Highways on Increase

One of the important sidelights on national motoring during the 1927 touring season is the increasing demand of the motor tourist for belt lines around cities wherever possible, according to the American Automobile association, which believes that more belt lines for through motor travel is an inevitable development, with the increased tide of touring over congested roads.

FEEDER SYSTEMS NEXT BIG TASK OF ROAD BUILDERS

The next great road building task, in the opinion of the committee on highways and motor transport of the chamber of commerce of the United States, is to complete the skeleton of state highways and build up a feeder system of local roads.

The states, with federal aid, have made good progress toward building an arterial system of trunk lines, but these constitute only 7 per cent of the entire mileage of the country's roads. In many cases the lack of adequate administrative machinery and of coördination between local units have been the chief obstacles in the way of progress, says a statement.

Another major problem to be given attention is the connection between city streets and rural highways particularly in the larger metropolitan districts.

The total highway mileage in the United States is approximately 3,000,000. Of this the federal aid system comprises 185,000 miles of which 133,000 have been improved. State highway departments have improved 40,000 or 50,000 miles outside of the federal aid system and county and local administrations have improved in some measure about 600,000 miles.

This leaves more than 2,000,000 unimproved and only partly graded, if at all.

Motor Clubs Combat Roadside Travel "Dope"

In an effort to combat the inconveniences to motor travel caused by erroneous information from "roadside sources," scientific detour service is now available to motorists through the 950 motor clubs affiliated with the A. A. A., according to the national motoring body.

A nation-wide survey has disclosed that inaccurate information on detours, given to motorists at gas stations, stores, farmhouses and from other unofficial sources, has, in thousands of instances, caused the driver to take longer routes over bad roads, when correct data would have routed him over a good road and the shortest route.

The NEW MARMON 68

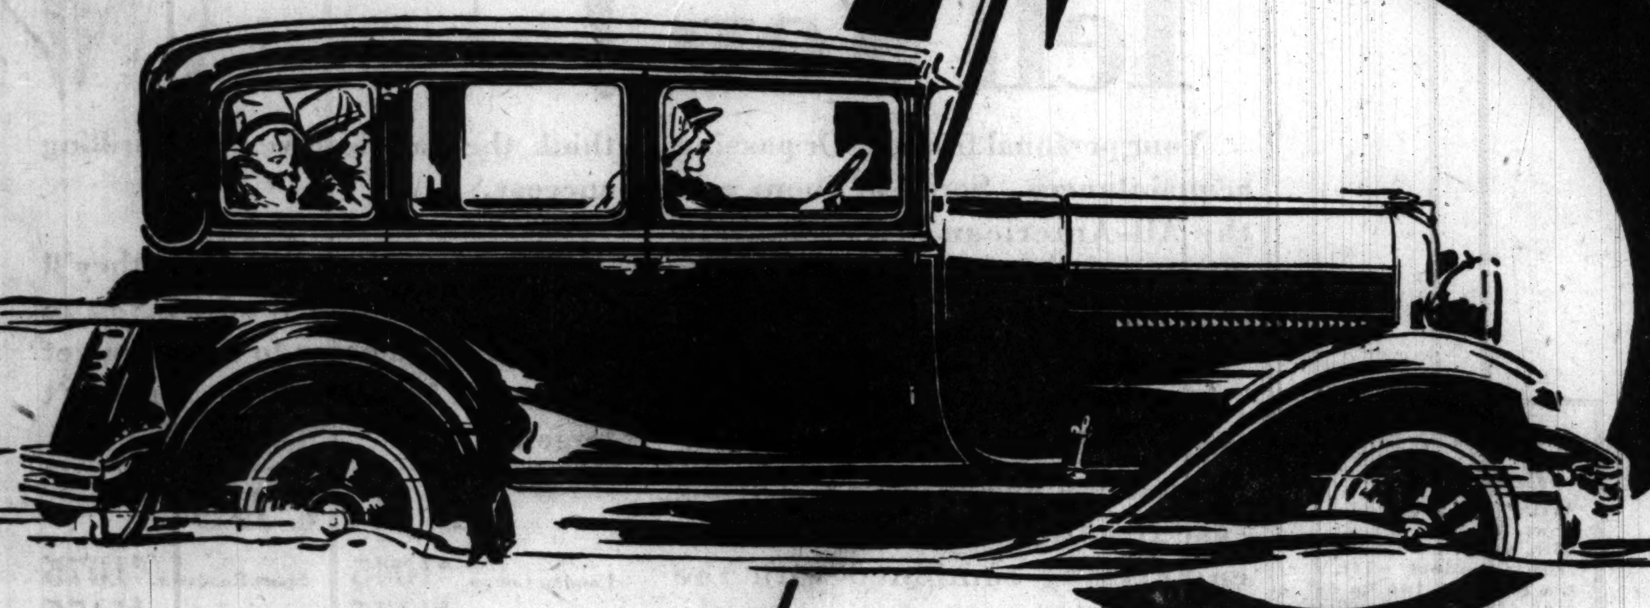
The new straight 8

The most thrillful, modern automobile of the times—at a price which any reasonably prosperous family can afford to pay.

Absolute smoothness and spectacular acceleration—an entirely new experience for any driver of a medium-priced six.

New engine principles which completely solve the problem of carbureting a straight-eight engine and get every ounce of power out of present-day grades of gasoline. (Ask salesman to explain Duplex Down-draft Manifold and high-turbulence cylinder head.)

The easiest riding car you ever sat in—typical Marmon "road adhesiveness" (car doesn't tip); rigid frame with six-inch side members (no spongy weaving, even on roughest road), extremely long springs—81 per cent of wheelbase. Lovejoy hydraulic shock absorbers. New and larger type spring insulators of live rubber (instead of metal shackles).



Beyond all doubt the easiest handling you ever experienced—new cam and lever type of steering—remarkably easy to turn but steady at high speeds and doesn't transmit road shocks to driver. Short turning radius, enabling you to turn completely around in ordinary streets.

Long wearing, long-lasting construction. The motor is Marmon-built—precision-finished in every detail. Long life due also to such features as special alloy pistons, which cut down "shock-load" and save bearings; engine modulator which eliminates vibration; water-jacketed exhaust valves (an exclusive Marmon feature) which does away with frequent valve grindings; full force-feed lubrication; and engine thermostat which maintains more uniform operating temperature.

Fitments and conveniences such as have never been offered in a car within $500 of the "68" price.

TRADE LEADERS APPROVE NEW TRIBUNE ACTION

Praise Sunday Section on Business.

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

The new business section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE which was started a week ago, unifying in one classification a comprehensive portrayal of the financial, commercial, market, and real estate news, was received with satisfaction by financiers and business men of Chicago.

In combining the financial and real estate news in part three of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE's main news sections, thereby bringing together the news which is akin in the development of Chicago as a financial and trade center of the world, THE TRIBUNE has sought to maintain even a greater lead in the presentation of business news.

THE TRIBUNE's new feature has gained the approval of business leaders and bankers.

Fits Chicago's Growth.

"THE TRIBUNE is to be congratulated on the progressive step it has taken in combining and enlarging the real estate and financial sections of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE," said Frederick H. Rawson, chairman of the Union Trust company. "THE TRIBUNE is rendering a distinct service to the business interests of Chicago and the middle west."

"In giving new and enlarged position to the financial and business news in its Sunday edition THE TRIBUNE shows initiative and foresight in preparing for Chicago's destiny as the world's largest market," said Eugene M. Stevens, president of the Illinois Merchants Trust company.

"THE TRIBUNE is filling a long felt want by increasing the space for financial news in its Sunday edition," declared Charles A. McCulloch, capitalist and president of the Parmelee company. "Hundreds of thousands of investors in Greater Chicago want to know more about the corporation whose stock and bonds they hold. Wealth and its creation are among the most interesting items in any newspaper. Chicago is America's second largest banker."

Another Sign of Progress.

"I was more than pleased," asserted George Woodruff, vice chairman of the National Bank of the Republic. "The section is not only of great value to business men but it is in keeping with the progress of Chicago and THE TRIBUNE itself."

"THE TRIBUNE is to be congratulated," said R. Arthur Wood, president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, "as being a leader in the development of Chicago. From my viewpoint, it is particularly interesting that this new section should start approximately just two weeks before Chicago is to have a call money market through which the surplus funds of Chicago banks and the surrounding territory will find its way into the securities of this community."

Gains As Money Center.

"Chicago as a money center," said Henry A. Haughan, chairman of the board of directors of the State Bank of Chicago, "has grown to such proportions that the new policy of THE TRIBUNE should prove of great interest. A very large number of responsible people in Chicago have invested their money in stocks and bonds."

"Chicago is preëminent in many phases of commercial and industrial development and is rapidly approaching leadership in many others," M. A. Graettinger, secretary of the Illinois Bankers' association, asserted. "THE TRIBUNE is maintaining its well recognized policy of progressiveness."

Gaining on New York.

"THE TRIBUNE is taking the destiny of Chicago at its face value," said John R. Thompson Jr., president of the John R. Thompson company. "Our city is rapidly overtaking New York as a money center, absorbing nearly all of its own investments besides many of those originating in the east, and there is no doubt in my mind that another decade will see the cities neck and neck in the race for power and greatness."

RETZKY PLANS 10 STORY HOTEL AT 6821 SHERIDAN

A ten story apartment hotel is proposed for 6821 Sheridan road, just north of the Rogers Park hotel, following the purchase of a 50x165 site there by Myron Retzky from Noah and Jennie Levin for a reported $62,500. The structure is to contain two and three room apartments, a swimming pool and a playroom for children and there will be special garage accommodations for the tenants.

At the same time Mr. Retzky bought from the same sellers the fifteen flats at the southeast corner of 81st and Loomis for a reported $80,000, subject to $52,500, and the twenty flats at 8154-56 South Marshfield avenue for a reported $95,000, subject to $70,000. Harold Jackson was attorney for all parties.

George C. Olcott to Talk to Chicago Forum Sunday

George C. Olcutt is to talk before the Chicago Forum at the Adelphi theater, Feb. 12 at 3:15 p. m., on the subject "Pittsburgh Plus Plan of Taxation of Real Estate." Others who will address the Forum are Margaret Haley of the Chicago Teachers' Federation and George O. Fairweather.

City to Have Gay Colored Skyscraper

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

SAMUEL COLE.
[Lewis Smith Photo.]

Chicago's first skyscraper having an exterior faced with materials in bright shades of color will be the nineteen story apartment and exclusive shop building now under construction at the northwest corner of State and Elm streets, mentioned in this department on Aug. 30. The framework is practically completed.

At various times there have been hints that the city was about to see a tall building done in the shades of the coat presented to Master Joseph of Bibical fame by his father. All these proposals have failed, the last being the Willoughby Tower, whose promoters now are to construct it of gray limestone instead of the black brick originally intended.

But to return to the structure before us, not only is it to be ultra modern in its color effects, but its architecture, too, will be novel, representing the latest idea of modern French design, according to B. Leo Steif, architect who planned the building.

Blue Green Terra Cotta.

The first floor is to be of dark French blue terra cotta. The second, third, and fourth floors will be a light blue green, almost a robin's egg blue, terra cotta. Then the mass of the structure will be a salmon colored face brick. And the five upper floors will be trimmed in a multi-colored terra cotta composed of five hues. Crowning the structure will be a mansard of copper which ultimately will be a rich green through process of oxidation.

Mr. Steif remarks that the city's narrow streets make it difficult to give the skyscraper its full due in design and that he is using colors in the State and Elm structure to enhance the architectural effects—the colors producing the illusion of shadows, etc.

There is to be a considerable amount of detail work on the first floor and at the entrances, there being French sculpture done in terra cotta. A Roman gold medallion will be placed at the top of each pier.

No Penthouses or Signs.

And of considerable interest to the inhabitants of this part of the city with artistic eyes—all sides of this structure are to be of the same material and there will be no penthouses on the roof whatsoever. All elevator machinery, water tanks, etc., will be hidden in the mansard. Further, Mr. Steif says, he is not going to have the building cluttered up with a lot of signs; the shops on the lower floors will have to get along without them.

The interior of the building, which is to be divided into 120 unfurnished apartments of from two to five rooms, is to be colorful in decoration. So all in all this structure ought to be a pretty cheerful sort of place. All the apartments are to have the latest conveniences, including a new one for this department. The kitchens are to be equipped with sinks having a laundry tray which will permit the ladies living in the structure to wash the more filmsy portions of their wearing apparel. Each floor will have a drying room.

Lease Two Floors.

Besides the apartments there will be nine or ten studios at the top of the building.

The French Shops, Inc., antiques and furniture dealers, now at 1256 South Michigan, have leased the second and third floors and a part of the first floor.

The owner of the structure is the 10 West Elm Street Building corporation, of which Samuel Cole is president. Mr. Cole will have charge of the renting of the building. The structure is to represent an investment of $1,500,000, it is stated, in which connection the Union Trust company has underwritten a bond issue of $850,000. Completion is set for this spring.

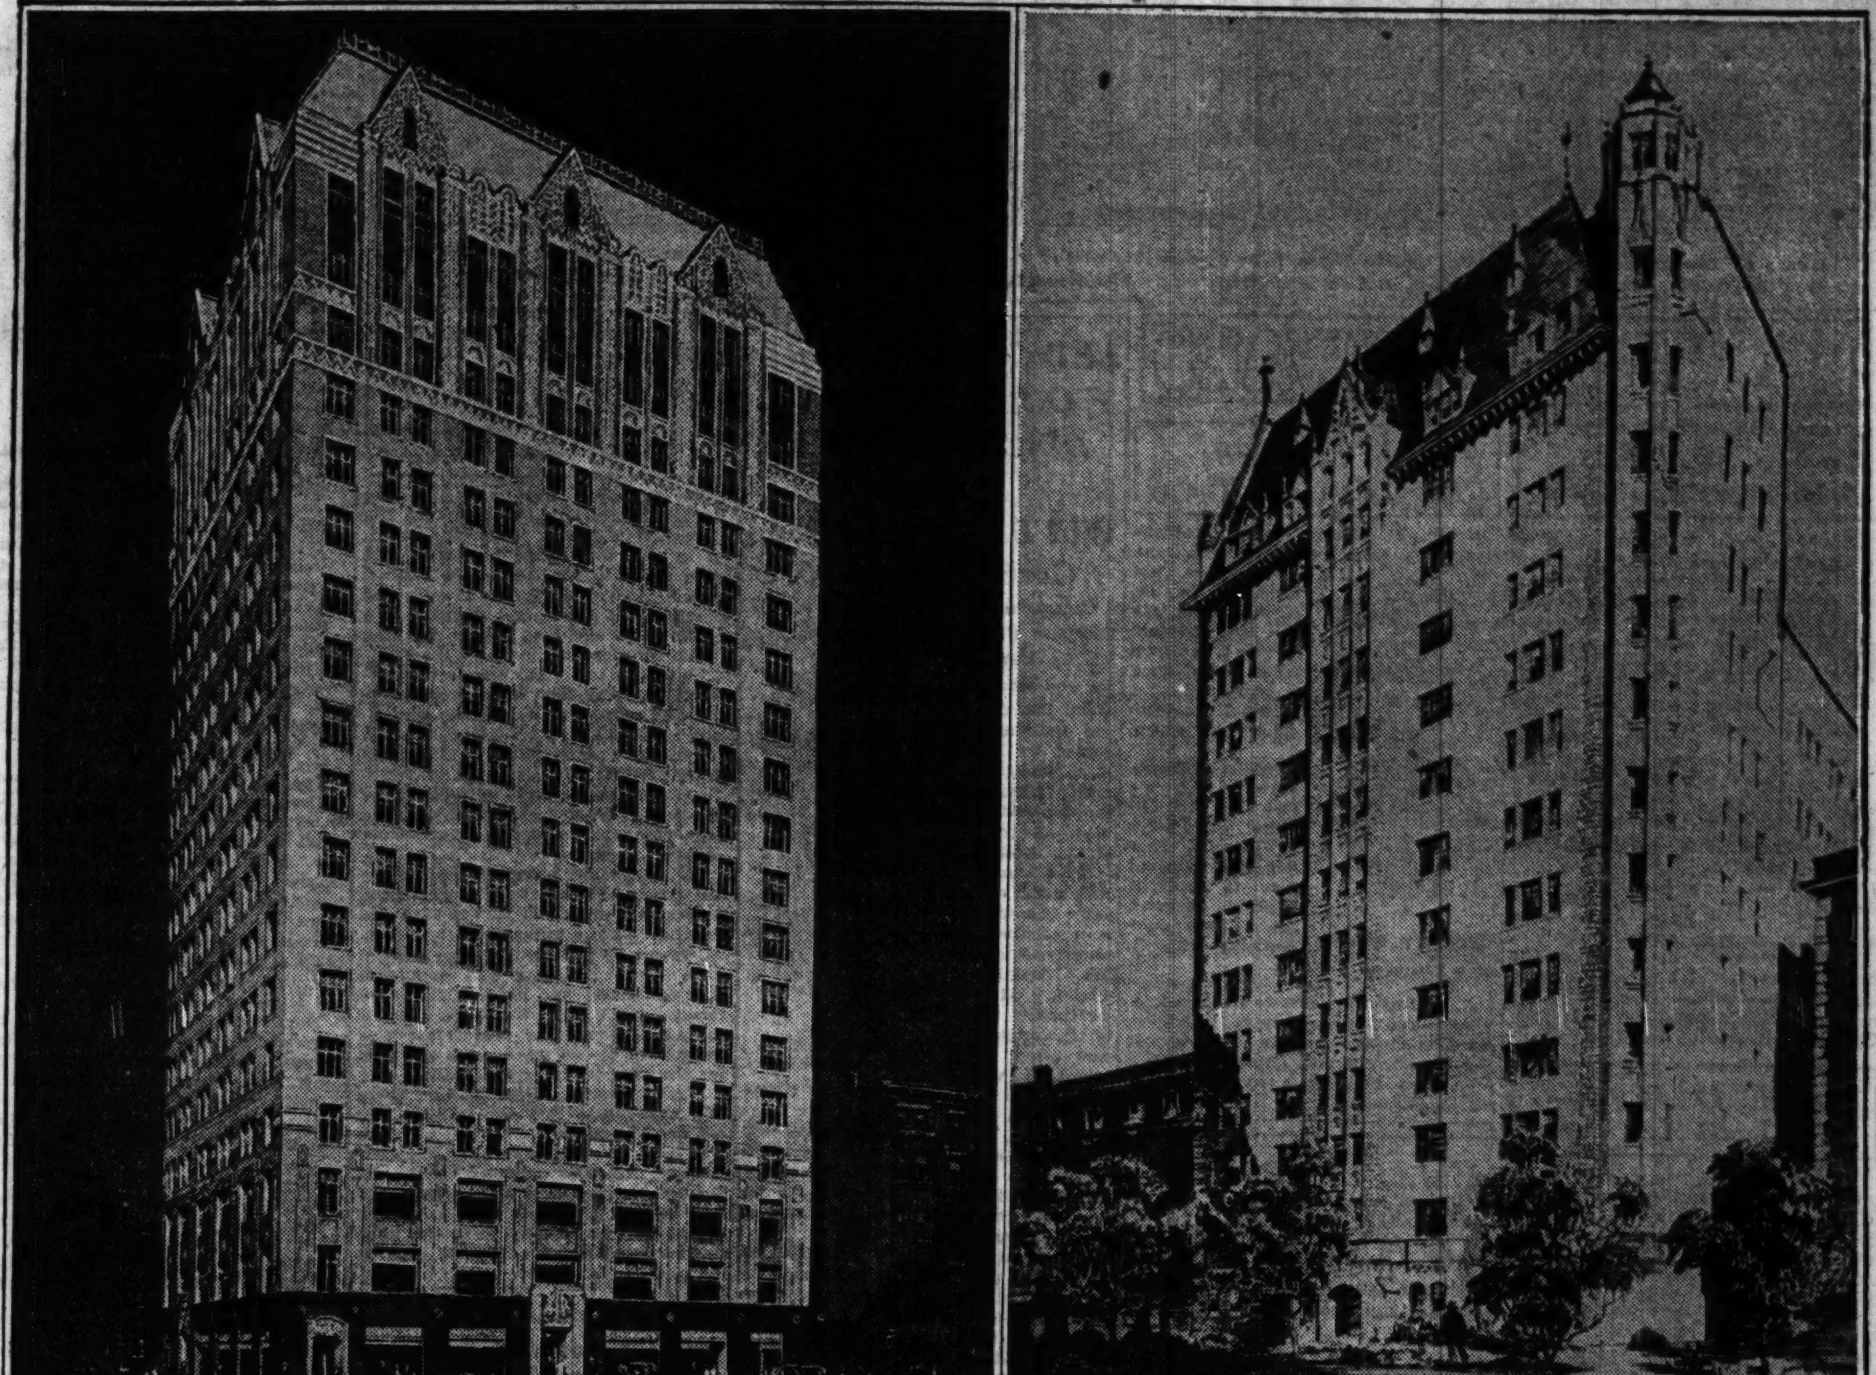
OFFER $100 PRIZE FOR NAME TO BE GIVEN BIG "CO-OP"

A committee of purchasers of apartments in the huge "coöp," proposed for the site of the Chase apartments in Sheridan road, between Belmont and Melrose, is offering a $100 prize for a name for the structure. The competition is open to any one over sixteen. Names are limited to two words, though one may be used, and must express the idea of home—for instance, Vista Homes. Contestants should send their name, address, and telephone numbers with their entries, to J. W. McLaughlin, chairman of the judges, Room 1082, 410 North Michigan. The contest closes at 6 p. m., Saturday, Feb. 18, and the winner will be announced Feb. 25. The coöp in question is the project of Albert W. Swayne, and is to be the largest of its kind in the world. It was described in this department Dec. 25.

Colored Buyers-Renters Barred from 24 Blocks

Ninety-six per cent of the property owners in the twenty-four square blocks bounded by South Park avenue, Cottage Grove avenue, 60th and 63d streets have signed a contract, which has been filed with the county recorder, not to rent or sell property to colored families for the next twenty years. The signers are members of the Woodlawn Property Owners' association, of which Fred Hellman is secretary and Neil J. O'Hanley is president.

A PAIR OF NEW NORTH SIDE APARTMENTS



On your right is the Farcroft apartments, designed by Charles Wheeler Nicol, the general contracts for which have been let to the Fleisher Engineering and Construction company. It's to be erected at 1337 Fargo avenue on a 75x160 site. All outside walls will be of face brick, with terra cotta trim. All windows will be of plate glass. J. R. Petter made the above picture for Mr. Nicol.

The nineteen story building on your left is under construction at the northwest corner of State and Elm streets, from designs by B. Leo Steif, architect. The outstanding feature of this structure is the generous use of color in the exterior. Blues, blue-greens, salmon, and other hues will make this skyscraper a gorgeous affair. Details are given in another column.

NIMMONS & CO. CHANGES NAME AND WILL MOVE

George C. Nimmons & Co., nationally known architects, will make two important changes on May 1. The firm name will then become Nimmons, Carr & Wright, to include George Wallace Carr and Clark C. Wright, who have been with the firm as partners for the last eleven years. At the same time the firm will move from the Peoples Gas building north to the new 333 building at Michigan avenue and Wacker drive. Quarters on the nineteenth floor have been leased. Mr. Nimmons is now playing golf at Ormond Beach, Fla., where he is stopping at the Hotel Ormond.

ARCHITECTS TO HEAR BENNETT ON WORLD FAIRS

Edward H. Bennett, consulting architect for the Chicago plan commission, will be the guest of honor of the Chicago chapter, American Institute of Architects, at its regular monthly meeting and dinner next Tuesday evening at the Architects' club, 1800 Prairie avenue. Mr. Bennett will give a review of former expositions leading up to Chicago's 1933 World's Fair. A long and imposing list of Chicagoans has been invited to attend. Some of these are Samuel Insull, Christian Paschen, Rufus C. Dawes, E. N. Hurley, James Simpson, and Eugene Taylor.

PAY $1,000,000 FOR HOLDINGS OF CROISSANT

M. J. Flynn, representing a syndicate, it is understood, has purchased the G. Frank Croissant holdings of 1,100 acres fronting on both sides of Kedzie avenue, between 147th and 167th, for a reported price of $1,000 an acre, or a total of $1,100,000. The property is a mile west of the Illinois Central, around Harvey and Hazelcrest. Improvements are being installed and after their completion the land will be subdivided by H. W. Elmore & Co.

WEST SIDE'S NEWEST CINEMA

LET 65 PER CENT OF FLOOR AREA IN MILLINERY MART

Approximately sixty-five per cent of the space in the Milliners' Mart building at 65 East South Water street has been leased to millinery companies and those engaged in allied businesses, according to Frankenstein & Co., agents for the structure. The building is to be ready for occupancy about April 1, a month sooner than scheduled. Three firms have taken entire floors, each with approximately 9,000 square feet of space. These are the Richter-Friedlander company, fourth floor; Empire Hat company, fifth floor, and the Richard Hat company, sixth floor.

Chocolates Help Buy Mrs. Snyder North Side House

Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, loop chocolate purveyor, yesterday bought the residence at 38 Bellevue place, lot 18x129, from Mrs. Charles Holt for an undisclosed consideration. Mrs. Snyder already owned the property adjoining on the west, at No. 36, which is leased to the Romany club. Stella K. Polk was broker.

Cyrus E. Wilder Purchases Residence at 107 Bellevue

The Chicago State bank sold for the estate of John Piazza the family's old home at 107 Bellevue place to Cyrus E. Wilder, who will occupy it May 1. Daniel Connell & Co. were brokers.

STATE REALTORS TO DINE, DANCE ON FEBRUARY 21

Realtors throughout the state are preparing for the annual banquet and dance of the Illinois Association of Real Estate boards which will be held this year on Feb. 21 at the Stevens hotel. S. Charles Iversen, chairman of the dinner committee, announces that there will be a diversified program of entertainment. A novel floor plan has been drawn in which the aisles between the tables are marked off as streets and named for prominent realtors and after various towns. Each table represents a block divided into ten "lots" or seats. The idea is to give the impression of a subdivision.

Plan 13 Story Apartments in Fargo Avenue

Rogers Park is to have another tall apartment building, it was announced yesterday. Plans have been completed and a general contract awarded for the construction of a thirteen story structure at 1337 Fargo avenue, about half way between Sheridan road and the lake. Charles Wheeler Nicol is architect.

The Farcroft will have eighty-four suites. There'll be sixty-two fours, a dozen five room flats and the same number of threes. The twelve three room suites will be kitchenettes. The others will have full sized dining rooms and kitchens.

Mr. Nicol planned a building with all sides of face brick and with attractive shadow paneling on the east wall. Terra cotta will be used for trim, with quoins of random terra cotta. The roof will be of random varicolored slate. The total cost of land and building is placed at $925,000.

Color will play a prominent part in interior equipment and decoration. For instance, the kitchens will have colored tiled walls, to match the cheerful hues manufacturers at last are putting into culinary utensils and kitchen furniture. Several bathrooms will have gay tinted tubs to splash in, with walls and fixtures to match.

The owner of the Farcroft building is the 1337 Fargo Building corporation, which is made up of Horace B. Hench and R. R. Pinkerton of Chicago and Benjamin Lifson and Henry T. Meyers of Minneapolis. Completion is set for October.

LOUIS WITTBOLD PLANS NEW "SUB" NEAR EDGEBROOK

With the purchase of seventeen acres along Touhy avenue from Herman Wagner, Louis Wittbold, florist, has assembled a tract of 165 acres in the vicinity of the Edgebrook forest preserves which he is to subdivide immediately under the name of Wittbold's Second Indian Boundary subdivision. The whole tract is said to have cost Mr. Wittbold approximately $750,000.

The property extends from the right of way of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific westward along Touhy avenue for a mile. Mr. Wittbold proposes to develop the property to conform with his own ideas, and, since he is a florist, this probably means that the future home owners there will probably find themselves living in a bed of roses.

The land itself is of historical interest, being a part of an old grant made by the United States government to Billy Caldwell, son of a British army officer. Billy's mother was a member of the Sauganash Indian tribe.

JANUARY GAINS 34 PER CENT OVER LAST YEAR

Whiting Is Top of List of Towns.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.

Chicago's great belt of suburbs have started their year 1928 building operations with such a whoop that in many cases all local records have been knocked to pieces, and in a total of thirty-eight towns which submitted figures the gain in January as against the opening month of 1927 was 34 per cent.

These thirty-eight communities recorded official building permits, according to the building survey department of S. W. Straus & Co., totaling $7,247,000 for January, compared with $5,386,000 for the same month last year.

As so often happens in a suburban building survey, one of the Hoosier suburbs tops the list. This time it's Whiting, Ind., with the staggering increase of 10,435 per cent during January over the same month last year.

Du Page County Town Second.

Glen Ellyn, twenty-three miles west of the loop, out in Du Page county, which is a long, long way from the Calumet steel district, stands second in the list of suburbs. It reports a gain of 2,047 per cent over January of 1927.

For No. 3 we have to go back to the Calumet area. Hammond made a January gain of 1,069 per cent over the first month of last year. In January, 1927, the building permits were $205,500. Last month they totaled $2,403,500.

Then we swing back to Chicago's western suburbs for the next in rank—La Grange. This Cook county town showed a gain of 481 per cent last month over January of 1927.

Lake Forest Gain Is Modest.

Fifth in line comes Lake Forest, where apparently the millionaires are not building quite so much as the more modestly bank rolled communities in northern Indiana, for this north shore suburb had the comparatively humble increase of 225 per cent.

Oak Park, sixth in the list, shows a gain of 146 per cent over January of last year. Berwyn comes next with an increase of 181 per cent.

Other suburbs making January gains, together with their percentages, were: Park Ridge, 111 per cent; Chicago Heights, 105 per cent; Winnetka, 97 per cent; Waukegan, 80 per cent; Elgin, 45 per cent; Wilmette, 21 per cent, and Blue Island, 18 per cent. Evanston made an increase of 63 per cent.

Now, unfortunately, we'll have to mention, briefly, of course, the towns which had losses. We'll list them alphabetically and not according to the amount of their decreases. Here they are: Aurora, Cicero, Des Plaines, East Chicago, Forest Park, Gary, Glencoe, Harvey, Highland Park, Joliet, Maywood, Niles Center and Wheaton.

Two Significant Things.

Two significant things can be pointed out regarding the figures, according to the Straus report. One is that the gains both in volume and instances, outnumber the losses. The second point is that the suburbs apparently are continuing the pace set by the tremendous development last year. In some cases, as already commented on, the records of last year have been shattered.

Suburbs showing gains in January as against December of last year included: Berwyn, Chicago Heights, Evanston, Glen Ellyn, Harvey, Highland Park, Lake Forest, Maywood, Waukegan, Hammond and Whiting.

Suburbs showing losses in January as against December of last year included: Aurora, Blue Island, Cicero, Des Plaines, Elgin, Forest Park, Glencoe, Joliet, La Grange, Niles Center, Oak Park, Park Ridge, Wheaton, Wilmette, Winnetka and East Chicago.

The comparative figures for January, 1927, and 1928 were:

Aurora	$ 74,000	$ 80,000
Berwyn	631,700	224,400
Blue Island	36,100	30,600
Chicago Heights	58,100	28,300
Cicero	43,600	162,400
Des Plaines	57,800	67,000
East Chicago	36,500	219,400
Elgin	65,100	45,100
Evanston	1,361,900	832,700
Forest Park	5,000	30,900
Gary	372,000	1,231,600
Glencoe	54,900	173,400
Glen Ellyn	253,400	11,800
Hammond	2,403,500	205,500
Harvey	30,500	118,400
Highland Park	130,400	151,800
Joliet	47,100	162,300
La Grange	37,800	6,500
Lake Forest	125,300	38,500
Maywood	53,600	111,600
Niles Center	42,500	213,700
Oak Park	462,600	187,700
Park Ridge	117,200	55,500
Waukegan	272,100	150,900
Wheaton	30,500	685,000
Whiting	213,100	2,025
Wilmette	61,000	48,100
Winnetka	242,700	123,000

It is to be noted that sections of the metropolitan area on all sides of the city are benefiting from the increased surburban building program. Hammond gained while Gary lost. Numerous western suburbs gained while others fell below former records and a like situation prevailed in north side suburbs, although the gains for January were large enough to absorb the losses and still show a large gain for the total suburbs reporting.

Literary Digest to Move to Lake Michigan Bldg.

The Literary Digest has leased space on the twenty-second floor of the new Lake Michigan building. It will move from the Peoples Gas building on May 1.

CONTESTS TO AID HOME PLANNING IN HIGH SCHOOLS

To Show Future Citizens How to Build.

When the time comes for planning the little nest for two, with room, perhaps, for additions later on, Chicago's present day youngsters are going to be able to talk to architects and contractors in their own language, with a consequent saving in money, worry and time. For the heads of the senior high schools are placing special emphasis on the courses in architectural drawing — the slogan for the students in these classes being "Plan Your Future Home."

Albert G. Bauersfeld, director of technical work in the high schools, has stirred the enthusiasm of the eighty-nine teachers of mechanical drawing and the principals of the various schools for the plan. And the interest of the students is being aroused through competitions in each school at the close of which there will be a general competition among all the schools.

Aim of Movement.

In explaining the aims of the present movement, Mr. Bauersfeld said:

"Of course, not all the pupils of the architectural drawing classes will become architects or builders. Very few of them will. Those that do will have the ground work laid in high school for their future studies.

"However, what is more important, most of the students are potential home owners and therefore an elementary training in home planning will be a valuable experience. It often happens that adults start out to build homes without any knowledge of the preliminary steps to plan one intelligently. They consult architects and contractors and have plans and specifications drawn up to accord with their somewhat hazy wishes.

Extra Costs, Delays.

"These adults are unable to read plans of houses drawn to scale and consequently make many changes when building operations are under way. The results are increased cost and delays. When architects and contractors have customers able to read working drawings and to visualize sizes and proportions in rooms, halls, etc., more satisfactory relations may be had.

"In order that each high school may receive the benefit of the increasing emphasis on architectural drawing, a preliminary exhibition will be developed in which each entry will be mounted in the school corridor. Prominent architects will be asked to judge them. Awards will be made.

"The best drawings will then be exhibited in the board of education administrative building, 460 South State street when the final awards for the three best entries in each of four classifications will be made by a committee of prominent architects.

Division of Contests.

"Here are the four divisions:

"Class A: A complete set of competitive drawings for a six room house to be prepared by senior students taking architectural drawing.

"Class B: A complete set of competitive drawings for a five room bungalow to be prepared by junior students.

"Class C: Competitive drawings of building details to be prepared by sophomore and freshman students.

"Class D: Competitive drawings on the rendering of the classical architectural orders by junior students who are specializing in this particular field.

"Each school will have its preliminary exhibition either the last week of March or the first week of April. The final competition will follow, immediately after."

New Chain Store System Leases on West Madison

Silver Dollar Stores Inc., chain store system dealing in women's merchandise costing no less than and no more than $1, has leased from Mandel Cohen and Jacob Mell the store at 4145 West Madison street for ten years at an aggregate rental of $45,000. This is the first of twenty shops which the firm proposes to open in Chicago during the year. Benjamin Rose was broker. Krinsky, Levitan & Glassner and Harry Cowen were attorneys.

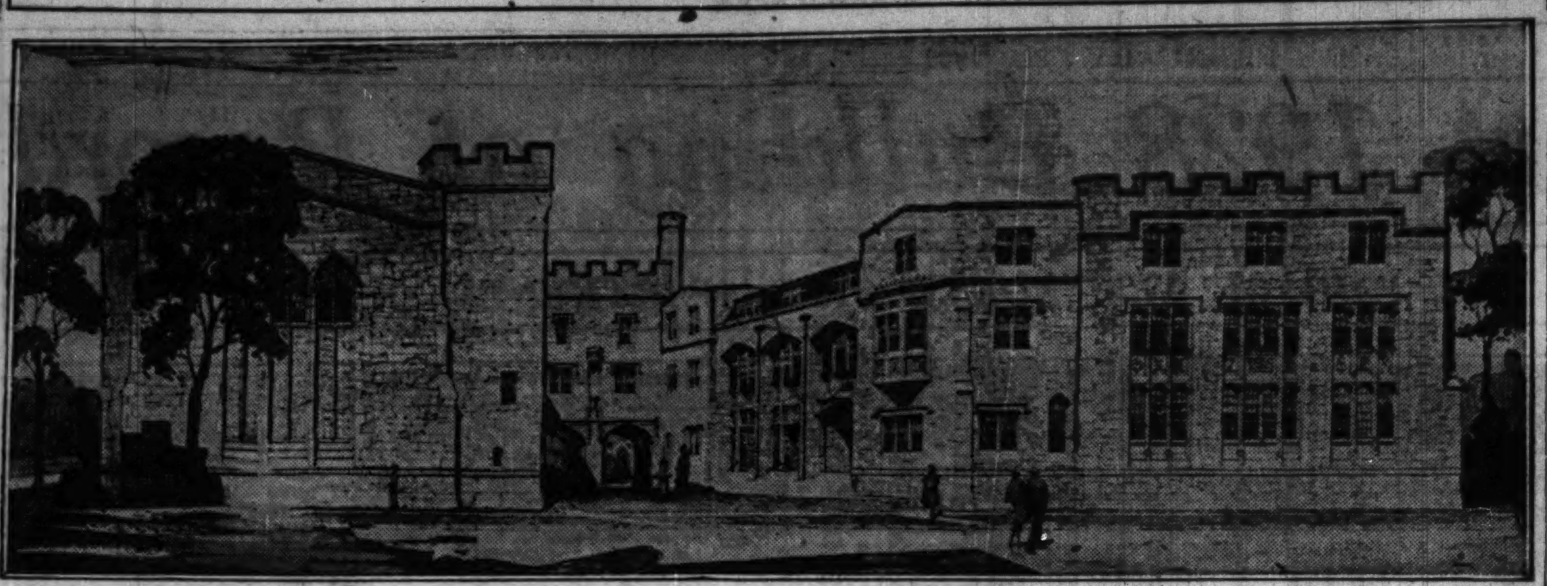
$800,000 BUILDING DEVELOPMENT UNDER WAY IN NORTH PARK

An interesting development involving an investment of about $800,000 in land and building is under way for Erick Nelson Linn, building contractor, in the North Park district, immediately north of Bryn Mawr and just west of the North Shore channel. One unit consists of twenty-seven two flat buildings which he expects to have completed by May 1. After these are finished he plans to start on twenty-five more.

The buildings under construction and those to be built will be located along Christiana, Bernard, and St. Louis. In addition he is erecting a sixteen flat building at the northeast corner of Foster and Bernard. Mr. Linn put up sixty-six buildings during the last year.

The North Park section has been the scene of considerable activity during the last fourteen months. In the neighborhood of 100 homes were erected along Kimball avenue and adjacent streets between Foster and Ardmore. Kimball avenue was paved north to Peterson avenue and Bryn Mawr, Spaulding, Christiana, Bernard, St. Louis, Drake and Ardmore too were paved. The opening of the $500,000 Peterson school has given impetus to the development of the section.

DISCIPLES HOUSE



Henry K. Holsman designed the above Disciples house, to be erected just east of the University Church of the Disciples of Christ, at the northeast corner of University and 57th. It will be rubble, with cut stone trimmings. The design is English Gothic. Details are given in a nearby column.

LET CONTRACTS FOR $125,000 DISCIPLES HOUSE

Will Be Unit in Group Costing $500,000.

Contracts for the erection of the Disciples House of the University of Chicago have been let and work will start shortly on the building, designed by Henry K. Holsman. The major portion of the contracts has been awarded to E. L. Archibald.

The building will stand on the lot immediately east of the University Church of the Disciples of Christ, at the northeast corner of University avenue and 57th street. It will be of English Gothic design to correspond with the church edifice.

The cost, including furnishings, will approximate $125,000. It will be one of a group of buildings, including the church and another structure to be erected later, which will represent a total investment of $500,000.

The main floor of the Disciples house will provide a library, an office for the dean, a large common room or lounge, and a chapel. The second and third floors will contain dormitories for students. Arrangements will be made for a kitchen and large dining room in the basement.

The funds for the building were raised while Dr. W. E. Garrison was dean. Dr. E. S. Ames is the present dean and Dr. Garrison continues his relation as a professor in the department of church history. The Rev. Perry J. Rice is chairman of the board of trustees.

REALTY BOARD PAYS TRIBUTE TO ITS LATE HEAD, C. F. DURLAND

The following tribute to the late Charles F. Durland, president of the Chicago Real Estate board, was drawn up by the last three heads of that body, prior to Mr. Durland's régime, John P. Hooker, S. Charles Iversen and Joseph K. Brittain, and adopted at a memorial service held Friday morning at the board rooms.

"We meet today at a memorial service to pay our last tributes of affection and respect to our beloved president, Charles F. Durland, who departed this life on Tuesday, Feb. 7, 1928, after a short illness. He was born in southern Illinois and came to Chicago at the age of 22 to become connected with the Newberry estate which he represented for over 30 years.

"His activities were not confined to real estate. He was interested in good government and from 1917 to 1919 was president of the village of River Forest, where he had continuously resided since 1894. His long and honorable business career and his continuing interest in all that was best for his chosen profession of real estate was recognized by his unanimous selection for the presidency of our board.

"The Chicago Real Estate board will miss his advice and counsel, but his fine record as a man and a citizen will long be remembered by his associates. To his bereaved wife and family we extend our loving sympathy and request that this brief tribute of our respect and esteem be spread upon our records and an engrossed copy be sent to his family."

CATHOLICS HONOR HUGH MULLIGAN, ASBESTOS CHIEF

Labor Leaders Complain of Banquet Epidemic.

BY THOMAS WREN.

HUGHIE MULLIGAN.

Chicago labor officials are still congratulating Hughie Mulligan of the Asbestos Workers' union over his election as president of the St. Francis Laymen's Retreat league, a Catholic organization, which in Chicago and vicinity is under the supervision of Father Patrick Maloney, a member of the Franciscan order.

Mulligan's selection is the first time a local trade unionist was so honored. Announcement of Mulligan's leadership of the league was made at the annual banquet given by the organization at the Hotel La Salle. Bishop Edward Hoban, one of the enthusiastic supporters of the St. Francis Laymen's Retreat league, presided.

Several large Chicago labor organizations have already announced they intend to become members of the retreat league, which conducts sixty hour retreats throughout the year at Mayslake, Ill.

With Conservative Group.

One of the first to come out with an announcement was Michael J. Kelly, secretary-treasurer of the Chicago Meat Cutters' union, and head also of the Cook County Wage Earners' league. Mike Kelly has always been identified with the conservaitve element in labor and has championed the cause of conservatism against the pleas of the ultra radicals at labor conventions. He is director of labor for the board of education.

Next came Charles Mulcahy and Barney Ruburry of the Chicago Journeymen Plumbers' union. Mulcahy has long been identified with the Holy Name society in Chicago. Mr. Mulcahy said he intends to interest some of the Chicago labor officials, who spend their winter months in warmer climes, in the retreat movement.

He said when effort is made to have them spend sixty hours at Mayslake they complain of the lack of time, adding these same laborities think nothing of going south each year for two and three months.

Too Many Banquets.

Chicago labor officials are fast becoming victims of stomach trouble because of the epidemic of banquets they have to attend, according to Ben Parker, one of the old time local labor organizers. He lined up the Chicago waiters into a trade union, which was classed as a great feat by the labor movement.

For recreation during the war Parker used to sell Greek restaurant owners Liberty bonds, and after he accomplished the job he would start in to organize the waiters and waitresses.

"Of recent months I've noticed many of my old labor friends going about the loop holding their hands at midsections," said Parker.

"A new ailment, thought I. I inquired. Too many banquets since April have put our bags on the blink. One said he had spent $3,200 on tickets for banquets, testimonials, and the like since last April. I thought the figure high, but the aged look on his face left the matter an open question."

HOUSE OF TYPE EASY TO SELL IF NECESSITY RISES

Five Room Bungalow of Colonial Design.

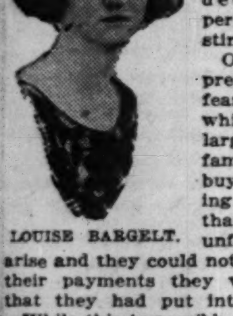
BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]



LOUISE BARGELT.

It is a fundamental instinct with most men and women who are married and living amid conditions which make possible normal home life, to desire a home of their own. Still more deeply rooted, perhaps, is the instinct to build it.

One of the ever present, acute fears, however, which keep a large number of families from buying or building is the fear that should some unforeseen event arise and they could not continue with their payments they would lose all that they had put into their home.

While this is possible, it is not probable. Not in this present era in which we live. Like the old mortgage terror and imprisonment for debt terror, this "losing one's home" fear is no longer a live thing.

Why not? For the simple reason that when a man sees he isn't going to be able to meet his payments he takes the matter up with his banker and his real estate agent and some way, somehow, a sale of the house is usually arranged to another person.

Plenty of Advice.

But supposing he can't sell his house? He can sell it if in buying it or building it he has paid careful attention to certain essentials needed to erect a "saleable" house. This resale value of a house, indeed, is one of the most important points for a home owner to consider. And every good architect and every good builder knows what these points are. The prospective buyer or builder has plenty of expert advice to obtain on this subject from a number of different sources.

Houses, of course, are not alike in their resale value. Take a house on the order of the one shown today. If it were well built and placed on any sort of suitable lot, a man would have little trouble reselling it.

In the first place a five room house is a very popular size. Secondly, houses on the bungalow order, with rooms all on one floor, are indisputably easy to dispose of. And again the simple lines of this small colonial residence would carry a large appeal among people looking for this general size of house.

It is of brick, and as the architect describes, "full of life and sparkle"; the vivid red of the bricks interspersed with a suggestion of orange and cream in the mortar. Flat white marks the woodwork and the roof is of a grey green slate or asphalt shingles.

Dining and Living Room.

The austerely effective colonial entrance leads into a combination living roof and dining room. This, however, does not need to be a combination room if the idea is not deemed desirable. The room could easily have a semi-division, and a small, but detached dining room created in this way.

Another feature which might easily be added, a practical feature in many domestic situations, is a door from the front porch opening in the bedroom. This would make the bedroom separate from the rest of the house and transform it into a room which could easily be rented. In the early stages of home ownership a young couple often finds that renting a room adds a comfortable bit to the family exchequer.

The living room is to be colonial in treatment, small cornice, fireplace, and wainscot in satin finish old ivory. Colonial paper on the walls of living room and bedrooms and hall would enhance the general colonial atmosphere.

The floors are to be of oak, excepting in the bath and kitchen where they can be of inlaid linoleum, or rubber tiling.

Casement Type Window.

The windows are of casement, out swung. It is interesting to know that casement windows are consistent with colonial exteriors, whether of brick or wood, as our colonial builders were among the first to use this type of windows.

The pilgrims came direct from England and naturally brought with them purely English ideas.

In the basement there is no provision for fuel and furnace room specified. Apparently the house is to be fueled by gas or oil. In ease coal were burned some of the space so pleasantly apportioned to the billiard room would have to be commandeered for fuel uses.

In the landscaping and placing of the house on the lot most of the lawn area has been given to the front of the house. This is often done where the house is built in a community where backyards are not modern in their landscaping. The small ground area at the back can be utilized for the vegetable garden or drying space.

The house is well insulated which means that it can be heated much more inexpensively than a noninsulated house of the same size.

What should a house like this one cost?

Of brick, with slate roof, and along the general lines indicated above, somewhere between $10,000 and $11,000. If it were of frame, with less expensive roofing, and economy were practiced in such matters as floorings, trim, fixtures, interior wall finish, etc., it could be built for from $8,000 to $9,000.

SEEKING WAY TO FINANCE HOUSE? TRY BUDGETING

Many inquiries come to the Home Builders' department, asking just "how" to acquire a home; to get money ahead to make the initial down payment, and then be sure afterwards of meeting mortgage payments, interest, home upkeep, etc.

The answer to this question may not be the same in every instance, but in almost every case the solving of the problem lies in the proper budgeting of the family income.

Right here many people will exclaim, "But the Joneses don't run on a budget and look at the nice house they bought," or the "Jacksons don't know the meaning of the word budget and yet they seem to have everything a family needs and aren't hard pressed either in meeting their bills."

That may be true enough. There are numberless families who do not budget. But those families who do not and yet manage well without it are families where the man and wife understand the importance of wise spending; they keep their expenses more than covered by their income. They have more or less instinctively mastered the art of managing their money rather than letting it manage them.

But for the family who does not seem to understand this instinctive budgeting of family resources it is well to try to live on a real budget.

Discouraging perhaps at first. It may reveal in black and white that the family is living beyond its means; that careless small expenses are preventing the accumulation of any lump sum for investment.

It takes will power and coöperation on the part of all the older family members to live on a budget.

Once the matter is determined, however, and all are agreed to "live within its rules and regulations," the family has taken very definite steps towards eventual home owning and financial independence.

NEW WALL PAPER GIVES EASY WAY TO REFRESH HOME

Beautiful New Designs; Cost Not Too High.

BY HOMER GRANT.

It won't be long now before a great many wives and home owners will discuss giving the house some new touches for spring; touches which will freshen it and transform it; infuse it with new atmosphere and a gayety in keeping with warming winds and sunny skies.

One simple way of changing the home atmosphere is to redecorate the walls. And in this decorating process there are few features which add so much beauty at so comparatively little cost as wall paper.

Wall paper as it is manufactured today is well suited to the most charming rooms. When wall paper came into the world, good fairies certainly surrounded its cradle. They gave to it grace of design and charm of color and an infinite variety of composition.

One can choose from a dazzling array of delightful colors, bewitching designs. And one can choose freely, too, without the hovering fear that before one is through, financial disaster may be seen lurking in the offing.

Personality in Wall Paper.

Whatever the type of room, there is a wall paper to suit it, and far more easily and vividly than ever before can one's own personality be reflected in the home through the richly expressive medium of modern wall papers.

Among the newer trends in pattern designs are those which are copied from a collection of old French fabric prints recently exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. This type is called "Toile de Jouey" and it shows in soft henna shades the intricacies and excitement of the boar hunt.

Nor were conventional scenic papers ever so attractive. Some of them, Japanese in character, are not only suitable for their decorative effects but also for their prevailing types.

There are softly dignified patterns in gracious, melting tones, which are reminiscent of tapestry or needle work; patterns which lend distinction to even the simplest rooms.

Paper of Modern Design.

Then, too, there are papers which stress the modern note, suggesting striking colors and intriguing movement.

In choosing wall papers there are a few major facts which should be kept in mind.

Warm colors, such as yellow, tan, cream, etc., of course add brightness and charm to any room and where they are used in the darker tones they can give an intimate cozy touch to any large room.

Cool colors such as gray, blue, lavender, and green tone down rooms which are too bright.

Naturally in a small room a small design is preferable, but if the design is too small the effect is apt to be insignificant.

Is your room too high?

You can lower the effect by using a paper of strong design up to 18 inches from the ceiling and bringing the ceiling paper down to meet it.

Is your room too low?

Consider the Borders.

Nor should the question of borders be passed by without due consideration. For where they are used they should be used correctly, or they can mar the entire appearance of a room.

The border, for instance, should be in harmony with the paper. If it stands out too vividly it will kill the paper. If it is too weak it will fail of its purpose as a finishing frame.

As a general rule the border should be darker in value than the side wall.

No woman who is suffering from temporary boredom with herself or her home, or wondering what she can do for the house in the spring to give it a change, but who should be able to derive real pleasure from a study and consideration of the modern wall papers now ready for spring decorations.

NOVEL SWITCH ON STAIRS HELP CUT LIGHT BILL

In that new home there is one small feature which will appeal to many women which can easily be installed. It is the electric light switch that is stair controlled.

When one goes down into the cellar or up into the attic, the lights go on! And when one comes up from the cellar or down from the attic the lights as obligingly and mechanically, go out!

Electricity Does the Work in Refinishing of Floors

Electricity is playing a larger part all the time in the refinishing of floors. As in so many other lines, the electrical machine does the heavy work while the human machine does the head work. Floors can now be scraped, sandpapered, waxed and polished, all electrically.

WATERPROOF BASEMENTS.

Waterproof basements breathe peace of mind as a flower diffuses perfume.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Moisture in the Air.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: I have read several articles lately which claimed that a house should never have its temperature over 68 degrees. Well, I'll say that I am cold if the temperature of our house drops below 72 degrees. Is something wrong with me or with the house or what?—G. F.

Answer—Have you any idea whether or not your atmosphere in the house is sufficiently moist? If the air is desert dry the house can seem less comfortable with the thermometer at 80 degrees than if the air is properly moist and the temperature is at 68 or 70 degrees. Test out the humidity in your house. Find out how moist the air actually is. If it is too dry investigate the different methods of humidification on the market.

Extend Your Chimney.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Measurements have shown that the chimney of our house is too short and also that there is a loosely fitted smoke pipe. What can be done about these troubles?—A. T.

Answer—First, extend your chimney. Next, close the leaks with cement.

Thickest the Butt — It's Tapered — Thin at the Top

On your roof, the laid-to-weather portions of Winthrops will be almost twice as thick as the exposed portions of standard asphalt shingles. The difference is in the taper—in the thick butt built up of extra coats of everlasting asphalt. Ask for the name of a dealer near you.

Hog supplies on the week-end session met an erratic trade, prices ranging from 10c lower to 10c higher, with general average unchanged at $8.25. Butcher grades cleared at strong to 10c higher prices, large local packers being the strongest supporters. Outsiders bought only 2,000, with about 3,000 left at the close. Prevailing quotations are mostly 10@15c above a week ago.

With combined hog receipts during the last four weeks at Chicago exceeding 1,000,000, prices last week averaged $8.15, within 5c of the lowest since July, 1924. A reaction on lighter supplies in midweek, carried the top to $8.65 Thursday, equaling the highest since Jan. 5. Weights were heaviest since last October and equal to the heaviest corresponding week in over five years. The estimate at 238 lbs, shows a 12 lb gain over a month ago.

Cattle experienced an erratic and bewildering market during the week, causing many sellers to withdraw offerings until next week in hopes that the trade would be more stable by Monday. Following a 25@50c advance at the start, demand dropped off and a mostly 50c slump in prices resulted, in face of the smallest receipts of the year. Bids $1.00 below the high point of the week were cited at the close. Top steers stopped at $17.65, against $18.50 early the previous week.

Sheep Sell High.

A sensational advance carried sheep and lamb prices to new high prices for the season during last week, all classes standing highest since last June. Lambs averaged $15.35, highest since June, 1927, when the new crop lamb held the average up. Lambs scored gains of 75c, with yearlings $1.00@1.25 higher and sheep $1.00 higher. Lambs reached $16.00, yearlings $14.85 and old ewes $9.50.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 18,000 cattle, 85,000 hogs, and 20,000 sheep, against 16,803 cattle, 93,331 hogs, and 15,135 sheep, a week ago and 20,742 cattle, 43,531 hogs and 13,769 sheep, the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 46,000 cattle, 230,000 hogs and 90,000 sheep, against 57,565 cattle, 140,121 hogs, and 81,824 sheep a year ago.

County Forest Preserve to Exhibit at Flower Show

THE COOK COUNTY FOREST preserve is planning to exhibit an exact replica of some wooded area surrounding Chicago at the coming second annual garden and flower show which is to open at the Sherman hotel Mar. 24. Real growing trees, grass and plants will be used. The preserve exhibit will contribute in the attempt by the major park systems to reflect the intense interest, both public and private, that is being taken in natural landscape and in flowers, shrubs and trees grown around homes in this locality.

Farmer Urged to Consider City Demands

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

SHEEP men have been coming to the city lately to see if it is possible to hook productions up a little closer with what the consumer wants. They recognize the highly competitive situation between farmers who produce different kinds of products.

R. C. POLLOCK.

Step by step the breeders and feeders have changed the sheep industry to meet the consumptive demands. They shifted from a wool and mutton basis to a wool and lamb basis more than a decade ago. Many years ago the sheep men of this country learned that lamb meat was good every month in the year. Consumers do not wait for the Easter holiday to eat lamb or for the months that have a letter "r" in them.

Through breeding and better methods of feeding and management the quality of lambs has been greatly improved within the last twenty-five years, according to R. C. Pollock, general manager of the National Live Stock and Meat board.

In this small package, cash and carry age, farmers have recently learned that they have still another situation to meet in addition to producing high quality lambs every month in the year. There is a demand for smaller chops and smaller lamb's leg by home consumers. The job of making smaller cuts cannot be left to the butcher with a sharp saw and clever; it must begin on the farm.

A New Problem.

Producers point out that breeding and feeding authorities have been urging them for many years to breed up their flocks to get good sized, high grade lambs. They have been successful, but now they meet with a new difficulty. Breeding up their flocks has led to the 90 pound lamb which turns out legs that weigh about 7 to 7½ pounds each, marketing experts say. The big demand from the cooks in the great majority of city homes is for a leg of lamb that weighs from four to six pounds. This calls for a 75 pound lamb.

The problem has not yet been solved. On the central markets more money is being offered for the light lamb. Recently lambs weighing 75 pounds have sold for approximately $1 a hundred more than heavier grades that weigh 90 pounds or more.

It would be easy if producers could swing to a 75 pound lamb that would come out of the feed lot with a finish equal to the heavier grades. The solution may be deeper than that; breeding experts will probably be called in again to revise their plans and use a smaller pattern in cutting lamb skins to meet future needs.

This year farmers and ranchers are feeling the effects of this demand for smaller lambs. The federal government's report a few days ago said that the number of sheep and lambs in the country was 2,700,000 greater at the beginning of this year than last and was the largest in sixteen years. About ten per cent more lambs were reported on feed. Prospects indicate a lamb crop this spring somewhat larger than last, assuming average weather conditions. The report adds that this means there will be apparently more lambs coming to market both in the first half and in the latter half of this year than was the case last year. The wool situation appears favorable to farmers.

A Million Pounds a Month.

Normally this country consumes roughly about 1,000,000 pounds of lamb each month, or from 12,000,000 to 14,000,000 a year. Seven men were recently in Chicago representing associations in the west which are now feeding approximately 2,225,000 lambs. The names of the men with the associations and the number of lambs fed by members of the organizations are given below:

H. W. Farr, president of the Weld County Lamb Feeders' association, Greeley, Colo., 475,000 lambs. Mr. Farr is personally feeding in his own lots about 28,000 lambs.

Charles Mason of the Morgan County Lamb Feeders' association, Fort Morgan, Colo., 240,000 to 250,000 lambs.

N. C. Warren of the Fort Collins, Colo., Lamb Feeders' association, 600,000 lambs.

T. C. Halley of the North Platte Lamb Feeders' association, Scotts Bluff, Neb., 300,000 lambs.

E. C. Levenworth, representing the Central Nebraska Lamb Feeders' association, Wood River, Neb., 300,000 lambs.

Fred Klink of Denver, Colo., the biggest single lamb feeder in America, has 100,000 lambs in his feed lot this year. He has had as many as 160,000 at one time.

These lambs are bought on the range in the fall and fed for 90 to 150 bay, together with sugar beet by-products. About 75 per cent of them are fed beet tops and 15 per cent beet pulp, according to Mr. Farr. The lambs fed by these western feeders come from the ranges in Wyoming, Montana, Utah, Nevada, southern Colorado, and New Mexico, and a few from Texas, Arizona, and Idaho. There are usually from 1,000 to 2,000 handled by each feeder.

About forty per cent of the corn fed lambs produced annually in the United States come from the feed lots of Colorado, Nebraska, and Kansas. On the year around lamb program in this country these three states send their supply to the market between Jan. 1 and May 1.

The rest of the lamb calendar for the United States runs about like this: Kentucky, Tennessee, California, and Texas furnish milk fed lambs to the consuming centers during May and June. Idaho, Oregon, and Washington market their lambs in July and August. The native lambs from the eastern sections and the corn belt are put on the market in September, October, November, and December. By that time the western lambs are fattened and ready for market.

Fed in Open Pens.

Western lambs are usually fed in open pens with no shelter but are in a dry, healthful climate. They are bedded carefully with straw so that at all times they are on dry "footing." About 600 are fed in each pen.

Feeders of the west have changed their scheme of marketing within recent years. Instead of following the practice of loading all of their lambs on a train at one time, they pick out the best of the flock and bring a few loads at a time. The old practice was to bring all of the lambs to the holding yards a few miles out from the terminal market and bring in a few loads to avoid overloading the market. Now the plan, which is being successfully followed, is to market a few of the top lambs which puts a superior, finished animal on the market. Feeders are becoming skilled in giving the lambs an excellent finish and marketing them before they go over the 90 pound mark, which is about the maximum weight for best results at the market place.

In Europe nearly three times as many pounds of mutton and lamb are consumed as in this country. The per capita consumption in the United States is only 5.8 pounds; in the Argentine, 28 pounds; in Canada, 10.2; in the United Kingdom, 25.8; in France, 9, in Germany, 8.2 pounds per capita.

M'LEAN DAIRYMEN USE CO-OP SELLING PLAN

A. D. LYNCH, manager of the McLean County Milk Producers' association, reports that since the organization was formed in December the cooperators have sold nearly 3,000,000 pounds of milk. More than 1,300 pounds of fluid milk were sold during the first month the association operated in Bloomington, Ill.

Mr. Lynch, who is also dairy marketing director of the Illinois Agricultural association, Chicago, says that this collective selling agency, one of several now in Illinois, furnishes more than 80 per cent of all the milk sold in Bloomington. With a few modifications the plan followed by the dairymen around Bloomington is modeled after the one used at Peoria by the Illinois Milk Producers' association.

Forest Fairchild of Bloomington is assistant manager of the new agency. He checks on the weights and tests and aids the farmer members on their feeding and quality improvement problems.

Milk retails in Bloomington and Normal at 12½ cents a quart, with a test of 4 per cent butter fat. With milk selling at this price the farmers were paid during the first month they operated under the coöperative plan an average of $2.31 a hundred for 3.5 milk. Fluid A brought $2.82 for 4 per cent milk, manufactured $2.25 and surplus, for butter, $1.63 a hundred.

Farmers Warned to Watch for Stray Dogs with Rabies

FARMERS SHOULD KEEP an eagle eye on stray dogs nowadays. Mad dogs are more or less common in the middle west. Authorities are taking in suspicious dogs as fast as they can round them up, but it is impossible for all of them to be put under guard.

Dogs with rabies are not only in Illinois, but are causing trouble in other states—New York, Massachusetts, and Georgia. One single dog suffering from rabies can cause trouble throughout a community or state. The North American Veterinarian in its current issue tells of a case reported by Dr. G. E. Corwin, deputy commissioner of domestic animals in Connecticut, where a single rabid dog traveled 147 miles, going through eight towns and biting 93 dogs. It is possible that other dogs were bitten by the same dog.

THEY VISITED CHICAGO TO SEE WHAT CONSUMERS WANT—Their western feeder associations handle more than one-sisth of all the lambs produced annually in the United States. Left to right: T. C. Halley, Scotts Bluff, Neb.; Bert Culp, Beloit, Kan.; Charles Mason, Ft. Morgan, Colo.; E. S. Leavenworth, Wood River, Neb.; H. W. Farr, Greeley, Colo.; N. C. Warren, Ft. Collins, Colo., and Fred Klink, Denver, Colo. Mr. Klink is the largest lamb feeder in the United States, handling as many as 160,000 in a single year.

It Cost But $738.46 for Fuel (Oil) to Heat This 9-Story Office Building During the Past 4 Months!

Sub-Atmospheric Steam establishes an amazing record for economy in the Dunham Building, having 7,704 sq. ft. of radiation, plus hot water requirements, for the period from October 1, 1927, to January 31, 1928.

SUB-ATMOSPHERIC Steam was developed by us after years of research in the Dunham Laboratories. We subjected this new form of heating to every test we knew. We proved its economy and its flexibility in our laboratories to know beyond question that we had discovered and successfully applied the principles and the devices that engineers have sought for decades. We then installed Sub-Atmospheric Steam in our own building in Chicago, a nine-story office structure at 450 East Ohio Street.

The results of the change from a Vacuum Return Line System to a Dunham Differential Vacuum Heating System in the Dunham Building far surpassed our expectations. In uniformity of heat, in economy of fuel, in simplicity of operation, this new system of heating, utilizing Sub-Atmospheric Steam, established new records which amazed outside engineers who inspected its performance.

The total cost for fuel (oil at average of 5.6 cents per gallon) to heat this building, including hot water requirements, was but $738.46 for the four months' period from October 1, 1927, to January 31, 1928.

It is safe to say that never before, in the entire history of steam heating, had a heating system shown such fuel savings. Wasteful window opening was done away with because steam pressures and steam temperatures, in the Dunham Differential System, were for the first time modified successfully to compensate for outdoor temperatures, heat losses from the building, and wind effect.

As a result of a (Dunham Building) Test during eight months of the winter of 1926-27 an average indoor temperature of 71.2 degrees was maintained during office hours. The temperature was never less than 68 degrees at 8 a. m. Outdoor averages were 40.3 degrees. The average for January was 23.8. The average vacuum in the boiler for this period was 15.17 inches, while the vacuum in the return line was 16.85 inches.

Based upon these remarkable figures, and guided by the prestige of the name Dunham in heating, scores of other Chicago buildings have installed the Differential Vacuum Heating System, or have converted existing systems to utilize Sub-Atmospheric Steam.

In these new and larger installations even more remarkable results have been achieved. Building owners awoke to a realization of the fact that huge losses could be done away with by utilizing the flexibility of Sub-Atmospheric Steam. For this new system uses steam at pressures below atmosphere, and at temperatures as low as 133 degrees within the radiator. In mild weather, which constitutes the greater part of the heating season, a correspondingly smaller fuel consumption should really be required, and the Dunham Differential System supplies an ample amount of heat to uniformly warm every room, but none to waste through wide-opened windows. Thus one of the greatest evils of modern heating is eliminated, and huge economies are possible.

Architects, consulting engineers and heating contractors are invited to write us for detailed information about the record of Sub-Atmospheric Steam in numerous Chicago buildings, including the Dunham Building installation. For your convenience we have supplied a coupon in the lower right hand corner of this advertisement.

CHICAGO STOCKS STRONG IN FINAL MEET OF WEEK

The Chicago and New York stock markets and all other New York financial markets and the Chicago grain market will be closed tomorrow owing to the Lincoln's birthday holiday. Banks also will be closed.

Chicago stocks were strong in the two hour week-end session yesterday although a bit of profit taking cropped out toward the close and a few issues sold lower.

Pines Winterfront led the up side on reports of improved earnings, closing with a net gain of 2¼ to 63½. Armour of Illinois preferred was under accumulation and advanced 2 points to 79. Galesburg-Coulter Disc was 1⅝ higher while National Standard, National Electric Power "A" and Chicago City and Connecting preferred were fractionally higher.

Stewart-Warner lost 1½, Montgomery Ward eased 1¼ and North American Car was off ½. Yellow Cab closed unchanged. Recent selling in this issue was attributed to liquidation of holdings of the late Charles Gray, who was president of the company, and rumors of a reduction in the dividend rate.

Ward Up 14 in Week.

Among the active shares during the week just closed the mail order stocks were the star performers. About the time that shorts in Montgomery Ward were being squeezed, insiders anticipated the announcement that the company has entered the chain store field on a large scale and that fifty retail stores would be in operation before the end of 1928 and that as fast as the stores could be established a chain of 1,500 stores would be opened in towns of 5,000 or more in population throughout the country. As a result, the stock shot up and despite profit taking after the "good news" was out, a net gain of 14 points for the week was registered.

Sears-Roebuck closed yesterday with a net gain of 6¾. The company announced several days ago that it would break ground at once for two retail stores and a warehouse in Cleveland at a cost of something like $3,000,000.

The market as a whole for the week was irregular, with issues suffering declines exceeding advances by less than half a dozen.

Call Money Desk Opens Thursday.

An important development during the week was the announcement yesterday that the call money market heralded previously, will be put into operation on Feb. 16. The call desk will be a sort of clearing point for furnishing brokers and bond dealers with information as to what loans the various banks are prepared to make and the brokers can then deal directly with the banks.

Something like one hundred million dollars will be available, it was learned yesterday, for the new call money market. Eight banks have already agreed to furnish the funds. According to the plan just completed, the collateral securing these loans must be a mixed collateral consisting of New York and Chicago securities in amounts and character satisfactory to the lending banks, and the lender may count upon immediate payment either on demand or at maturity, in the case of time loans, without request for renewal, extension or replacement.

Construction Contracts Close to January Record

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Total construction contracts awarded during January in the 37 states east of the Rocky mountains amounted to $427,168,700, the F. W. Dodge corporation reports. These states include 91 per cent of the country's construction volume. The figure was next to the largest January total on record, an increase of 11 per cent over January last year, but a decline of 11 per cent compared with December. New England, the central west, and Texas made new high records for January.

Business Failures Fewer; Bank Clearings Go Higher

The further decrease in the number of failures in the United States is reported to R. G. Dun & Co. this week, the total being 546. This is 25 less than the 571 defaults last week, and is 100 below the number two weeks ago. Moreover, a reduction of 48 appears in comparison with the 594 insolvencies a year ago. Bank clearings this week at all leading cities in the United States of $9,971,873,000 show an increase of 11.7 per cent over those of the corresponding week last year.

Less Cottonseed Crushed Than Yr. Ago, U. S. Reports

Washington, D. C., Feb. 11.—(AP)—Cottonseed crushed in the six month period, Aug. 1 to Jan. 31, the census bureau announced today, totaled 3,577,438 tons, compared with 4,262,775 tons in the same period a year ago, and cottonseed on hand at mills Jan. 31 totaled 763,353 tons, compared with 1,035,766 tons a year ago.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—(AP)—COTTONSEED OIL—Closed 12 to 20 points net higher on renewed covering and a general demand through cotton and commission houses in response to the strength of crude oil and the bullish January consumption report. The census bureau report placed consumption during December at 270,055 barrels, against 222,000 consumed in December and 352,000 in January last year. Pre-holiday profit taking supplied the offerings. Sales, 18,700 bbls. Prime crude, 8.00c; prime summer yellow spot, 9.50c; March closed 9.49c; May, 9.70c; July, 9.91c; Aug., 10.02c; Sept., 10.04c.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Lamborn & Co. estimate sugar production for 1927-'28 at 25,766,000 tons, an increase of 1,219,000 tons, or 4.9 per cent, ovre the previous year. Consumption is placed at 25,697,000 tons, an increase of 1,021,000 tons for the year. While futures closed dull, and 1 point lower to 1 point higher, the undertone was rather firm. Slowness in domestic demand for granulated caused refineries to act with caution in buying raws. Prices follow:

LACK OF FARM PROFITS FREEZES ASSETS IN BANK

BY HARPER LEECH.

What does the successful midwestern industrialist think of the conditions of the agricultural population round about him? Such men have been little heard from, while financiers, farm experts, and politicians have talked much.

W. A. Sheaffer of Fort Madison, Ia., whose success as a manufacturer of high grade fountain pens, sold all over the world, attracted so much attention in Wall and La Salle streets recently, after some persuasive effort on my part, has been induced to tell the readers of this column what happened in Iowa as he sees it. Whether one agrees or disagrees with him, his views are worth a world of long range generalities.

"Much has been said," Mr. Sheaffer writes, "about 'frozen assets' in banks being the cause of the bank trouble in Iowa, but very little has been said about what caused the 'frozen assets.' Some years ago the most liquid loans in the banks of the central west were farmers' loans. They borrowed on 60 and 90 days time to put cattle and hogs on feed, shipping them to market and then paying the loans.

"These were called the best liquid loans of any in the country and worked very well, until the time came when the farmer who had gone to the bank and borrowed the money to buy his stock and feed, found after he had shipped the stock to market, that he did not have as much money as he had borrowed. This continued until the farmer was in debt to the bank and still continued until the bank was forced to take a mortgage on his farm. Then this was called a 'frozen asset.'

"It is just exactly the same as it would be if the government should reduce the tariff on manufacturers' goods to a point where the American manufacturer couldn't operate profitably, and would sell at a loss. What are called 'liquid loans' to manufacturers all over the United States, could in a few years become 'frozen assets,' because the banks as a last resort would take mortgages on the buildings, machinery and business houses all over the country to protect themselves.

"Then the most liquid loans we have today would become 'frozen assets.' The theory that land speculation caused most of the trouble in Iowa is not borne out by the facts, for during the entire period of inflation, only seven per cent of the farms in Iowa changed hands.

"What was the reason for the distress of the 93 per cent which remained as they were?

"As a matter of fact farming seldom has paid. The money that the farmer has made in the last 30 years has been through the advance in the value of land. When he ceased to be able to sell his land for more than he paid for it, and had to buy everything in the home market and sell everything on the basis of the world market, his profit soon turned into a loss. It is not possible today to make money on almost any farm, if it were given to you, if you paid wages and paid the owner for operating it, and each member of his family as they would be paid on a railway or in a factory.

"Not only is it hardly possible to make money, it is practically impossible to come out even on such an undertaking. The only way a farm can 'pay' today is for every one on it to work without wages, and, having worked for nothing during the entire year, what is then received really as wages, would amount to what is now called the 'profit' on a farm.

"If the same people had worked in a factory they would have been paid wages and the factory managers would not consider that they had made money, unless it had made earnings above all wages paid."

World Oil Output Rises; U. S. Is Largest Producer

World production of petroleum in 1927 as shown in a preliminary report of the bureau of mines was 1,254,000,000 barrels, an increase of 156,000,000, or 14 per cent over 1926.

The United States continued to lead the list by producing 903,800,000 barrels, or more than 70 per cent of the world's total. Mexico, with a decrease of 26,000,000 barrels, gave up second place to Russia for the first time since 1917.

Russia, with a production of 72,400,000 barrels, was closely followed by Venezuela with a total of 64,400,000 barrels. Mexico went into fourth place with 64,200,000 barrels.

The structure will be owned by the Vicksburg Bridge and Terminal comany.

The rapid increase in American automobile registration is confronting the country with the necessity of greatly accelerating its good roads program, says the Union Trust company, Cleveland, unless this is done serious traffic congestion may develop on a wide scale within a few years, the bank asserts. There are now 23,000,000 automobiles registered in this country, an average of almost one car to each family and the bank thinks registration probably will reach 30,000,000 in less than five years. In 1924, expenditures for all highways outside of cities, were just under $60,000,000. In 1927 the country's outlay for highways was 1 billion 350 million dollars, a 22-fold increase.

Car output for Willys-Overland for February will reach 25,000 units and at least 40,000 for March, says John N. Willys, president. An important factor in production, he said has been found in new economies in prices of materials, which have scaled down in several directions.

An appeal to congress for more government aid in the construction of new river, lake and coastwise steamships in the United States will be embodied in a resolution to be introduced at the first annual water line conference to be held in Washington on Feb. 14 at the Hotel Willard, says H. J. Curtis, passenger traffic manager of the Hudson River Night line, chairman of the committee arranging the meeting.

Prairie Oil and Gas company had a poor year in 1927, the forthcoming annual report being expected to show net profit of about $2,500,000, slightly more than a dollar a share, compared with profit of $15,968,367 in 1926, or $6.62 a share. The quarterly dividend was omitted last October. Lower prices for crude oil caused a sharp drop in profits.

Until 1928 earnings for the Erie railroad are more apparent, some quarters in the financial district do not look for resumption of dividends on the road's preferred stocks before late in the year. It had been expected action would be taken in April.

The Bankers' Trust company, depositary of ordinary sterling shares of Rand Mines, Ltd., will pay Feb. 28 to holders of certificates for American shares, of record Feb. 21, a dividend of $1.52 a share.

Tragedy in Wildcat Investment.

We are constantly receiving letters inquiring about stocks which have been purchased some years ago and about which the owner knows nothing.

The stock never has paid a dividend and the owner has not heard of or from the company for years.

He or she writes to inquire if the company still exists or if the stock has any value and where it can be sold.

It is the old story.

Almost invariably we find that the stock has no value—or practically none—and that the company, if it really ever existed or operated, is now out of existence.

Nothing remains to those who once thought they were making an investment that would prove profitable, except a blasted hope and a piece of worthless paper, prettily engraved.

Most of these stocks were bought through solicitation by circulars or through high pressure salesmen.

The sellers were strangers to the buyers, but they made such beautiful promises and such glowing representations of large and sudden riches that their plausibility was overshadowed by the investor's desire for gain and he became a willing, perhaps eager, victim.

We have seen estates, left to heirs, containing lists of as many as twenty or thirty issues of stocks of different companies where the entire list, representing the investment of thousands of dollars—perhaps all the savings of a lifetime—was worthless.

The same amount of money invested in good securities might have made the estate worth several times what was put into it.

Good securities are just as easy to purchase as poor or worthless ones.

The trouble is that extravagant claims are not necessary to sell a good security—it can be sold on its own merits—but a great many people want to be told that they are going to get rich overnight—and want to believe it.

They welcome the extravagant claims, ignoring their credibility, and are more or less bored with the idea of a security that offers a conservative, steady income, but no large immediate profit.

They want action for their money.

They have read [and are told in the circulars and by the salesmen] of men who have made vast fortunes by daring investment and they want to duplicate these performances.

A great many even expect to do this—and with nothing to go on but the unsubstantiated promises of strangers.

We have warned innumerable inquiries against wildcat schemes and hazardous investments and we are thankful that they inquired in time.

But the tragedy lies with those who inquired too late—after their money was gone only to help make some unscrupulous promoter rich.

We want to impress on our readers the necessity for caution, even suspicion, when any investment is offered to them that is to bring them excessive returns.

As a rule the danger of the enterprise can be measured by the amount of profit predicted.

The danger, too, is doubly great when dealing with strangers—firms or companies about which the investor knows nothing, except what they say about themselves.

One is sometimes—too often, in fact—taken in by those he considers his friends; but these friends, if real, are frequently [and perhaps in good faith] representing strangers who have "roped them in."

Most of the tragedies of the investment world would be avoided, we believe, if the investor dealt only through houses of established reputation for dependability and bought only securities about which facts and figures were known and not merely rosy promises.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET ACTIVE ON HOLIDAY EVE

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Although the disinclination of speculative operations to maintain an active position over the holiday period had a retarding influence for a short period at today's opening on the curb exchange, there was a pronounced broadening of interest in the later trading. The buying was distributed over a long list of stocks but the extremely wide movements were limited to few issues.

Aluminum shares, Swift International and several mining issues displayed early strength. St. Paul issues were inclined to yield on small offerings and Pittsburgh Lake Erie dropped to the year's low on a fractional decline. Bancitaly corporation opened up 1⅛ points but failed to hold the advance on subsequent trading.

Public utility shares produced some strong spots under the impressive buying in American Superpower "A" and "B" certificates. Oils improved in the last hour with Standard Oil of Indiana recovering 1¾ points, selling above 76.

Beatrice Creamery Votes Capital Stock Increases

Stockholders of the Beatrice Creamery company at a special meeting approved the increase in authorized common stock to $12,000,000 from $7,000,000 par $50 and preferred stock to $8,000,000 from $5,000,000 par $100. At present there is outstanding $6,125,000 of common and $4,800,000 of preferred stock.

It is understood that increased capital will be used for the acquisition of additional companies, through the exchange of securities. The time required for retiring the preferred stock has been changed from ninety days to thirty days before any dividend paying date.

TRADE IN BONDS SHOWS CAUTION; PRICES SEESAW

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Only moderate activity was recorded in the bond market today, and prices showed considerable irregularity, traders were cautious about extending their commitments until after the holiday recess.

A few bonds which ordinarily are inactive stood out with rather sharp gains. Remington Rand 5½s, Long Island 5s, and New Jersey Junction 4s had gains of 1 to 3 points. Announcement that Joseph B. Kennedy, president of F. B. O. Pictures corporation, had become associated with Pathe Exchange resulted in a moderate recovery in the latter concern's 7 per cent bonds, which broke badly earlier in the week on the delay in meeting Feb. 1 sinking fund requirements.

A few active railway issues, such as Denver and Rio Grande Western 4s, Chicago Great Western 4s, and Southern Railway 6½s, changed hands in rather large amounts around yesterday's closing levels. Armour & Co. issues were firm on large transactions.

BRITISH RUBBER INQUIRY STIRS LONDON MARKET

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 11.—Rubber and industrials provided the spotlights in the week's operations on the London exchange.

The early prevailing atmosphere of rampant optimism when the industrial market blazed up again was considerably dampened later with an official announcement of a government inquiry into the working of the rubber restriction scheme.

The announcement came as a complete surprise, as indicated by the fall in price of rubber from eighteen pence to fifteen and three-quarters a pound, accompanied by a heavy slump in share values, making it practically impossible to deal in the shares at all.

Dutch Planters Profit.

The restrictions have been in force since November, 1922. The main reason the scheme has not fulfilled the expectations of its sponsors is that while the British plantations have restricted the output, the reductions have been largely offset by increased production of Dutch planters, who have taken advantage of the scheme.

Financial circles are hotly complaining of a leakage in the government's decision for an inquiry, claiming the news was known in America hours before the official announcement here, enabling the American operators to clean up at the expense of the British interests over £1,000,000 sterling [about $5,000,000]. Protest to this effect is to be laid before the government committee.

Some recovery was evidenced before the close of the week's business, both the commodity and shares steadying after Thursday's bad break.

Industrial Shares Advance.

Previous to the rubber bombshell, the industrial section attracted attention. Leading specialties were affected by a rush of fresh speculators and moved up with great rapidity. The favorites soared to new high levels, for instance, Marconis topping sixty shillings against thirteen shillings last year; Vocalions jumped to fifty-eight shillings against five shillings last year, while other gramophone leaders easily passed earlier records. The value of the British shilling is about 25 cents.

Newspapers, tobaccos, artificial silks, all were under an animated spell of activity, spreading to newly formed cinema companies, the prices leaping well ahead for more dividend yields.

The gilt edged market is not making a bad showing, considering the monetary situation and the definite announcement by the chancellor of the exchequer that there is no possibility of a reduction in income tax this year.

War Bonds Improve.

Five per cent war loans again are returning to favor, as there is little prospect now of the government framing any scheme to deal comprehensively with the repayment of the loan at the earliest date, 1929.

European sterling loans are well maintained, German loans are better, while the new Greek sixes and three-eighths premium are meeting a good demand. Mexicans are quiet, but Brazilians are still strong, with Chinese supported in growing confidence regarding internal political and economic affairs.

With the first of the dividend announcements satisfactory, home rails were given a run at the close of the week, the southern group two per cent being above the expectations.

New Anglo-French Bank Will Put Out Securities

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 11.—This morning's Daily Express announces that a new Anglo-French bank is being formed. The president will be Lord Derby. Among the English directors is Lord Charles Montague. The bank will transact business as an issuing house. The capital is small, but the transactions will be of the most important.

Utility Bonds Lead in Week's New Financing

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

New bond issues publicly offered in the week just closed totaled $149,193,000, as compared with $202,190,000 in the previous week, and $195,586,000 in the corresponding period of 1927.

Public utility obligations led as a group, showing in addition, more than a triple amount of new financing over the total of the preceding week. A total of $56,963,000 in bonds for the increase and betterment of public utility operations in this country was over subscribed in the American investment market as compared with $18,000,000 in the previous week.

Foreign financing totaled $37,116,000 compared with $90,750,000 the week before while industrial concerns put out $32,000,000 in bonds as against $48,750,000. Railroads appeared in the investment market for less than $10,000,000 compared with $42,351,000. Despite the smaller total of offerings the range was wider with an aggregate of 26 individual issues while in the preceding period the total was 20.

Pacific Gas Issue Leads Utilities.

The largest of the public utility issues brought out was $20,000,000 of Pacific Gas and Electric company bonds. Another large public utility flotation was $14,000,000 of Oklahoma Natural Gas corporation 5s which was priced to yield 5.30 per cent.

A domestic issue of importance was $20,000,000 of Standard Oil company of Indiana 4½ per cent bonds, which was promptly oversubscribed. The largest foreign issue was $10,750,000 of Paris-Orleans railroad company 5½ per cent bonds which were priced at 96 and interest to yield over 5.75 per cent. The issue was put out to retire the company's 7 per cent external sinking fund bonds.

Included in the list of oversubscribed bonds were: $7,500,000 City of Brisbane, Australia, 30 years 5 per cent bonds; $4,866,000 of International Paper and Power Company of New Foundland 40 year 5 per cent bonds and $7,000,000 Second International Securities corporation 5 per cent debentures. Japanese financing of the week was in the nature of $9,000,000 of Nippon Electric Power, Ltd., first mortgage 6½ per cent bonds priced at 94 to yield more than 7 per cent.

Cook County Gets Premium.

Cook county, Ill., received the highest price ever given for an issue of its kind in the selling of $3,000,000 of 4 per cent jail and criminal court building bonds which were offered by a local banking syndicate at prices to yield 3.50 to 3.80 per cent. The syndicate paid a premium of $21,129 for the issue.

A railroad issue of the week was $9,840,000 of Southern Railway 4 per cent equipment trust certificates. The McCord Radiator and Manufacturing company brought out an issue of $2,500,000 debentures bearing 6 per cent.

The recapitalization of the Purity Bakeries corporation was a feature of the week. The company sold $8,000,000 of new debentures through a syndicate which provided funds for the retirement of the outstanding 7 per cent preferred stock and subsidiary bonds. The class "A" stock is to be redeemed at $65 per share and each share of class "B" stock is being exchanged for two shares of new common.

Stock financing which was over subscribed included 100,000 shares of 7 per cent cumulative preferred stock and 100,000 shares of no par common stock of the Schulte-United Five Cents to $1 Stores, Inc., a new venture by interests identified with the United Cigar Stores and the Schulte Cigar Stores.

Big Australian Issue Coming.

New issues expected this week include an offering of between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 of Australian government bonds. The first financing of the state of New York in nearly two years will be completed next month when Morris S. Tremaine will sell $22,500,000 of bonds for state institution buildings and general improvements. Of the total $10,000,000 will be sold on a "split rate" basis, the first time that New York state has ever issued bonds in this fashion.

A premium of $41,000 was paid by a syndicate for an issue of $4,000,000 state of California veterans welfare 4 per cent bonds. The issue will probably be offered Tuesday.

TRADE, INDUSTRY EXPECT GRADUAL GAINS THIS YEAR

BY O. A. MATHER.

[Financial Editor.]

The first month of 1928 has given indications that this year will be one of gradual progress, with the improvement spread over a considerable period of time, according to the February survey of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. It is noted, however, that the first few months of this year may compare unfavorably with the corresponding months last year, because 1927 witnessed a mild recession, and the starting point for 1928 business is somewhat below that of the opening of last year.

"The main trend, however, is upward, a file of orders is being built up and prices are more satisfactory," the survey says. "Such industries as annually come into flower in January have blossomed forth and that affords a basis of encouragement about what will happen to the others when it is their time to burst into bloom.

Steel and Auto Plants Busy.

"The year thus far has been up to any reasonable expectations, although it has proved somewhat disappointing to those who exected an immediate boom as soon as the new calendar was hung up. Although the closing quarter of 1927 was a poor one in the steel industry, business has been very good since the turn of the year. Trade papers attribute the larger part of the new business to two sources, railroads and automobiles. Steel men look for this to be their greatest year.

"The national shows have set the automobile industry off to a flying start. Attendance at the displays was reported to have been the largest in history and buying was heavy beyond all precedent. As was to be expected, production was increased immediately after the turn of the year. December was one of the poorest months in recent automobile experience.

Big Building Year Indicated.

"Building is showing signs of another very large year. Last year closed with a moderate volume of contracts in the final month, but with a substantial increase in contemplated work, some of which already has come out. Current reports are that last month's record will be nearly if not fully up to January 1927, a month which in turn witnessed the awarding of more contracts than in the opening month of either of the two years preceding.

"A month ago we said that there would be a plentiful supply of credit at very modest rates for any business that might develop. Public officials and prominent flanciers joined us in that prediction. The attempt by the federal reserve system to force up interest rates as an administration of discipline to Wall street has not changed the fundamental credit situation."

Price Inquiry Welcomed by N. Y. Cotton Exchange

New York, Feb. 11.—(AP)—Investigation of charges of price manipulation in the New York Cotton Exchange as proposed recently in congress will be welcomed, the exchange board of governors announced today through an adopted resolution. The resolution stated that any such investigation made by regularly constituted authority would be aided.

CORN ADVANCES ON BIG BUYING BY PROFESSIONALS

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Heavy buying of corn by professional traders and commission houses carried prices up sharply to a new high on the present movement, with the deferred deliveries the highest since early in December while July sold at the best figures on the crop. The finish was at the top with net gains of 1⅛@1⅜c with March, 93c; May, 95⅞@96c, and July, 97⅛@97¼c. Wheat was ⅛@⅛c higher with March, $1.30⅝@1.30⅞; May, $1.30½, and July, $1.27⅞. Oats were up ¼@⅜c, and rye, ⅛@⅜c.

Grain prices were on the upgrade last week. While there was heavy profit taking at times the finish was with net gains of ⅜@1⅜c on wheat; 4@4⅜c on corn; ¼@⅜c on oats, and 2⅛@2½c on rye as compared with the close of the previous week. Lard was 2½c lower to 5c higher; ribs, 7½c lower, and bellies, 7½@27½c lower for the week.

No Pressure on Corn.

There was a slight dip in corn prices early on scattered selling, but the buying was of a good class and was persistent, and headed by some of the strongest commission houses and local operators in the trade. Many of the pit element were caught short and covered on the way up with stop loss orders uncovered when prices advanced into new ground, and sellers of daily and weekly offers were forced to protect themselves. Selling pressure was much smaller than of late, and profit taking readily absorbed.

Forecast indicated generally mild weather for the greater part of the week, which is expected to hold down the movement of cash corn to terminal markets. Receipts have fallen off sharply, and the spot basis here was steady, while Kansas City was unchanged to ½c higher. Little was heard regarding export demand, while the eastern call was fair. Buenos Aires closed unchanged to ⅛c higher, and Rosario was unchanged.

Light Trade in Wheat.

Strength in corn had considerable on the wheat market, although there was some buying on reports that outside mills were after supplies of cash grain here, and the close was about the top. Milling sales were finally placed at 32,000 bu. Commission houses were fair buyers at times, but a good part of the business was of a local character. Export demand at the seaboard continues relatively inactive with sales of 400,000 bu in all positions.

Short covering on the strength in corn caused oats to rally sharply and close about the top. There was some buying of new July against sales of old at 1¼c difference. Commission houses were good buyers of rye, while a good part of the selling was the result of spreading.

CASH · GRAIN NEWS

Export sales of around 400,000 bu wheat were reported in all positions at the seaboard, largely Manitobas. No business was reported in other grains.

Chicago handlers sold 32,000 bu wheat, 50,000 bu corn and 40,000 bu of oats to the domestic trade with 50,000 bu oats to go to store. Purchases of corn to arrive were 20,000 bu, largely from the southwest.

POWARD'S GRAIN SERVICE
Dept. CT
327 S. La Salle St., Chicago, Ill.

$20,000
SALES EXECUTIVE

One of America's foremost newspapers expressed the above opinion in an editorial on the service being rendered by the advertiser to the professional and business men of the United States. More than 30,000 Executives subscribe to that opinion. Leading Government officials unqualifiedly endorse us.

We need five men who can and will qualify for State Managerships under conditions which should insure them a minimum annual earning in excess of $20,000.

The ordinary man will not qualify. This is not a "Racket" or a Real Estate Boom. Successful applicant becomes the direct representative of the pre-eminent leaders of the Nation.

Requisite qualifications are that you show a successful record; that you possess inherent personality; that you be cultured and refined in appearance and conduct; that your references be unquestionable.

Further, you must be willing to devote two weeks with us—four days in training and eight days in field work in Chicago. We will then assign you to the management of a city to be selected by you. After thirty days in that city, if your production reaches the volume upon which we mutually agree before you leave Chicago, we will then give you the exclusive management of the State in which that city is located.

Indiana, Ohio, Michigan managerships not available under this offer.

The compensation is solely on a commission basis, with all working material and advertisements for salesmen provided by us.

Many of our salesmen, not executives, are earning more than $200 weekly.

We positively will not communicate with your references until after an interview has been held—but we positively will recognize no response that does not detail past experience and set forth in confidence at least three references.

This is an exceptional opportunity for which only the exceptional sales executive will qualify.

Interviews will be held in Chicago by an executive of the company.

Address in confidence: Wm. H. Rankin Company, 1819 Tribune Tower, Chicago, Ill.

PROVISION TRADE LIGHT

Selling of lard by a commission house with eastern connections found support rather slow and prices declined, but there was some buying later on the strength in corn, and a rally to above the finish of the previous day followed. Final trades were unchanged to 2½c lower with bellies 12½@15c lower. Weakness in hogs and prospects for large receipts tends to restrict buying at times. Hogs are running heavier, and a further gain is anticipated. Cash demand remains relatively slow. Prices follow:

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

All domestic grain exchanges will be closed Monday, Lincoln's birthday. Winnipeg, Liverpool and Buenos Ayres will be open as usual.

It is the gossip of the trade that a number of strong professionals who have been doing little in the grain markets of late have taken the bull side of corn.

Estimated receipts of corn at Chicago Tuesday are around 700 cars. Three railroads have ordered inspection crews to work today, and eight roads have ordered them to work Monday.

The long distance telephone is now being used by Europe in sending orders to be executed in grain futures. A Berlin trader called a New York commission house on the phone Saturday and gave an order to sell 25,000 bu rye. The order was relayed to Bartlett Frazier company here, filled, and the sale price reported back to the man in Berlin before he could disconnect his phone connection with the New York house.

Primary receipts of corn from Nov. 1 to date aggregate 114,410,000 bu, compared with 78,859,000 bu the previous season, the bulk of the increase being at Kansas City, Omaha and St. Louis. Wheat receipts for the season to date are 393,000,000 bu, or 79,000,000 bu in excess of the preceding year.

Activity in corn is detracting considerably from interest in wheat. Sentiment in the latter grain is mixed, but trade is so light that the market quickly becomes oversold or overbought, and a majority of operators feel that for the time being, at least, the trend of values will be influenced to a large extent by the action of corn.

COFFEE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—While trade in coffee futures was rather slow the market showed a firmer undertone and the close showed net gains of 2 to 5 points for the day, with May leading. Prices follow:

STRONG TONE IN COTTON

Effect of lower Liverpool cables on cotton than expected was more than offset by rather aggressive trade and speculative buying, and also short covering on the absence of rains in west Texas, and reported increase in weekly Fall River sales. Latter were estimated at 80,000 to 90,000 pieces for the week, the largest in several months. Rainfall in Texas in December was 1.76 inches below normal and January 1.16 inches below. Report of the Textile association was disappointing, as production showed a decline of about 75,000,000 yards, and sales were about 35 per cent below production. Government cotton consumption report for January will be issued next Tuesday. Closing trades here were at net gains of 13@20 points. New Orleans closed 6@17 points higher and New York up 6@14 points. Spots in New Orleans were 10 points higher at 18.10c and New York 5 points higher at 18.50c. Prices follow:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 11.—[Special.]—Today's price movements on the stock exchange were highly irregular. Numerically there were more declines than advances, and except for the railroad shares, the more important stocks joined in the moderate decline. There were few striking changes in either direction.

The market gave the appearance of being largely a professional affair. Business was of comparatively small proportions for a Saturday as many of the traders began their Lincoln holiday early. The total turnover of 1,270,500 shares fell short of that of last Saturday by about 200,000 shares.

Pools Bid Up Specialties.

There were evidences of pool activity in a number of stocks but little headway was made. Paramount Famous Lasky had a brisk run-up after a fractional decline at the opening and closed with a net gain of 2⅝ points. Pittsburgh Coal, American Zinc, Bon Ami, Cudahy, Gold Dust and Canadian Pacific also had substantial advances.

Today's recovery in prices of railway shares was as evidently a result of "repurchasing on bad news." The full compilation of December railway earnings, published this morning, was in line with expectations. Rail shares to show improvement included Texas and Pacific with a net gain of 3½ points, Baltimore and Ohio, up ⅞; New York Central, up a point; while St. Louis Southwestern, Union Pacific and Delaware and Hudson were carried forward from a point to more than two points.

Steel and Motors Weak.

Persistent pressure against United States Steel was not to the liking of the more conservative element. Steel closed at 145¼, off fractionally. General Motors closing at 137¾ was off fractionally, as were Hudson Motors, Chrysler, Studebaker and Hupp Motors. Yellow Truck issues were active in early trading. The common declined to below 30 and the preferred advanced above 93.

Packing stocks continued to attract attention at rising prices. All issues of Armour closed with net gains of from one to almost 2 points. Tobacco Products "A" had a net gain of 1¾ points. Strength in this issue is attributed to the possibility that holders may receive an offer either in cash or in other securities.

Bank Report Shows Deficit.

Loans, discounts, investments, etc., of the New York clearing house banks decreased $60,873,000 this week, according to the weekly statement of the association, issued today. The deficit in reserve of $20,283,840 shown a week ago was reduced $2,183,330 to $18,100,510. Net demand deposits decreased $52,156,000, while time deposits increased $15,468,000.

Loans, discounts, investments, etc., totaled $6,159,458,000; net demand deposits, $4,795,029,000; time deposits, $807,557,000; aggregate reserve was $631,939,000.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE

Money in Chicago held at 4½@4¾ per cent on collateral; commercial paper, 4@4¼ per cent, 4¾@5 per cent over the counter. Bankers' acceptances 3½@3¾ per cent. Chicago clearings yesterday were $114,500,000, compared with $112,700,000 a week ago. New York clearings yesterday totaled $1,222,000,000.

NEW YORK MONEY.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—Prime commercial paper, 3¾; bar silver, domestic, 57c; Mexican dollars, 43⅝c. Call money, easier; call loans, 4¼ per cent; closing bid, 4¼; time loans, steady; mixed collateral, 60 to 90 days, 4¼@4⅜; 4 to 6 months, 4½ per cent.

"PUT IN A WEIL-McLAIN BOILER"

They FIGHT FUEL WASTE

That's Why Owners Recommend Them

Weil-McLain Self-Feed Boilers

. . . the highest standard of clean, hard coal heating

The Weil-McLain Self-Feed is a new and more convenient boiler . . . a boiler you can leave for long periods without thought of shoveling coal . . . a boiler that assures home heating luxury . . . yet a surprisingly priced boiler of cleanly habits and amazing fuel savings.

The Weil-McLain Self-Feed Boiler costs comparatively little more than regular type boilers, because its simplified design effects savings in manufacture and installation.

It saves fuel because of corrugated heating surfaces and long back-and-forth fire travel and because it burns inexpensive small sizes of clean hard coal, there is a further year-after-year saving in fuel cost. A handy ashpit spray adds to its cleanliness.

Write for our Self-Feed Boiler Catalog, giving complete details.

Does the cost of home heating worry you? Fuel waste causes much of it. Waste up the chimney and down into the ashpit. Weil-McLain Boilers end both of them. They absorb more heat from the fire and fill your home with cozy warmth.

* * *

Weil-McLain Scientific Combustion Boilers are designed with one single thought in mind—to give more heat and save fuel. They are built to fight fuel waste, because the principal cost of home heating is the year-after-year cost of the fuel consumed.

They are popularly priced, of course, due to modern manufacturing methods. But above all, they are efficient—assuring warm rooms, health protection, and a generous saving in your fuel bills.

Scientific combustion ends ashpit waste

Probably never before has there been a boiler in which the factors of costly fuel waste are so completely conquered. Among the Weil-McLain advantages, which insure warm rooms and a saving in fuel, is scientific combustion.

Due to scientific design, the fuel in the Weil-McLain Boiler is more thoroughly burned. The fire burns bright and clean. It lasts a long time and requires only infrequent attention.

Costly waste down into the ashpit is ended.

Fuel-saving corrugations and back-and-forth fire travel prevent waste up the chimney

Fuel-saving corrugations absorb more heat from the fire

The Weil-McLain Boiler has 40 per cent more heat-absorbing surface directly above the fire, due to a corrugated crown sheet section.

All other vital heating surfaces, too, have fuel-saving corrugations. You can see for yourself that corrugations like this ∿∿∿ permit crowding more heat-absorbing surface into the same space. Weil-McLain long back-and-forth fire travel eliminates all short cuts to the chimney, and is a final safeguard against waste.

Back-and-forth fire travel ends waste of heat up the chimney

Not only do these two Weil-McLain features end waste of valuable heat units up the chimney, but they give further assurance of warm rooms and fuel economy.

Unexcelled for Oil Burning

Weil-McLain Boilers are unexcelled for oil burning because their extra heating surfaces and longer fire travel absorb more of the quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

THE GREAT AMERICAN AND HIS FLAG—Here is an artistic conception of the occasion when Lincoln in such glowing words dedicated the national cemetery at Gettysburg. The artist, Stephen F. Jerome, has painted Gen. George G. Meade at the flagstaff, and in the foreground is a group of other generals who fought in that decisive conflict of the Civil war.

LINCOLN AND THE CONTRABANDS—Following his emancipation proclamation, the President was besieged by Negroes seeking to express their gratitude. J. L. G. Ferris, painter of many romantic scenes in American history, here gives us his conception of a day on the White House grounds with former slaves, some of whom had traveled far, seeking to meet the man whose act had meant their freedom.

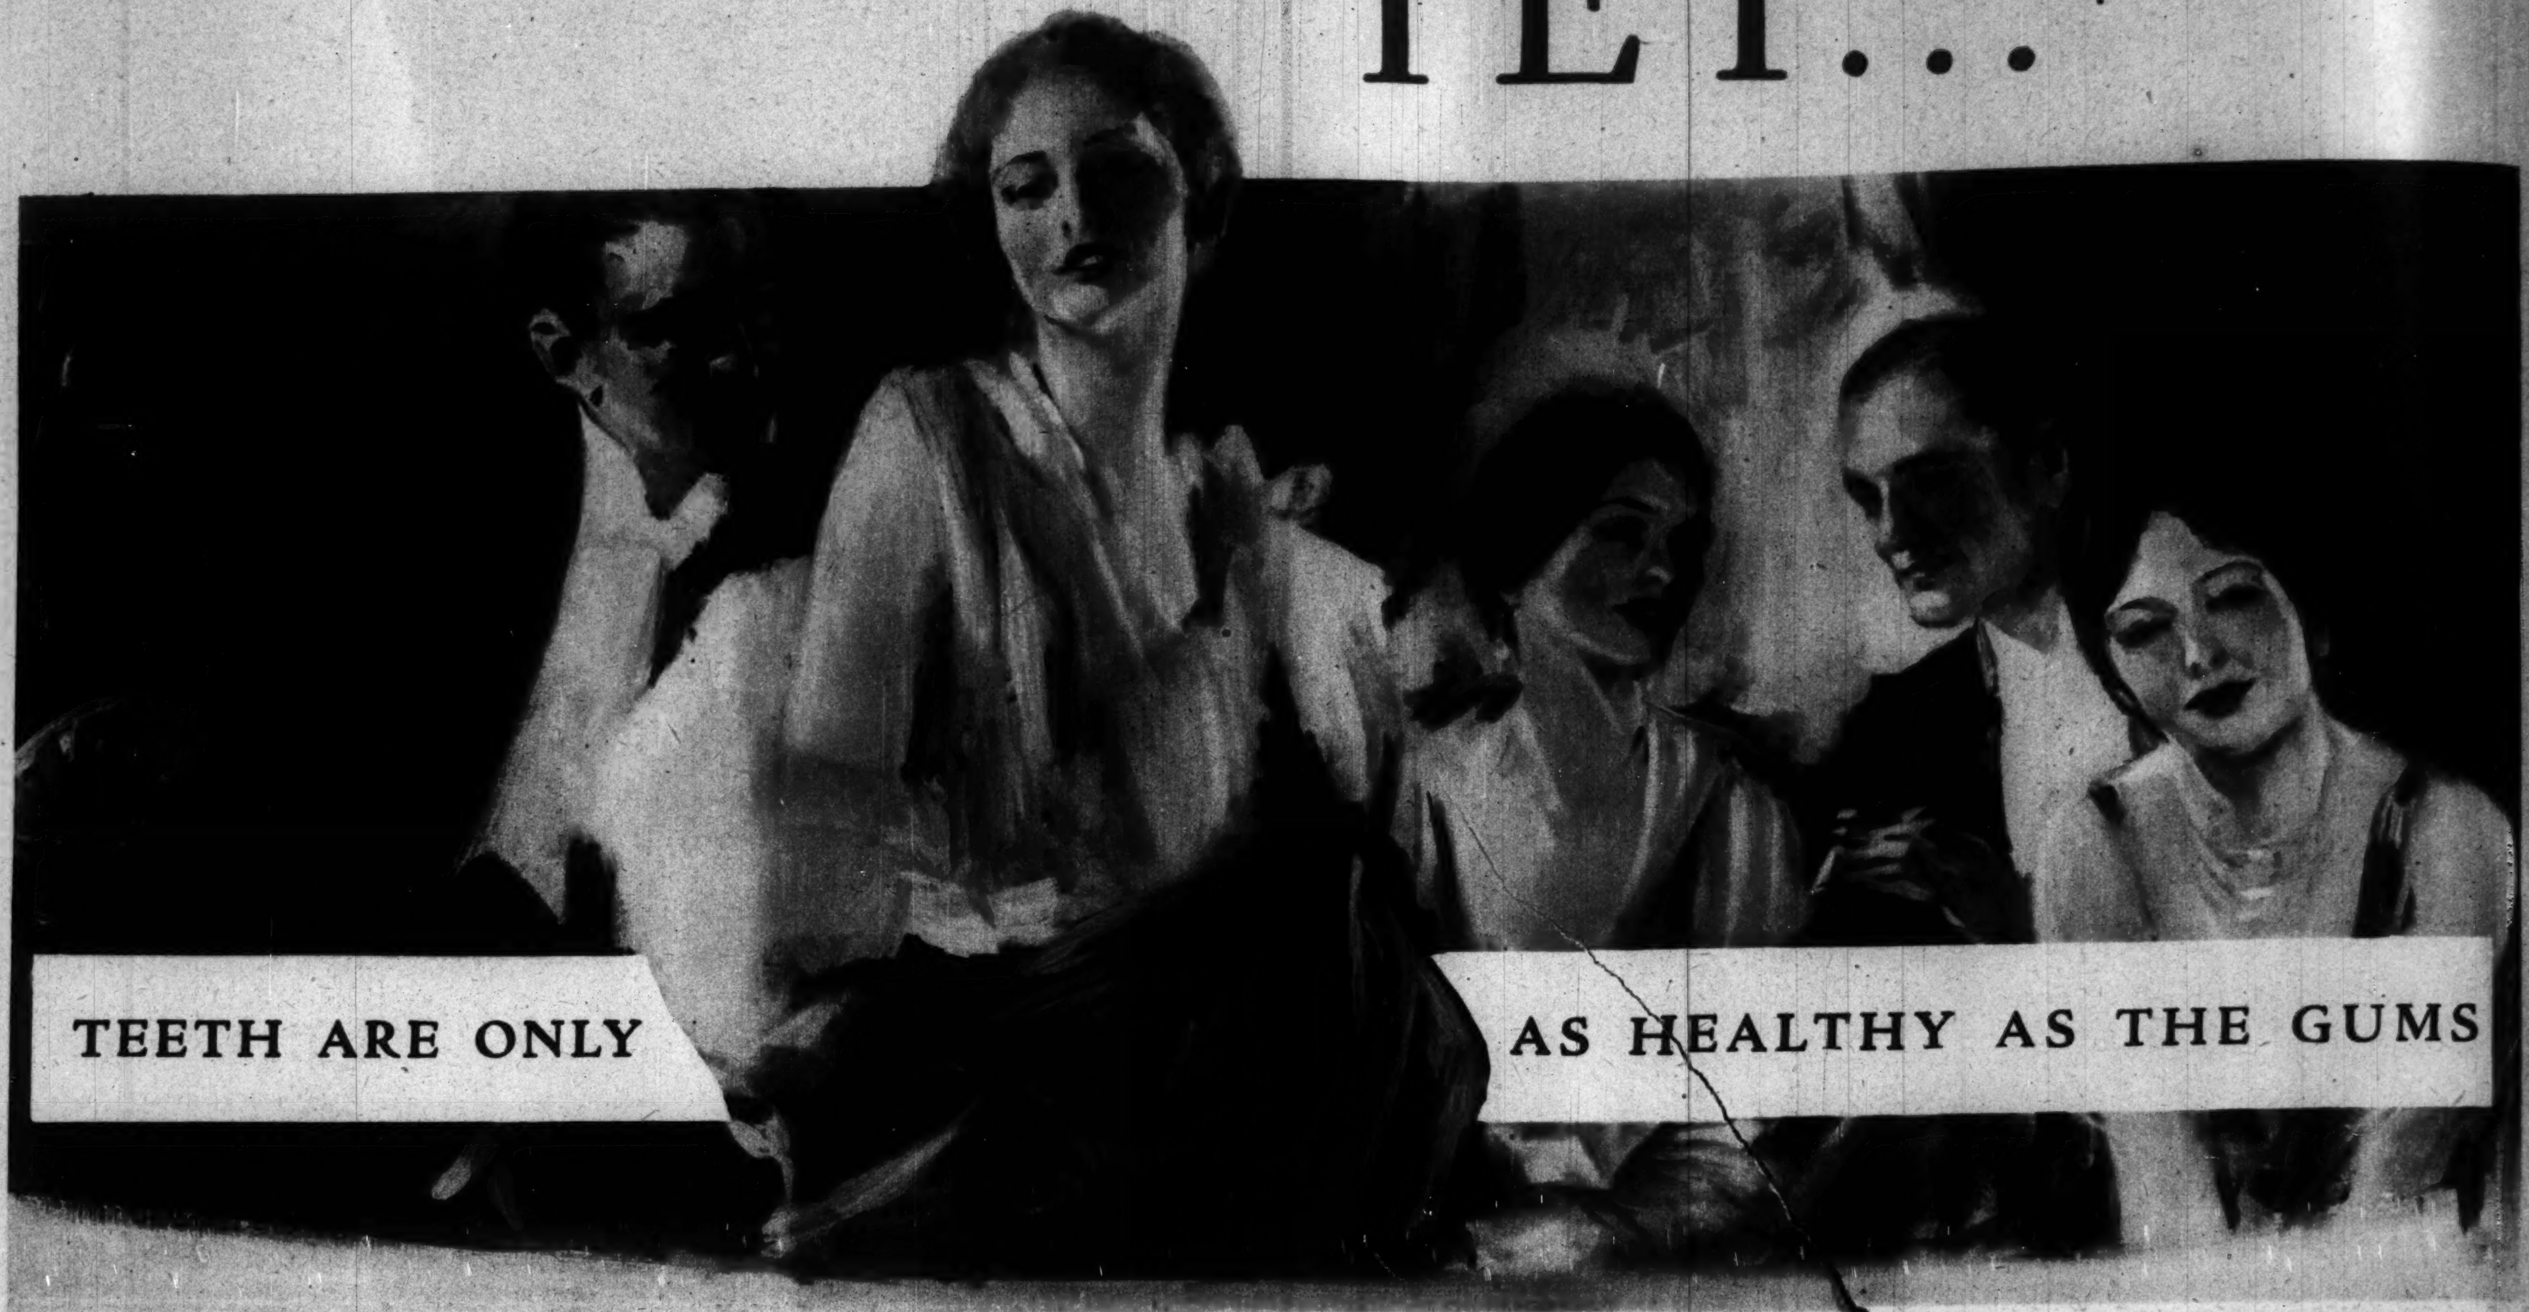
Seemingly safe with teeth so white YET...



TEETH ARE ONLY
AS HEALTHY AS THE GUMS

Many, many people while in the heyday of life are relegated to the background — unwilling spectators who have surrendered health to the disease of neglect (Pyorrhea). This grim enemy attacks the unwary.

4 Out of 5 Pay This Price

Although teeth may be clean and glistening white, the gums break down. When this occurs, Pyorrhea poison moves through the system, often causing stomach disorders and such serious troubles as anemia, neuritis, and facial disfigurement. And according to the figures of famous dental clinics, the toll of this disease of neglect is 4 persons out of 5 after forty, and thousands younger. These odds are unfair. Because it is so easy to keep teeth white and at the same time protect health against Pyorrhea.

More Than A Toothpaste

Just follow this simple regime: See your dentist once every six months. Have him examine teeth and gums thoroughly. And start using Forhan's for the Gums today.

Without the use of harsh abrasives, this dentifrice keeps teeth clean and pearly white. It protects them against acids which cause decay.

And moreover, if used regularly and in time, it helps to keep gums firm and healthy. As you know, Pyorrhea seldom attacks healthy gums.

The formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S., this dentifrice is compounded with Forhan's Pyorrhea Astringent, the preparation used by dentists in the treatment of Pyorrhetic conditions. It helps to protect precious health. When used as a massage for exercising gums daily it keeps them sound and healthy.

It is folly to wait for flashing signals, for gums to bleed and recede from teeth, for teeth to loosen in their sockets. Prevention is the sensible course.

Morning and night, every day, brush teeth and gums with Forhan's for the Gums. Teach your children this good habit. They'll like the pleasant taste of Forhan's. And it is the means of safeguarding health, beauty, and youth. At all druggists — in tubes, 35c and 60c. Forhan Company, New York.

If gums bleed easily, if they are tender, apply Forhan's. With the index finger vigorously rub with a circular motion the upper gums, both inside and out, until they feel invigorated. Then massage lower gums. Do this regularly and gums will soon become firm and sound.

With your thumb and forefinger massage the gums both inside and out and the roof of the mouth as well. Massage until you feel the pleasant tingle of increased blood circulation.

Your gums should always look like this — even, sound and healthy. Keep them so by exercising them. Twice daily, massage them with Forhan's for the Gums — the dentifrice that safeguards the health of the gums and cleanses teeth.

We Were Right. More and more people are realizing the importance of oral hygiene. Every morning and every night, they use Forhan's Antiseptic Refreshant. It protects mouth, nose and throat from infection. It keeps breath sweet and fresh. It is safe, effective and pleasant. Try it.

Springfield, June 25 1858

J. Medill, Esq.

My dear Sir

Your note of the 23rd did not reach me till last evening. The Times article I saw yesterday morning. I will give you a brief history of facts, upon which you may rely with entire confidence, and from which you can frame such articles or paragraphs as you see fit.

I was in Congress but a single term. I was a candidate when the Mexican war broke out—and I then took the ground, which I never varied from, that the Administration had done wrong in getting us into the war, but that the Officers and soldiers who went to the field must be supplied and sustained at all events. I was elected the first Monday of August 1846, but, in regular course, only took my seat December 6. 1847. In the interval all the battles had been fought, and the war was substantially ended, though our army was still in Mexico, and the treaty of peace was not finally concluded till May 30. 1848. Col. E. D. Baker had been elected to congress from the same district, for the regular term next preceding mine; but having gone to Mexico himself, and having resigned his seat in Congress, a man by the name of John Henry, was elected to fill Baker's vacancy, and so came into congress before I did. On the 23rd day of February 1847 (the very day I believe, Col. John Hardin was killed at Buena Vista, and certainly more than nine months before I took a seat in congress) a bill corresponding with great accuracy to that mentioned by the Times, passed the House of Representatives, and John Henry voted against it, as may be seen in the Journal of that session at pages 406-7. ~~This I suppo~~ The bill became a law; and is found in the U. S. Statutes at Large. Vol. 9. page 149.

This I suppose is the real origin of the Times' attack upon me. In its blind rage to assail me, it has seized on a vague recollection of Henry's vote, and appropriated it to me. I scarcely think any one is quite vile enough to make such a charge in such ~~term~~ terms, without some slight belief in the truth of it.

Henry was my personal and political friend, and, as I thought, a very good man; and when I first learned of that vote, I well remember how astonished and mortified I was. This very bill, voted against by Henry, passed into a law, and made the appropriation for the year ending June 30. 1848—extending a full month beyond the actual and formal ending of the war. When I came into congress, money was needed to meet the appropriations made, and to be made; and accordingly on the 17th day of Feb. 1848. a bill to borrow 18.500000 passed the House of Representatives, for which I voted, as will appear by the Journal of that session page 426. 427. The act itself, reduced to 16.000000 (I suppose in the Senate) is found in U. S. Statutes at Large Vol. 9. 217.

Again, on the 8th of March 1848, a bill passed the House of Representatives, for which I voted, as may be seen by the Journal 520-521. It passed into a law, and is found in U. S. Statutes at Large Page 215 and forward. The last section of the act at page 217. contains an appropriation of 800000 for clothing the volunteers.

It is impossible to refer to all the votes I gave but the above I think are sufficient as specimens; and you may safely deny that I ever gave any vote for withholding any supplies whatever, from officers or soldiers of the Mexican war. I have examined the Journals a good deal; and besides I can not be mistaken; for I had my eye always upon it. I must close to get this into the mail.

Yours very truly

A. Lincoln

FROM ABRAHAM LINCOLN TO JOSEPH MEDILL—In this letter from the Emancipator came the reply requested by the publisher of The Tribune to the assault of another newspaper upon Lincoln's record in congress. The Tribune had already launched the widespread crusade which was to make the Railsplitter president. The next year Lincoln wrote concerning it: "I owe it [meaning The Tribune] a debt of gratitude, which I fear I shall never be able to pay." Lincoln as a Whig was opposed to the war in Mexico, and it is fairly apparent that when he was in congress his opposition to the war not only cost him his seat, but also lost his district for the Whigs in '48. Lincoln criticised the President savagely, but he voted supplies, supporting the army although attacking the administration, and evidently the newspaper referred to in this letter accused him of the unpatriotic act of having voted against an army supply bill. His letter proves it was his predecessor in the House who voted against the bill mentioned.

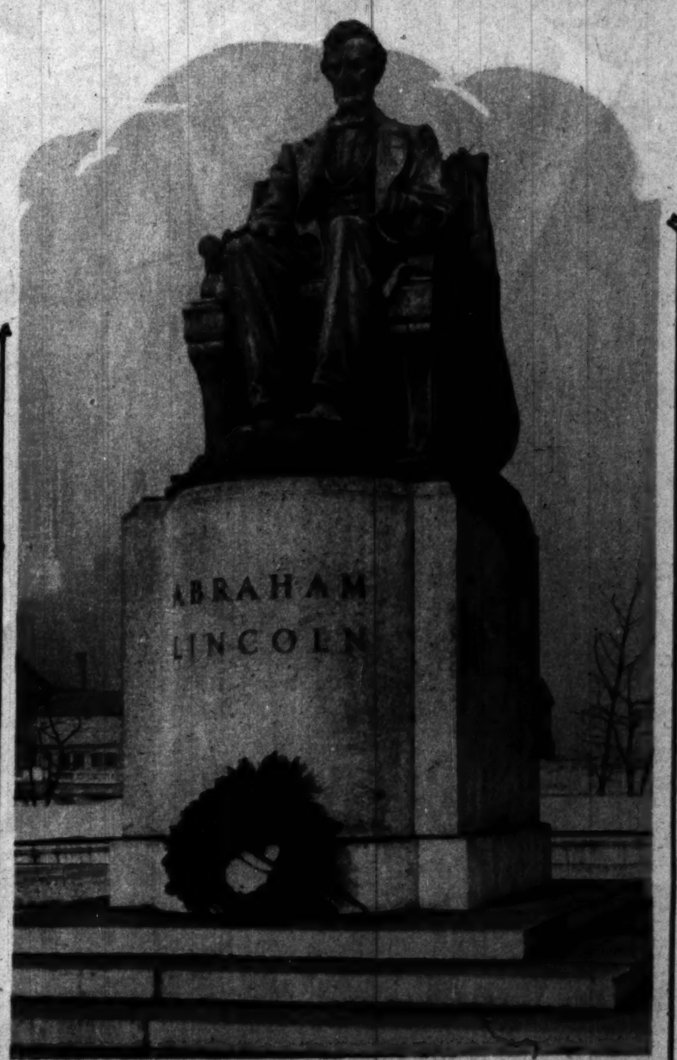
IN LINCOLN PARK lights were installed some years ago for the statues of Abraham Lincoln and of Gen. Grant. St. Gaudens' most effective statue of Lincoln is considered to be this one, at the south entrance of the park. It is simple and dignified, and amazingly effective. With the lights blazing on it, the lights by which this photograph was made, it is one of Chicago's chief beauties.



IN GRANT PARK has been placed the "Seated Lincoln," also the work of St. Gaudens. It is a beautiful monument to the martyr president, though it is not considered as great a piece of work as the one in Lincoln park.

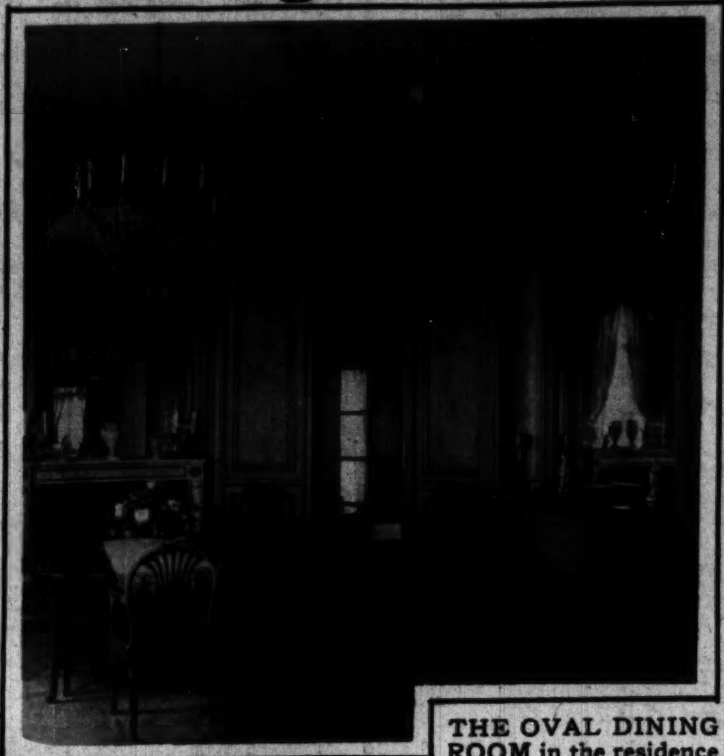
IN THE BURTON MUDGE APARTMENT, 3100 Sheridan road, the dining room opens off one end of the living room, giving an aspect of great length when the French doors are open. The modern theory of furnishing the dining room as simply as possible is here admirably illustrated.



THE OVAL DINING ROOM in the residence of Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson at 1406 Astor street is one of the choicest examples in the country of this neoclassic fashion. The walls are marbleized in the soft greens and yellows used in the paintings over the door.

THE LIVING ROOM of the Burton Mudge apartment (at the left) is spacious and light in tone. The furniture coverings and draperies are in pleasing shades of green and gold. The two built-in bookcases, one at each side of the classically simple fireplace, over which is hung an oval floral painting, constitute a satisfying wall group.

THE LIVING ROOM of the Joseph T. Ryerson residence has been called "a very fine example of a dignified French room, both in its design and in its furniture." The floor is parquetry.

You say, "I've been drinking ginger ale all my life." And you have. Last week you tried this brand. Last month you tried some other. A year ago it was still another. And so it goes.

You say you've been drinking ginger ale all your life. But have you? As a matter of fact, you'll never know what real ginger ale is . . . how good ginger ale can be . . . until you try "Canada Dry."

Made from real Jamaica ginger

For this ginger ale is a beverage in the truest meaning of the word. It has body to it. It has distinction. Once you taste this fine old ginger ale, you could tell it anywhere. Just as the connoisseur can readily distinguish the various kind of ports or burgundies or champagnes from one another . . . just as some can even tell the vintage of a wine to within a year . . . so can you always distinguish the true flavor of "Canada Dry."

It is only the finest things—the best of their kind—that are ever imitated.

Years of painstaking effort, experiment after experiment, disappointment after disappointment, discouragement, and then, at last—a real product—the premier of its kind—is created.

Imitators can duplicate the emerald and gold package and other details; they can copy methods. But they never can and never will duplicate the inherent quality of "Canada Dry." "The Champagne of Ginger Ales." It is inimitable.

The real product always wins

The mere fact that attempts are being made to imitate "Canada Dry," is proof of its superiority. We have faith in the American public, who can always be depended upon to recognize the real from the sham.

"I AM keenly interested in sports, and wanted to take part in all the athletic and social events of my school—but for a time I was so embarrassed by eruptions on my face that I hated to go out at all. It so happened that my mother had derived splendid results from eating Fleischmann's Yeast. I began eating it myself—two cakes a day dissolved in milk. My face cleared up entirely and my pleasure in school activities revived. I ate Yeast for a year—in fact, I still eat it off and on, just to keep in condition."

"FOOD did not appeal to me in any form. In fact, my stomach was in such shape that anything I ate disagreed with me.

"And I had lost all my old vitality.

"Three cakes a day of Fleischmann's Yeast and today I am again eating my meals with real enjoyment and relish. My wife and three children have also become ardent users of Fleischmann's Yeast and are enjoying the same beneficial results that I am."

Arthur C. Kyhn

EVERY bit as fresh as any garden vegetable, Fleischmann's Yeast is not a medicine, but a pure corrective food.

Fleischmann's Yeast restores your health and energy by keeping your intestinal tract clean, by strengthening the sluggish, weak intestinal muscles.

Gradually these muscles begin to do their work again. Elimination becomes more regular, more complete. Food wastes, now promptly thrown off, no longer poison your system. Your digestion improves. Your skin clears and freshens. Once again you feel your old vigorous, happy self!

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep in any cool, dry place. Best results are obtained when you eat Fleischmann's Yeast regularly, three times every day.

And write today for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast in the diet. Address Health Research Dept. N-805, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington St., New York City.

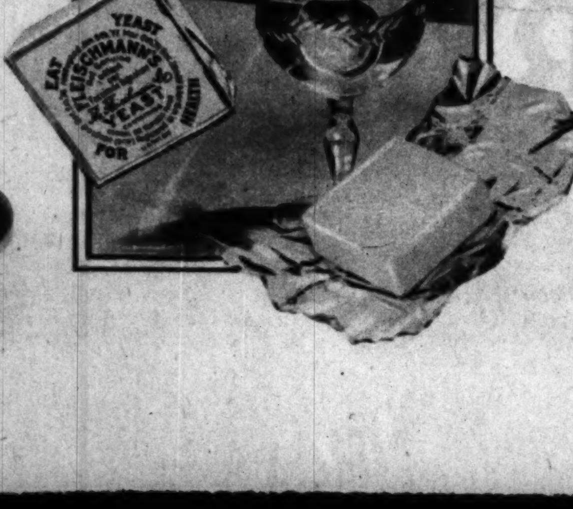
"IT WAS about a year ago that I first complained to my husband of feeling ill. My appetite had vanished. My sleep no longer rested me. I felt sluggish, tired—only half alive. And I was troubled with constipation. My housework grew irksome and even my social activities turned from a pleasure to a grievous burden . . . I was doubtful when my husband suggested Fleischmann's Yeast. After eating it for a time, however, I became aware of feeling better than I had in many months. Well! I continued to improve right along. My constipation left me, the color returned to my cheeks. I began to feel active and strong—and able to do my work without any special effort on my part. Of course Fleischmann's Yeast plays a prominent part in our family's diet now."

Mrs. F. A. Lindenmyr



Health for you—this new easy way

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal or between meals. Eat it plain, or dissolved in water (hot or cold) or any other way you like. For stubborn constipation physicians say to drink one cake in a glass of hot water—not scalding—before meals and before going to bed. Train yourself to form a regular daily habit. Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary.

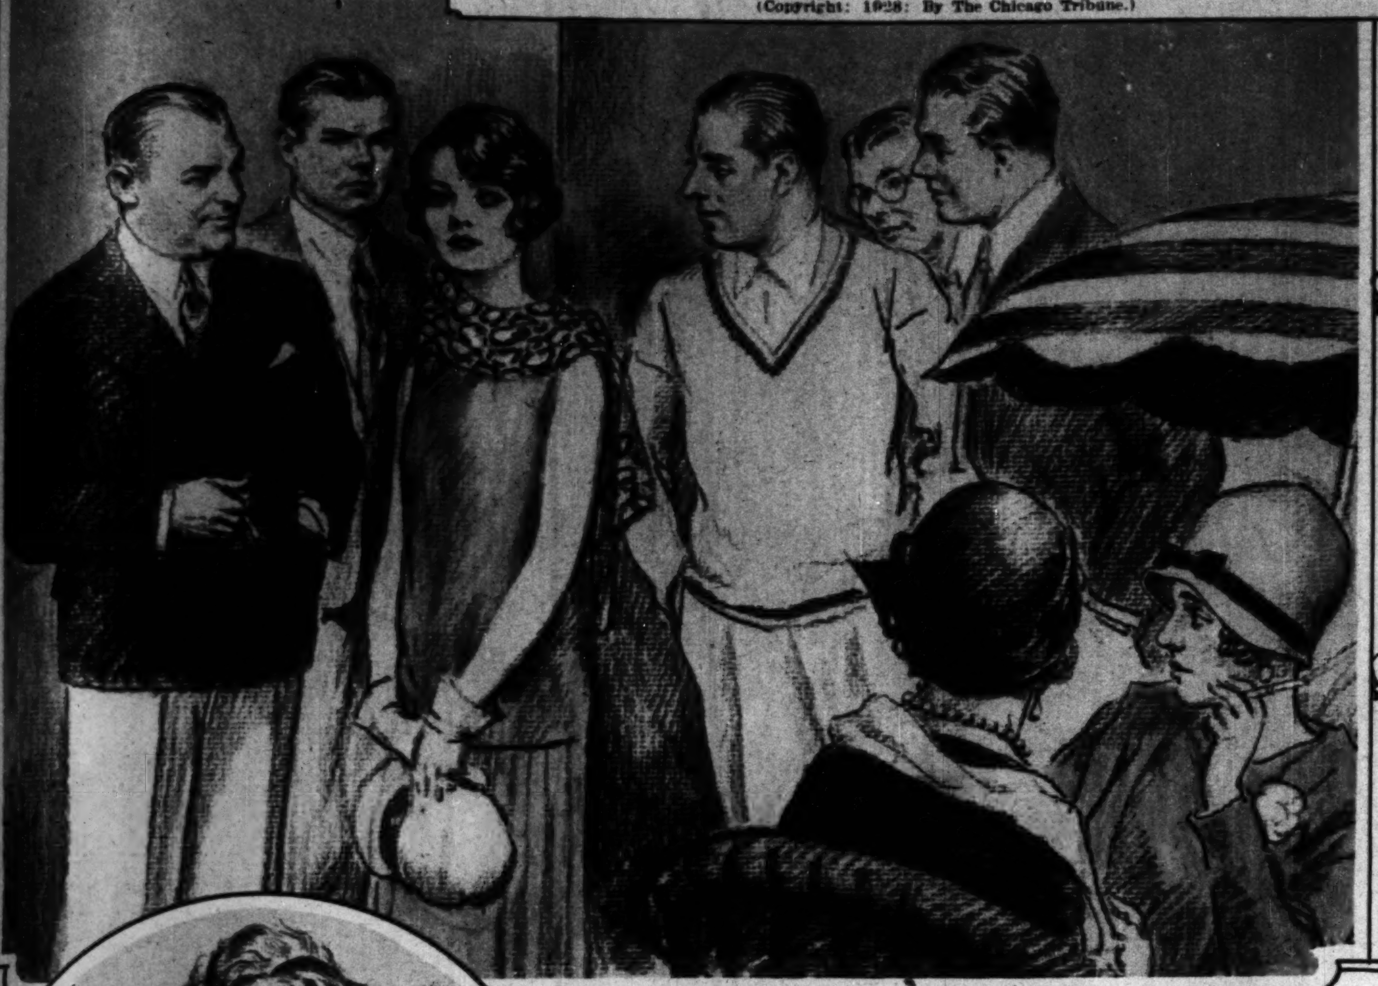
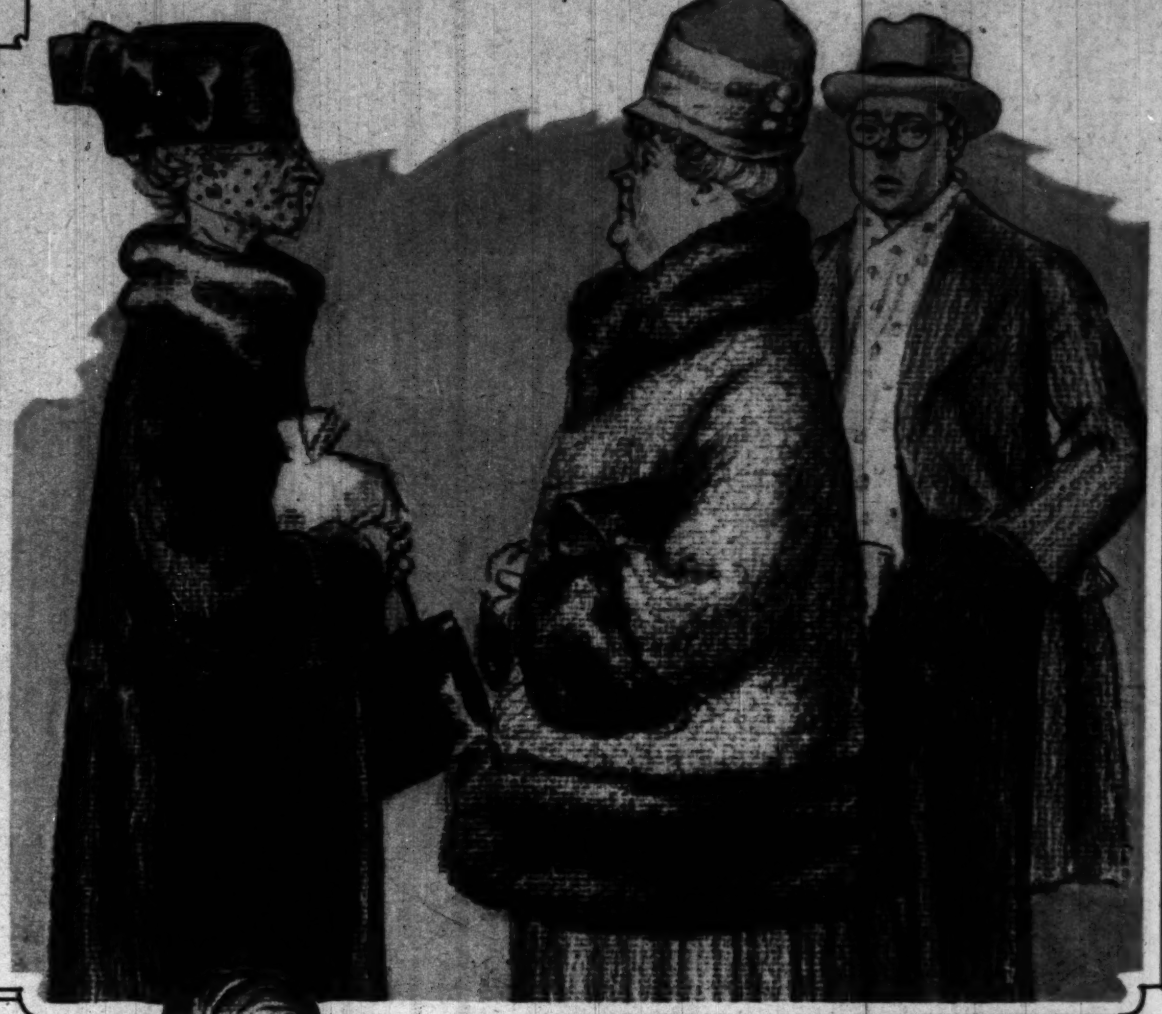
The Companionate Marriage

By W. E. Hill

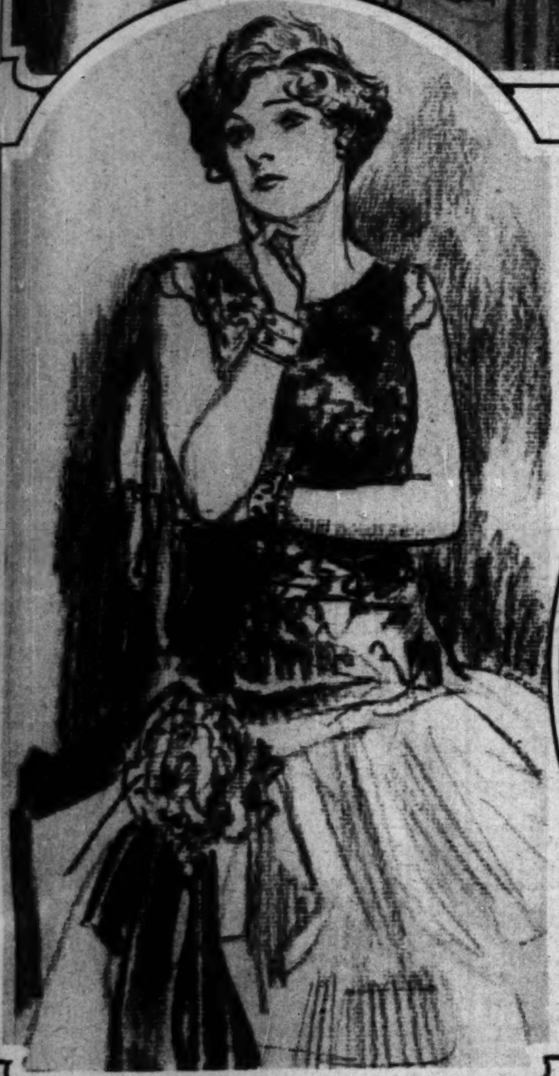
(Copyright: 1928: By The Chicago Tribune.)



"Yes, her father and I were terribly upset about her getting interested in this companionate marriage idea. But really, my dear, it's done wonders for her. Seems to go much better than her classical dancing or her piano pieces."

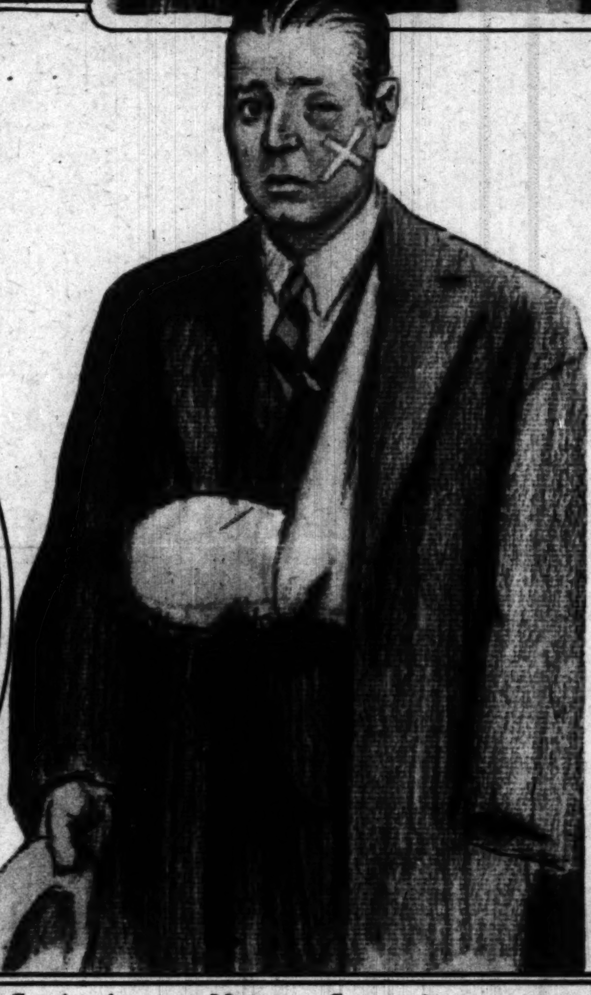


"Must be nice to have your son back from the city, Mrs. Jones!" "It is, indeed, Mrs. Snell. I'm worried sick, every moment he's away from home, for fear some awful Follies girl will lure him into one of those companionable marriages, and I won't be there to get him out of it!"

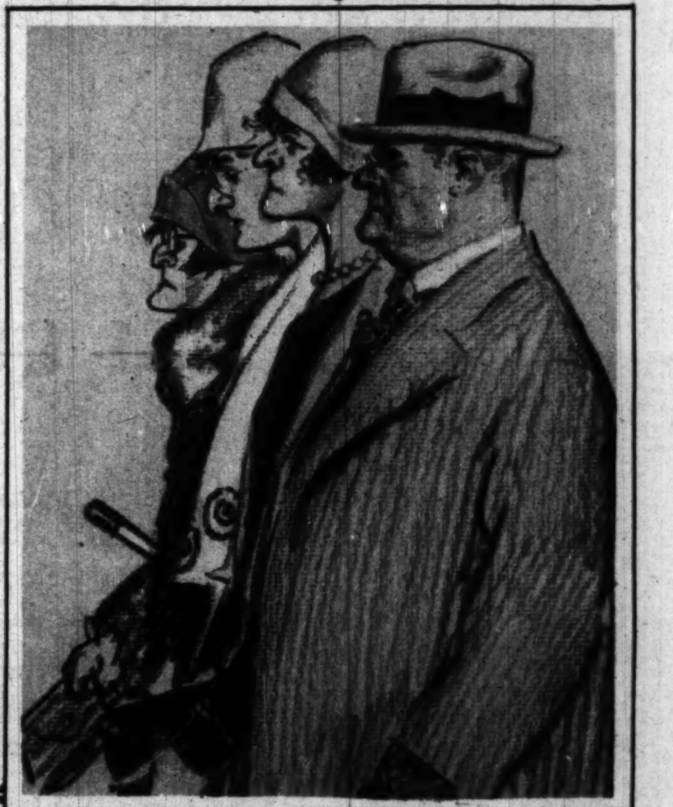


Meet Mrs. Maude Crossfire, the popular divorcee, just back from her third—or is it her fourth?—Paris divorce. Mrs. Crossfire is not particularly in favor of companionate marriage. "Why," argues Maude, "should any bright girl be done out of a trip to Paris?"

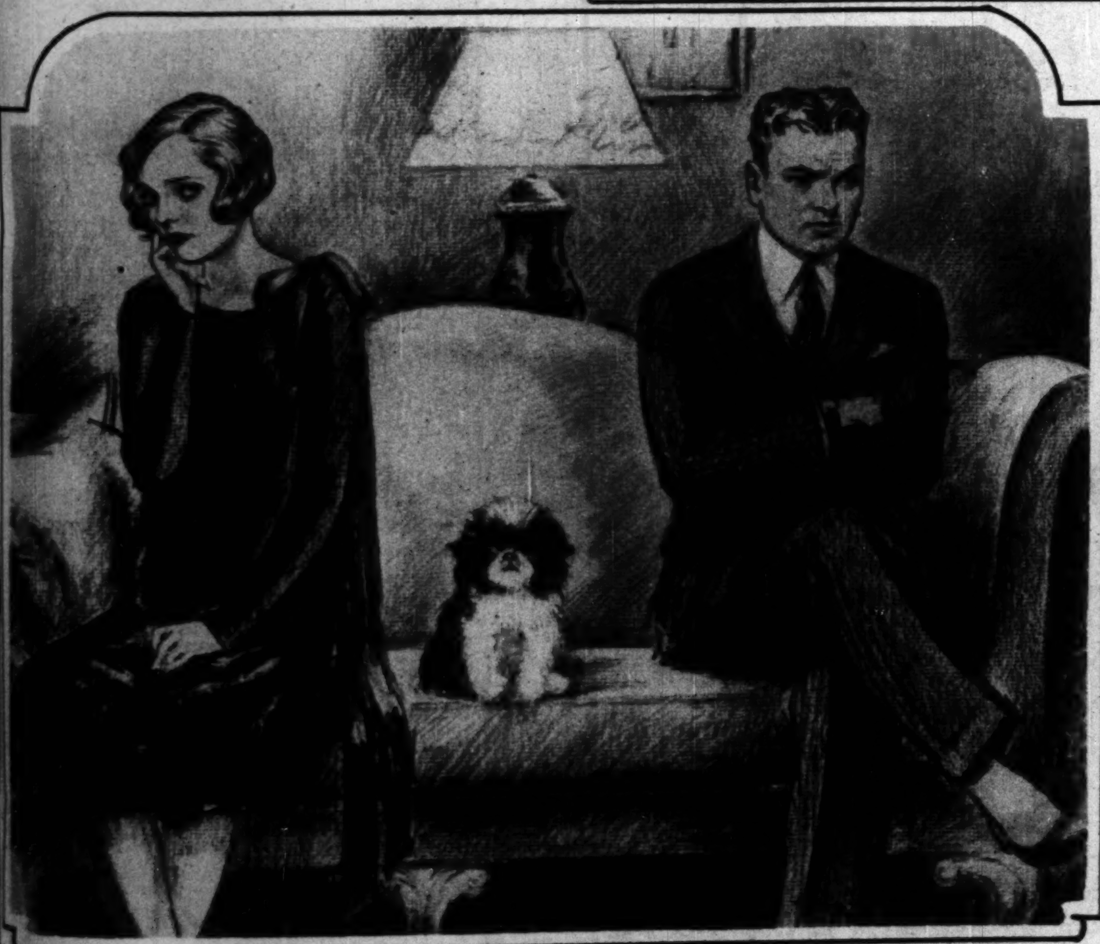
"Guess who this is—go on, guess!" The people who advocate companionate stuff have seldom stopped to think about the horrible disillusionment of the companionate bride the first time companion husband turns cute. A girl seldom gets this angle during the engaged period, because she is too busy being cute herself. Many a girl bride has been soured on men because her husband got cute and coy over a telephone.



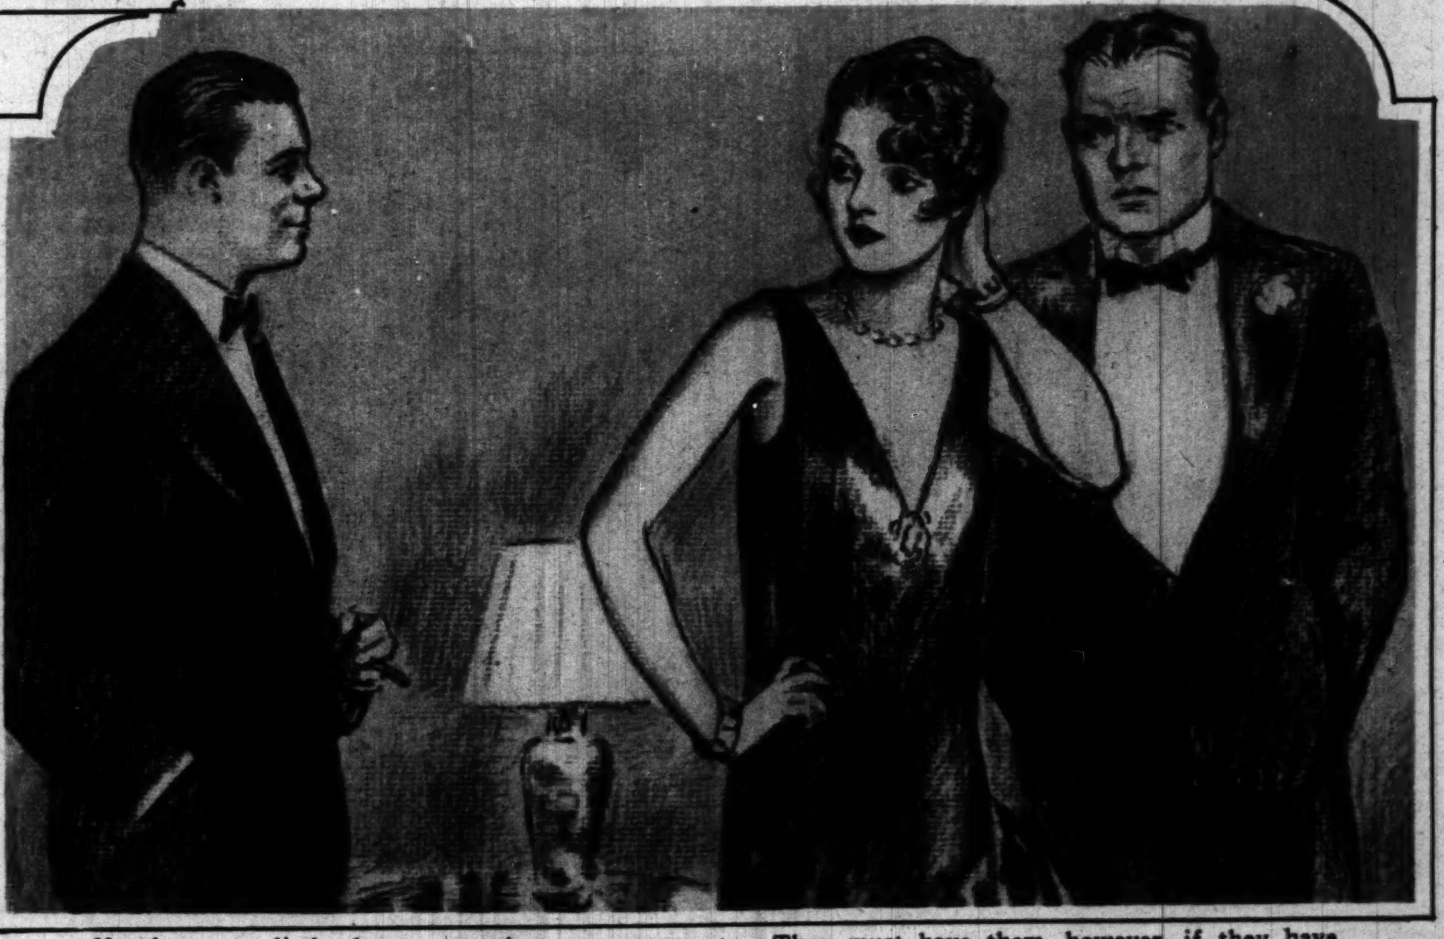
Coming home to Mamma. Companionate agreements may lead delicate young men to take matrimonial chances with, for instance, great big strapping rough and tumble athletic girls. Look at this poor boy. Fell for a girl who always grew quarrelsome after one cocktail. No wonder the marriage has ended.



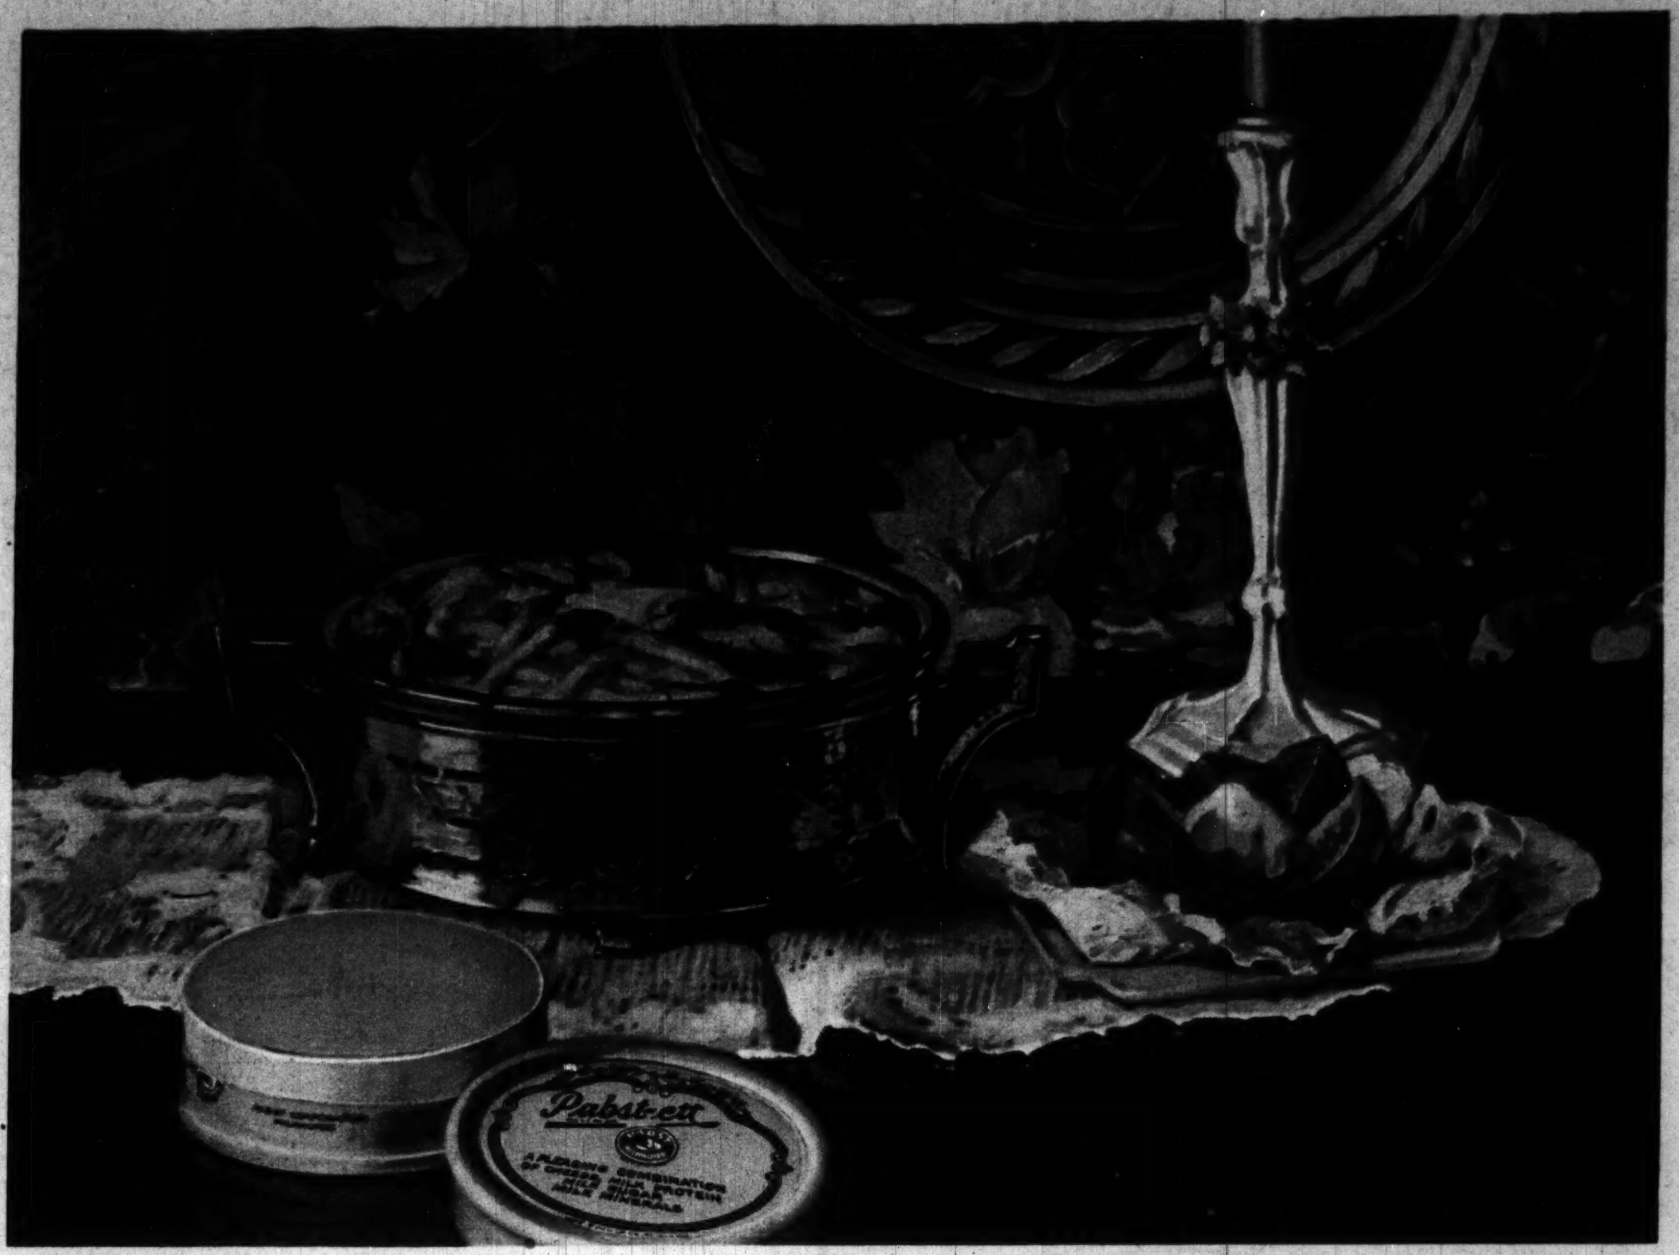
It is with pleasure we introduce Cyrus T. Shove, father of five unmarried and slightly unmarriageable daughters. Here are the three loveliest out walking with him. Cyrus is down on companionate marriage. Says he, "Get 'em hitched for keeps—and keep 'em so if possible!"



People seem to think there will be no ties that bind in a companionate marriage, just because there isn't the patter of baby feet on the floor. They forget how fond some people can grow of a dog, even though its name is Togo (like the one you see here) and it is half Japanese spaniel and half mastiff. Suppose a companionate marriage doesn't take and there's a dog in the case. Like as not, the couple would have to worry along in discord year after year just because neither could bear to give up Togo.



You hear very little about companionate engagements. They must have them, however, if they have companionate marriage. Companionate-engaged couples, as we understand them, are very much like all engaged couples. The young man is supposed to renounce all his girl friends, make a big hit by calling his fiancee's mother "Flora," or whatever her name is, and make himself generally agreeable at the drop of a hat. The young lady, however, keeps all her boy friends (and adds a few more for luck) and it's considered perfectly all right if she should say, "Arthur, I don't see any use of me ever going to see your family again. They don't mean a thing to me!"



Pabst-ett
A PLEASING COMBINATION OF CHEESE, MILK PROTEIN MILK SUGAR MILK MINERALS

TO FLAVOR EVERY MORSEL IN YOUR DISH OF MACARONI

USE QUICK-MELTING PABST-ETT--MORE THAN CHEESE

NEW deliciousness—every morsel richly flavored—that's Pabst-ett macaroni. Pabst-ett has a lower melting temperature than cheese. When heated it dissolves quickly — never becomes lumpy or stringy.

And from the tempting golden crust to the bottom of the dish, your macaroni becomes a true delicacy that all the family will relish.

Pabst-ett is not cheese, but more than cheese. It is made by the Pabst Process which conserves all the valuable elements of milk lost in cheese making—milk sugar, milk proteins, milk minerals, vitamins, calcium. It is as digestible as milk — a food that may be included regularly in the diets of young children, elderly persons, even invalids.

With its smooth, creamy texture and delightful flavor, Pabst-ett is ideal any way you formerly served cheese. It spreads like butter for sandwiches, blends perfectly in salads. You're always prepared for unexpected guests with a package of Pabst-ett in your home.

Not Successfully Imitated

Pabst-ett is the only dairy product made by the Pabst Process which retains all the elements of milk. It has not been successfully imitated. Insist on Pabst-ett to get the health-building cheese product that's more than cheese. Ask your grocer.

Sleeplessness

Now overcome

—without drugs

Here's instant sleep that gives you buoyant, energetic days

Make This 3-Day Test

From tonight on you can always be sure of getting instant, deep sleep—without the use of drugs. You will awaken each morning fairly tingling with healthy vigor.

No drug can give you restful sleep. For while drugs may put you to sleep, they always leave you "logy" and befuddled when you awaken.

But science has developed a wonderful food-beverage that brings sound, restful sleep in a natural way. It is called Ovaltine. It puts you to sleep instantly. And as you sleep its special food properties restore your tired mind and body—build up boundless vitality and energy.

Morning finds you a new woman. Fresh, clear-eyed, buoyant; youthful in looks and spirits. You have the energy to carry you right through the day and into the evening.

The 3-day test we offer here will prove all we claim. Note, most carefully, how good you feel when you get up in the morning.

Why Ovaltine brings restoring sleep

Authorities agree that digestive unrest is the main cause of sleeplessness. Ovaltine overcomes this condition in two ways:

First—It digests very quickly itself. Even in cases of impaired digestion.

Second—It has the unusual power of digesting 4 to 5 times its weight of other foods you eat. Hence it aids your stomach. Digestion goes on speedily and efficiently. Frayed nerves are soothed. Sound sleep follows.

And as you sleep the special food properties of Ovaltine also help to restore your tired mind and body. (One cup of Ovaltine has actually more food value than 12 cups of beef extract, 7 cups of cocoa, or 3 eggs.)

That is why after drinking a cup of hot Ovaltine at night you awaken in the morning so completely refreshed—abounding with new-found vitality and tireless energy. Note the unsolicited testimonials below.

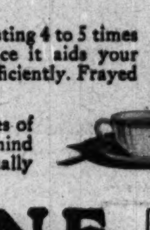
Hospitals and Doctors recommend it

Ovaltine has been in use in Switzerland for over 30 years. Now in universal use in England and her colonies. During the great war it was served as a standard ration to invalid soldiers.

A few years ago Ovaltine was introduced into this country. Today hundreds of hospitals use it. More than 20,000 doctors recommend it. Not only for sleeplessness, but because of its special dietetic properties, they also recommend it for nerve-strain, malnutrition underweight and delicate children, nursing mothers, and the aged.

Make this 3-day test

Just make a 3-day test of Ovaltine. Note the difference not only in your sleep but in your next day's energy. You tackle your work with greater vigor. You "carry through" for the whole day. You aren't too tired to go out for the evening. There's a new zest to your work; to all your daily activities. It's truly a "pick-up" drink—for any time of the day.



Druggists and grocers sell Ovaltine in 4 sizes for home use. Or get it at the soda fountain. But to let you try it we will send a 3-day introductory package for 10c, to cover cost of packing and mailing. Just send in coupon with 10c.

WHEN YOUR HUSBAND meets his former sweetheart—still looking so young and slim, so animated—do you suffer by comparison with her? This other girl is at least your age but has she learned better than you, the secret of appearing ever youthful?

You, too, can avoid those signs of maturity—can avoid the impression of weight and age—ever so easily. It is largely a matter of correct posture! Poor posture and sagging spine bring double chin, thickened torso, heavy hips. Straighten the line of the spine and your figure regains its lovely symmetry like magic. You appear taller, many pounds lighter, many years younger.

Try this test: place the hand on the diaphragm and lift upwards, always holding firmly. Your spine automatically straightens — and what change is wrought in your appearance! The P. N. Practical Front Corset will do this very thing for you. Its secret is the exclusive inner elastic vest which straightens the back-line by gently supporting the front of the figure.

The P. N. Practical Front is exquisitely styled, daintily finished. Wear it—and feel a new vivacity, a new youth; you will be slimmer and more attractive.

The Hour of Triumph

A great pianist bows to your applause. Honor justly earned! Two brother artists, whom you do not see, share in his hour of triumph. The artist-composer who wrote the poem in tone and the artist-builder who created the voice which gave it utterance.

HADDORFF
A True Piano

The voice of the Haddorff was first heard in the mind of its builder. The Haddorff piano is the delicate, yet sturdy, mechanism which Charles Haddorff has fashioned to produce that voice.

It may be small or large, a grand or an upright, moderately priced or more expensive. If it is a Haddorff it will have charm of tone, beauty of appearance, perfection of touch, and years of faithful service.

There's a little booklet which tells The Story of the Haddorff. We should like to send it to you. Write for it.

Building Airplanes for Fun!

DID you ever long to own an airplane yourself? Or make one? The Sunday Tribune is running a series of fascinating articles on the building of airplane models, written by Merrill Hamburg, secretary of the Airplane Model League of America. Just the thing to interest the boy of the family. And before he is well started everyone will be assisting him! Mr. Hamburg writes in a simple manner, explaining every part of the model, detailing all the steps, even telling you where to buy the necessary materials. It's an intriguing pastime. Just read

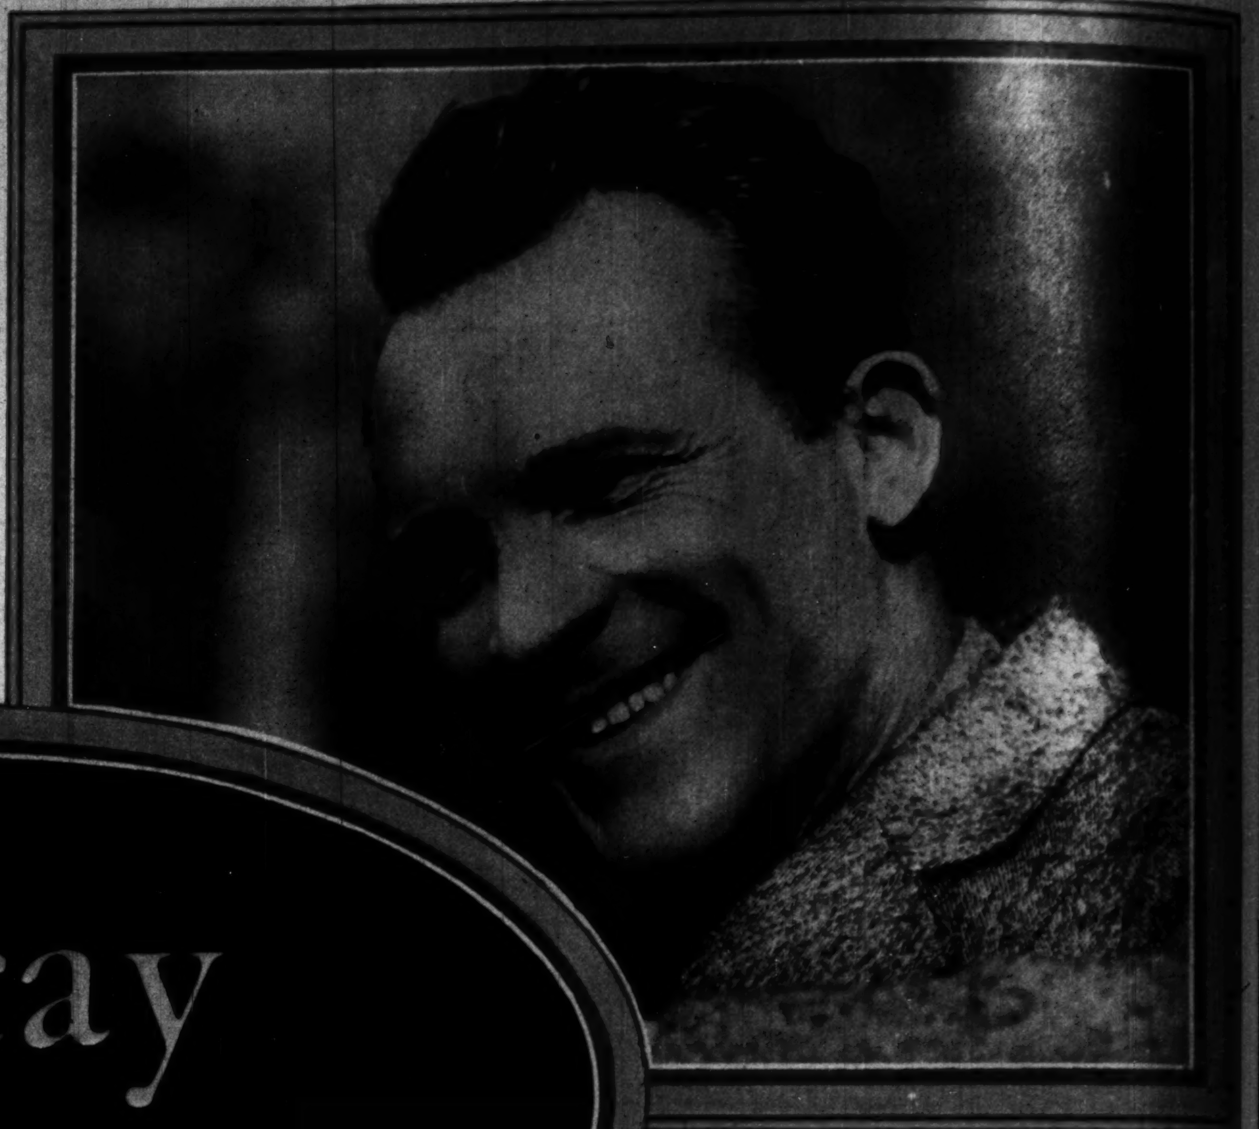
Great throngs have followed the sun-track south to Florida's glistening sands. In the glittering society gathered there, studies in adornment have reached their most modern expression. But none of them surpass the simple beauty of a smile—the lustrous gleam of pearly teeth, the clear coral of healthy gums.

Some men seem gifted with the vitality, the energy, the good-humor and aliveness which mark those we call "popular" and "successful." And their secret, if they have any, is that they have discovered what a wonderful game life can be . . . if you keep health playing on your side.



Decay
at The Danger Line

THAT fragile line where the healthy pink of gums meets the pearly white of teeth—that is The Danger Line.

It is called The Danger Line because it is the place where decay strikes its most treacherous blow. In the tiny V-shaped crevice formed around each tooth, food particles collect and ferment. Acids are formed that cause decay and often, too, Pyorrhea or dangerous gum irritations.

Not only this. But from decayed teeth poisons are generated which can cause serious illness. Women who suffer from the slow poisoning of decaying teeth or infected gums may not necessarily be ill. But they may find the charm of glowing health waning. For lack of vitality makes faces old. Pain, as well as worry, causes wrinkles.

Guard The Danger Line

Take care of your teeth. Your health often depends on them. And it is so simple to protect them. Dentists agree overwhelmingly that acids at The Danger Line are the most frequent cause of tooth decay and gum irritations. It follows, therefore, that to safeguard teeth and gums you must combat the attack of these acids.

There is one dentifrice today that gives you the necessary protection. It is Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. For Milk of Magnesia is recommended by dentists everywhere as a means of neutralizing the acids in the mouth.

GUARD THE DANGER LINE

Where the crown of each tooth projects into the mouth, the extremities of the gums meet it in a thin, knife-like edge. That is The Danger Line—where the most dangerous tooth decay and gum irritations often start.

Squibb's gives lasting protection

Squibb's Dental Cream contains over 50 per cent of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. It reaches all those tiny pits and crevices on your teeth which are inaccessible to any tooth-brush. There it remains, neutralizing destructive acids, preventing decay, fighting the peril of Pyorrhea, safeguarding the health and vigor of your entire system.

Make your teeth and gums safe at The Danger Line. Use Squibb's Dental Cream night and morning. See your dentist twice a year. You will be safeguarded from decay and its threat of disease and attendant misery. At all druggists—40 cents for a large tube.

Read what the dentists say

In almost any drug store you will find dozens of dentifrices. In every publication you find conflicting theories on mouth hygiene. Which is right? What dentifrice shall you use?

That the question might be answered by highest authorities, E. R. Squibb & Sons asked a world-famous research institution to make an investigation. 50,000 practicing dentists were asked certain questions. Here is summary of their replies.

95% of the answers agree that acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation.

95% of the answers state that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth meet gums—known as The Danger Line.

85% state that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia.

Surely, in the face of such overwhelming evidence there can be no doubt that Squibb's Dental Cream, made with Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, will really bring protection.

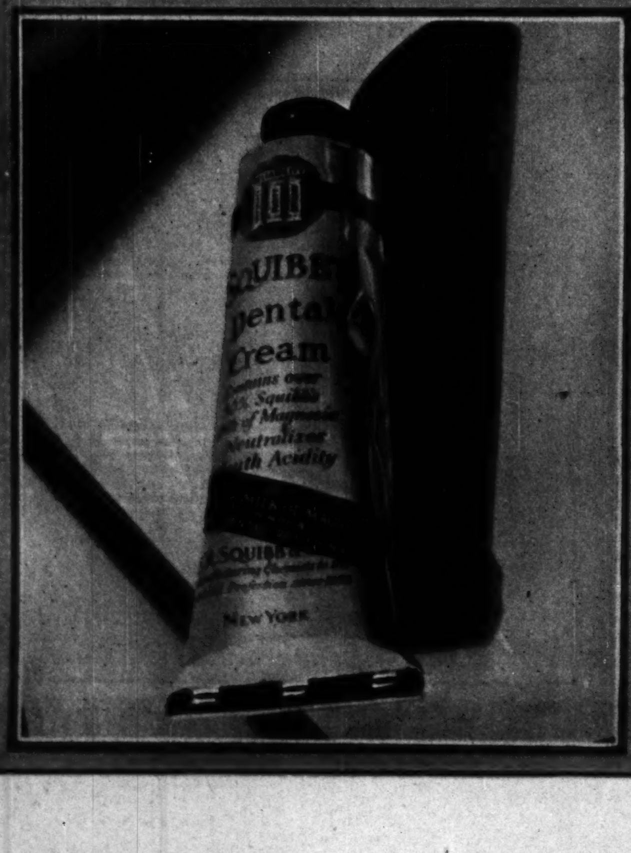
Squibb's Milk of Magnesia promotes proper alimentation

The strength and energy we use up every day must be renewed if we are to remain at the peak of our powers. This renewal depends on alimentation.

Squibb's Milk of Magnesia promotes proper alimentation by virtue of its twofold action. Its antacid quality helps counteract improper digestion. And its mild laxative action helps to relieve the system from the burden of fermenting food. At all druggists, only 25c and 50c a bottle. It is The Standard of Quality.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM

THE PRICELESS INGREDIENT OF EVERY PRODUCT
IS THE HONOR AND INTEGRITY OF ITS MAKER



What you should expect of your dentifrice

A good dentifrice should contain no gritty substance, no strong antiseptics, no astringents. It should cleanse the soft gum tissue without irritation and polish the enamel without scratching. And it should neutralize the dangerous acids which cause tooth decay or dangerous gum irritations—particularly at The Danger Line.

One dentifrice on the market answers to all these qualifications: Squibb's Dental Cream. It is made with more than 50% of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia, enough to neutralize the dangerous acids in your mouth. In addition, it is mild, non-abrasive, non-irritating. It soothes the delicate gum tissues, keeps the teeth smooth and lustrous. It is safe to use in the delicate mouths of children. You will enjoy using it because of its delightful flavor. On sale at all druggists—only 40 cents a large tube.

For more than two generations "Squibb" has been an accepted standard

As chemists to the medical profession, E. R. Squibb & Sons have been identified closely with the advancement of medical science for almost three-quarters of a century.

In this service, the complete facilities of the Squibb Laboratories have been dedicated to the higher demands of medicine and to the production of household products of unusual merit.

It was intended that these products should give everyone the opportunity to buy articles in home-use which are of the highest possible quality. Every Squibb Product must be approved by medical authorities before it is offered to you.

You will appreciate the superiority of Squibb Household Products the moment you try even such familiar standbys as Epsom Salt or Bicarbonate of Soda. Pure and truly easy to take, they are always uniform and fully efficacious.

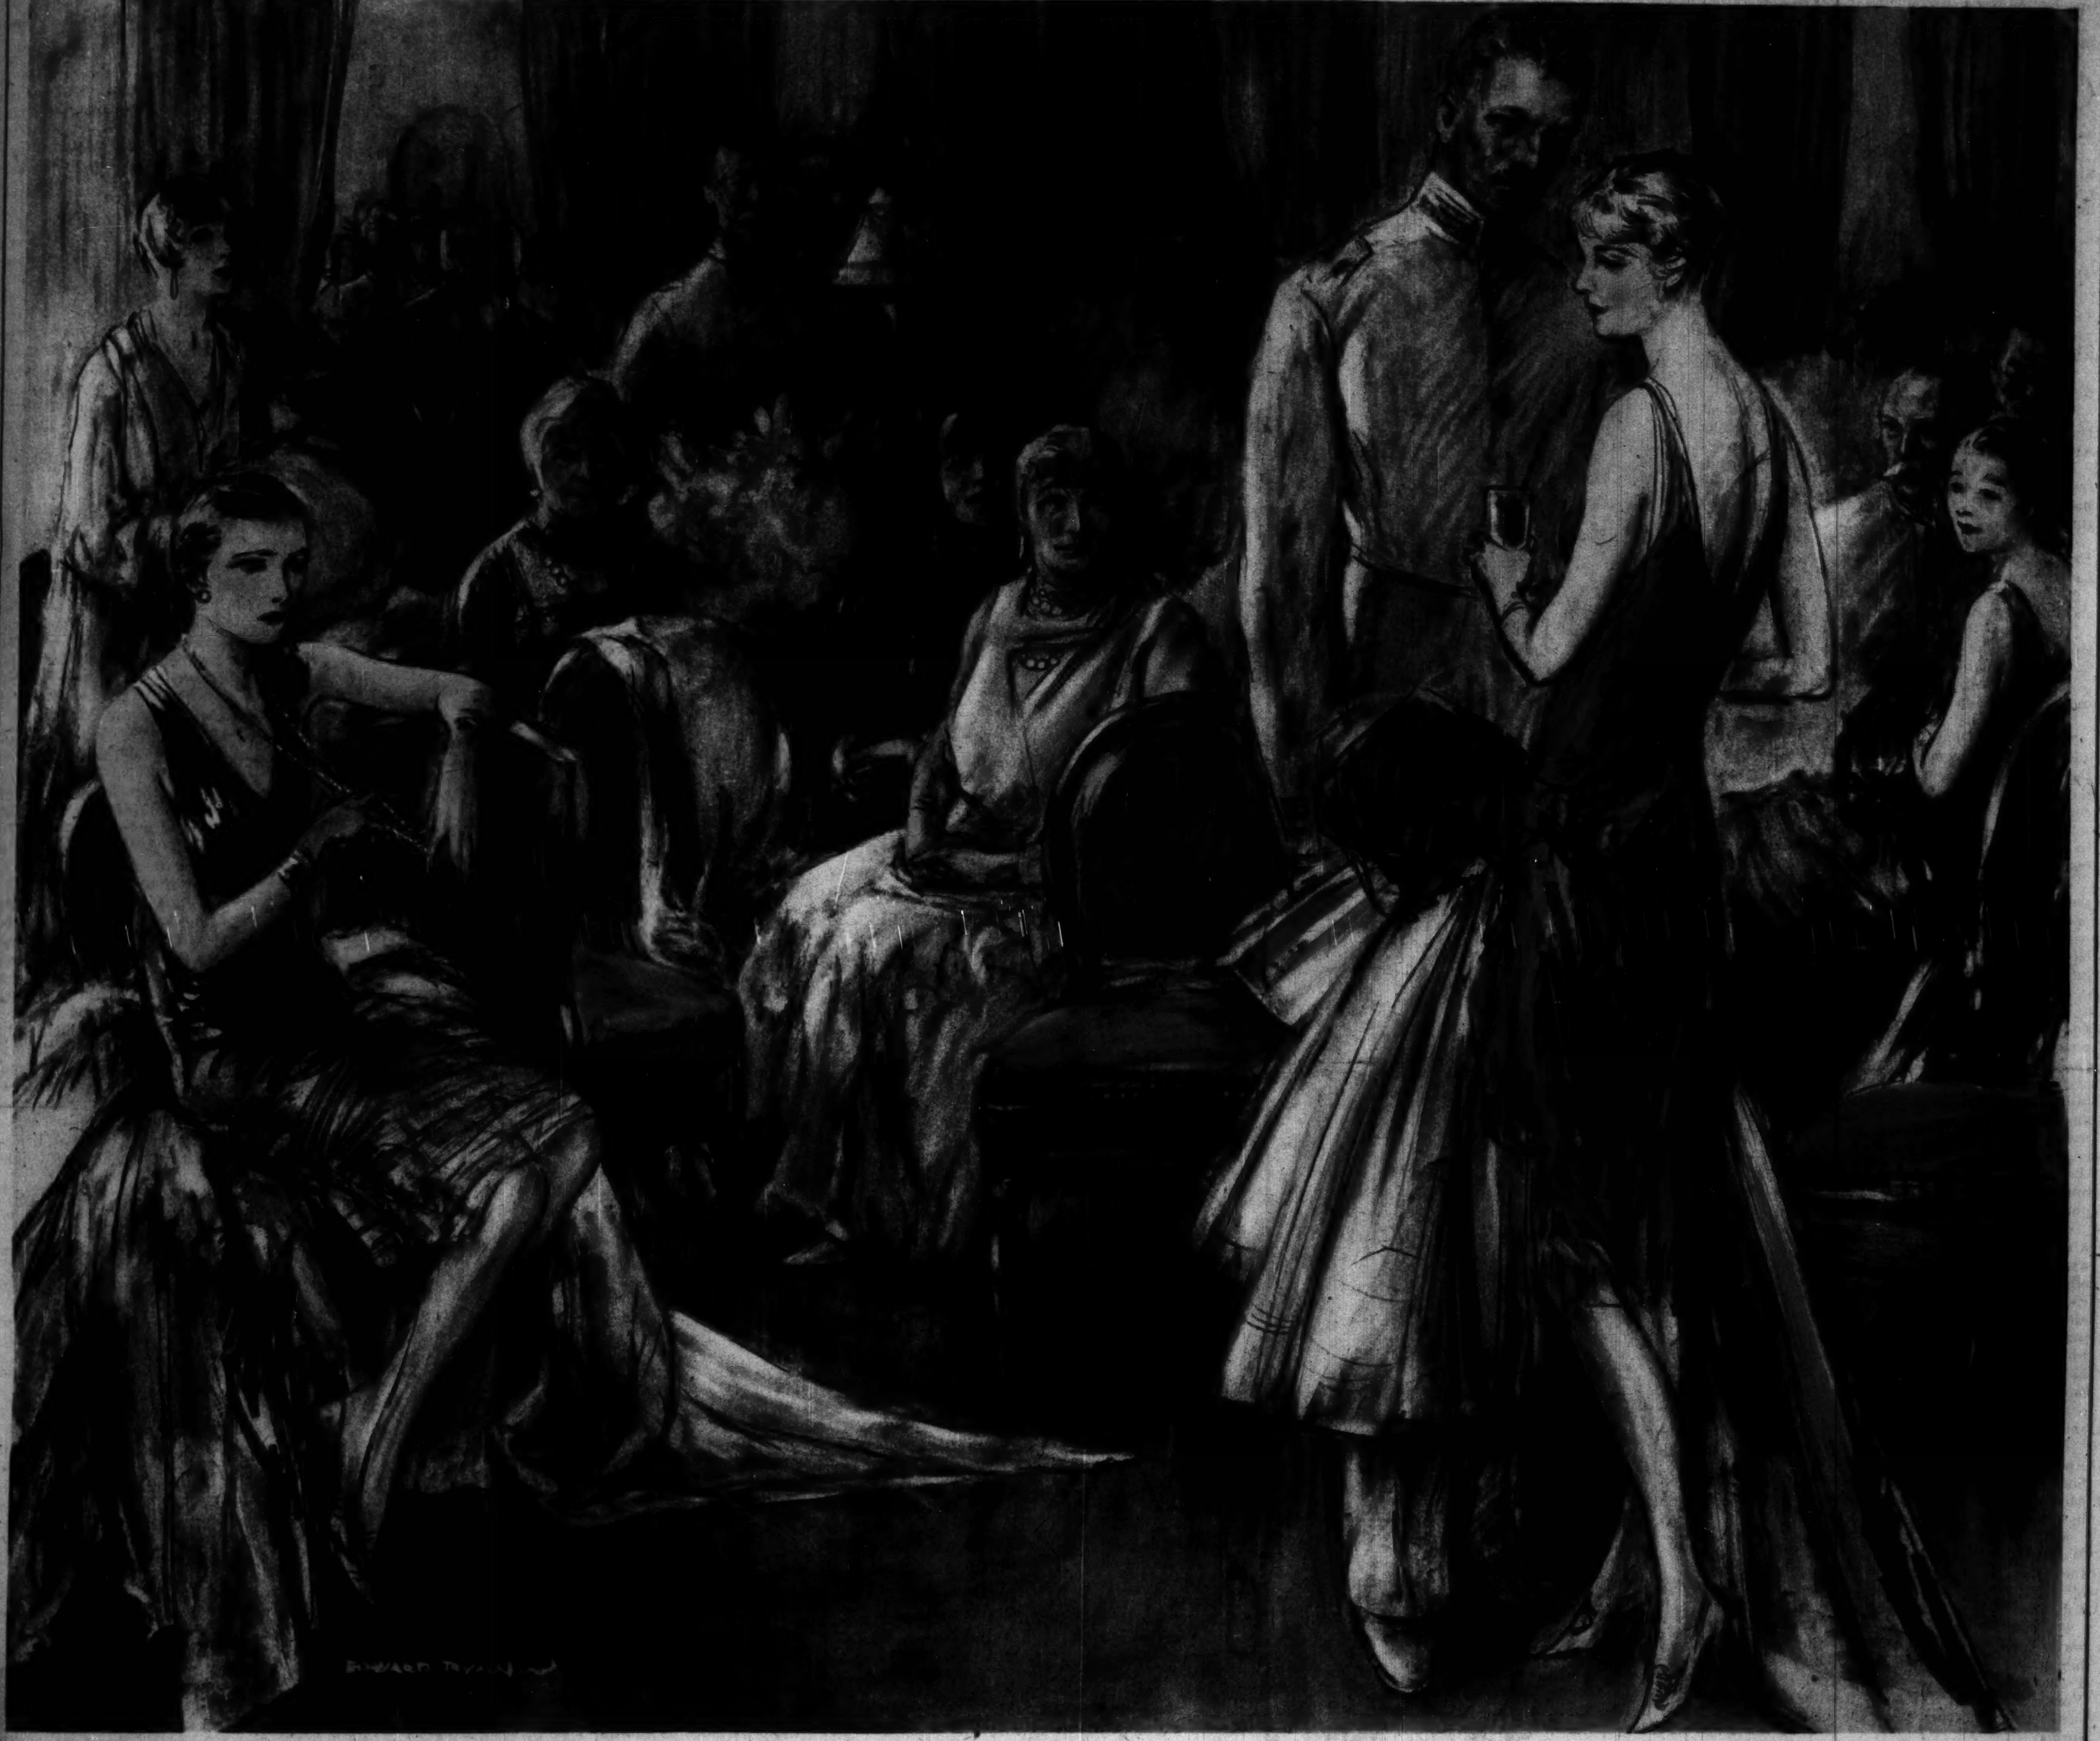
MISS. VARICK'S HUSBANDS by Arthur T. Munyan



"I'm so awfully new here," he said. "Please tell me your name again, won't you?"

ILLUSTRATED BY EDWARD RYAN.

In Which Moira Varick, with Her Little Hobby of Husband Collecting, Keeps Queenstown Tongues Wagging

THE story is of Queenstown, with its poisonous gayeties, and of Dorothy Haviland, with that lovely oddity of hers. I merely appear now and then to tell the thing as it happened.

Thinking of London, one thinks of fog and romance; or, thinking of New York, of lights and extravagant joys. In much the same way, but more sharply, any one who remembers the Queenstown station thinks of heat and intrigue.

The heat was the curse of the place and intrigue was the main diversion. It was bound to be so. The women had nothing else to amuse them, and the men, officers and civilians alike, had only their work, which was of a boresome and ignominious sort. Of course, there was snobbery and a pretense of society, but that was canvas for the real picture. Intrigue was all that made living possible to people stifled by the dullness of the post and fed up everlastingly. Heat, boredom, gossip, intrigue.

Every afternoon people met on the terrace of the Casino to talk and sip iced drinks. There they smilingly tore to pieces the reputation of any absent person, or of any person who left the group. It was an idle pastime. It never stopped flirtations; it simply gave them the added zest of secrecy and risk. So Queenstown lived on whispers and juleps, stolen kisses, and moonlit promises in a semi-tropical enervation, and nothing much ever came of anything there.

The raciest topic under the palmettos was Moira Varick. People pretended to be indignant about her, because it looked better; but secretly, I think, they were grateful to Moira. She put on a good show and gave them something to talk about—and guess about.

"I like husbands," she said openly, "as long as they're animals of prey. I shouldn't, of course, care to own one, a caged and domesticated one."

Other women's husbands, she was frank to say, fascinated her. They were urbane, experienced—whatever that meant! And appreciative.

"Bachelors, no," she said. "They're like medieval ladies—haunted by the idea that they're pursued. Much too shy and silly to be worth any sane woman's attention."

She seemed to be telling the truth, though nobody could believe that Moira (or any one else at Queenstown) would do that. What was her game, then? Well, that was what people talked about. Meanwhile Moira lived up to herself. She coolly collected one husband after another, on with a new love almost before she was off with the old. Lieut. Haviland was her fourth husband.

Dickie Haviland had wings, and women liked him. He was a flying officer and the government, with some notion of equity, gave him double pay for his rank as long as he evaded death. His life was not in any great peril, because there wasn't any plane at the station for Dickie to fly. But he took his danger bonus cheerfully.

In fact, he made a kind of happy philosophy of the idea. Double pay; double everything. Double cocktails. Dance all night. Dorothy for a wife; Moira for a playmate. Eat, drink, and be merry today; also tomorrow.

Moira was not really beautiful. She was unbelievably smart, with just that elegance of line that is so startling in a thoroughbred wolfhound. Her dark eyes held lighter overtones and a peculiar wisdom and were placed at so wide an interval that they seemed inscrutable. To the sight she was always a little unreal. Men imagined she was unlike all other women—and then tried desperately to find out to what extent she was not.

But Dorothy Haviland, the daredevil Dickie's wife, was a lovely and perfect creature. The seams of her chiffon stockings were straight, parallel, vertical lines. Her eyes were a luminous gray, alternately shy and unflinching under deep lashes that had the slow sweep and eloquence of a feather fan. And Dorothy, as I happen to know, had courage and constancy. She hated Queenstown with a deep sincerity, kept out of the wallows of gossip, and went about as little as she could.

The station swore Dickie was mad to neglect Dorothy and pursue Moira. Every afternoon Capt. Sterling's wife, a meddlesome old cat, would start the ball rolling by snorting that Dorothy ought to be told.

"Perhaps," I ventured, "she knows." That was a record in understatement. If Dorothy had been spared any whisper, or innuendo, or pitying smile, it was an oversight.

"Then," said Mrs. Sterling crushingly, "she certainly ought to be told!"

"Well . . . Told what?" I asked her maliciously, and there I had her.

Told what? Dickie's infatuation was plain enough. That was nothing to tell. And beyond that nobody knew anything. Moira had her own clever little way of leading the gossips on just so far and then throwing them back on their own imaginations.

Thus things went on. Dickie danced his wild attendance on Moira. Dorothy kept a sweet reserve, refused even to try to chain up the errant Dickie, and declined to discuss herself with others. She didn't even reproach Dickie, and was something of a puzzle herself.

Some clever soul got the idea that perhaps Dorothy was running a very sub rosa affair of her own. The idea was so idiotic that it had to be dropped—with a sigh of regret.

IN August Lieut. Jimmy Sparrow came to Queenstown to make a fourth in the pretty sextet. Jimmy had wings, too, and was a brother officer of Dickie's. He brought a plane with him. Every one waited with interest to see what part he would play.

Anywhere else a charming new officer would have been paired with Moira, the station's most attractive unmarried girl. But such matters were managed differently at Queenstown. A pretty romance between Moira and Jimmy was as unthinkable at Queenstown as—well, it was just too tame, too absurd. All reasonable people felt that Jimmy would make love to Dorothy Haviland. That was a twist so simple and neat that it was almost conventional.

There was Sparrow, an attractive kid with the deadliest kind of appeal for women. He had the air of a little boy just scrubbed and dragged away from home too young. He roused treacherous maternal instincts in all women. They never could realize he was over 14 until it was too late. How would Dorothy be able to resist him? There was she, just needing a little admiration to go the way of all Queenstown. It wasn't reasonable to look for anything but a Dorothy-Jimmy complication.

I had my doubts. As the one person who hated the station as cordially as Dorothy, I understood her a little, and admired her a lot. And I knew that it was unreasonable to expect anything reasonable to happen here.

Jimmy Sparrow, as I had half anticipated, did the other thing. Before he had been a member of our colony for twenty minutes he had seen Moira and he was hers. People thought it depraved of him. His move was an insult to Dorothy, an outrage upon Dickie, and an imposition upon Moira herself. A bachelor snubbing a perfectly eligible married woman and dashing off after an unmarried girl! And of all girls, Moira, who had Dickie's allegiance! It was disgraceful!

ON the night of the Embassy club ball there was a familiar scene at the Havilands'. Of course, I was not there. I can merely construct what happened out of what I know.

Dickie, very brave to look upon in his dress whites, stood behind his wife's chair with perfect courtesy and made a proper remark before sitting down to dinner.

"You don't care to go tonight, dear?"

"O, no. Nothing obligatory. I just thought——"

She considered. "Why don't you ask Moira Varick if she won't——?" She intended no irony. They were talking polite set lines.

"Why, I said something to Moira about possibly dropping around her way tonight."

"Yes, do!" That done, Dorothy glanced at her husband over the rim of her glass. "Anything wrong with the cocktail, dear?"

"Something awfully right!" He was very handsome as he gazed at the opalescence in his glass, his head held high by the close collar of his tunic.

"I hate Queenstown!" Dorothy said suddenly. Her eyes, always so expressive, in that instant had the wild light of a hunted dryad's.

"Why?" Dickie asked. Vehemence, rather than the statement itself, surprised him.

"O." Now the long lashes swept down, veiling emotion. "The heat——" Outside the wide windows the faint breeze made a hot, dry rustle.

"Yes, damnable," he agreed indifferently. It was not worth one's breath to curse the heat here.

"They'll dance late?"

"I suppose. Don't wait up for me."

After he had gone whirling down the drive in the gray roadster Dorothy was pensive. Presently she spoke aloud to herself after a habit that had come upon her at the station.

"I presume it's my own fault. If I would try to intrigue him—if I would scheme—it's the only way in this dreadful place."

Then she made a gesture of repugnance at the thought and went to play half-heartedly on the only piano in Queenstown. To one who had studied the heart of Dorothy Haviland it would have seemed likely that she loved the charming infidel who had gone blithely off to his rendezvous.

The Embassy club was a hot scented shelf of a building under the palmettos, with a polished floor that rolled in the heat and French windows pouring out the service band's languid, bad jazz. On the verandas sat mammas, chaperons, wives of senior officers, who fanned themselves and talked and whispered. Servants went to and fro, and only the tinkle of ice on glass marked their movements. White uniforms, the silk suits of civilians, the pastel evening frocks of women dotted the terraces or floated on the heated waves of music. Silver slippers shimmered on the blinding, polished wax. Laughter was muffled.

The faces of the women were smiling, hectic, with restive eyes that saw desperately. Dancers watched each other. No single circumstance was missed by the avid line of eyes on the veranda. Every one at the station was present or accounted for. The number of times each frock had been worn before was checked. Who arrived with whom, who danced with whom and how often, were noted. Every forced gayety, every sign of the extra cocktail, every disappearance of a couple from the dance floor was remarked. The gossip gibbered endlessly.

Every molehill was talked into a mountain. And now a tense whisper ran across the dance floor, the verandas, and the terraces. Where were Moira Varick and Dickie Haviland? Together, naturally, yet—where?

Would they have the daring not to appear? Would they risk the scandal that would follow their running off somewhere together on the night of the Embassy club dance? No, hardly. A mishap, then? No, Moira never had mishaps.

All minds buzzing with guesses, knowing Moira's ways, came to one conclusion. She was delaying her arrival for the purpose of making an entrance. Perhaps she had a new gown from Paris or New York and wanted to display it with the fullest effect. It was certain that she had something to spring.

I TALKED to Mrs. Sterling and heard a sidecar motorcycle pass the gates, the snarl of the engine hanging and fading on the heavy air. I wondered idly for a moment who it was. A tension like the brazen monotony of the music and the stifle in the air pervaded the club, while glances were turned often toward the entrance gate. To relieve suspense Mrs. Sterling talked to me, whom she hated, about an escadrille at Queenstown.

"They tell me the planes actually have arrived!"

"Yes it has," I said. The planes consisted of one ruinous old pursuit plane, a DH4, I think, or about that vintage.

Other people stood around and joined in the talk. "Dickie and Sparrow had it up yesterday," said some one. "By the way, where is Sparrow tonight? O, Dickie said they were 'flying it in formation.' Wasn't that cute of him?"

"—— no discipline in the air forces."

"Does Haviland remember how to fly a ship? It's been long enough since——!"

"What if the poor child should crash!"

"Then the commandant would send his insignia to Moira."

"And notify Dorothy! Otherwise she might not know of it for weeks. Dickie and his wife never meet, I'm told."

"You ghouls!" I said, and laughed disagreeably. I was a civilian and an unmannered animal, anyhow, rude to people's faces, and civil about them behind their backs. I was not the vogue at Queenstown.

There was a sudden hush in the ballroom, followed by a muffled commotion of nervous voices and movements. The hush spread from the dance floor in a big widening circle. In an orchestral effect of scraping chairs a murmur arose to a gasp of astonishment.

"Fan-cy her dar-ing to!"

"O, this is too much!"

I stared at the gibbering throng around me and saw from their faces that some priceless piece of scandal had just come off. Then I stuck my face in at one of the ballroom windows. Moira Varick was arriving with none other than Jimmy Sparrow!

"Well, what of it?" I demanded.

Nobody answered such a simpleton's question, and I grinned to myself.

In all her arrogance and chic Moira stood with her escort on the wide stair to the ballroom, talking lightly with him, coolly glancing about her. Her face, with its odd planes, was as unreadable as ever, except for the trace of a mocking smile on her lips. In the poise she showed she might have been unaware of the sensation she was causing.

Lieut. Jimmy, charming in his silver winged white tunic, plainly was proud of his partner, boyishly curious about his début, quite innocent of what went on. Some of the men present may have been stupid in seeing what had happened.

But Moira and every woman there knew just what her arrival with Jimmy Sparrow meant. It meant that she had discarded Dickie Haviland, and on the same caprice had captured the station's newest darling. It meant that all present were to see for themselves, think what they liked, say what they pleased, and the devil to them all! Moira danced, while tongues ran wild.

I spoke to Mrs. Sterling because I always got some ironic amusement out of her sputterings. "Now what?" I inquired.

"It's outrageous!" she puffed, to my delight. Everything to her was an outrage. It was outrageous for an affair to go on, and outrageous for it to end.

"Do you really think so, Mrs. Sterling?" I egged her on.

"Hellburn," she snapped; "don't be imbecile!"

Did the old cat foresee some tragic consequence from all this? It almost seemed so. The music stopped, and out of nowhere came a drone, a hum that grew more and more audible.

Dancers came from the ballroom to stand on the terraces, gazing up into an opaque heaven. The motor of the low flying plane sounded a varying pitch, an effect like a mute drawn in and out of the flare of a horn. Owwwwwww-ooooooo-rrrrrr-ahhhhhh-oooooo.

"Haviland!" went the exclamation.

Moira became the focus of accusing stares. Dickie was up there, furious with Moira, going to hell in his own dramatic way to show her.

"Idiot!" said Moira under her breath, and carried her smile.

People in their unbelievable stupidity were still saying, "Airplane," telling each other, "Airplane." They said: "Up there," pointing up there.

Lieut. Sparrow's face wore a frown that added years and dignity. He knew the meaning of the queer arpeggios in the whine of the plane's motor. "Stunt flying," he muttered. "Wha' th' hell ails that fella?"

"What did you say?" Moira asked him sharply.

"Tail spin. Loops. Outside loop, I think. Say, has the heat got Haviland?" He knew nothing of Dickie's frenzy of jealousy. He was thinking as a pilot about a pilot's problem. But Moira fidgeted under his stare. "Night flying!" he talked to himself. "Stunts! In an ol' stork that ain't fit to take off'n the ground!"

"Courtmartial?" she asked.

He answered her with a sardonic laugh.

"I asked you——!" she began in a peremptory tone.

She irritated him now. "Lieut. Haviland is in command of the squadron," he told her with sarcasm. "He can fly when he damn likes. Courtmartial, no. Inquest? Probably."

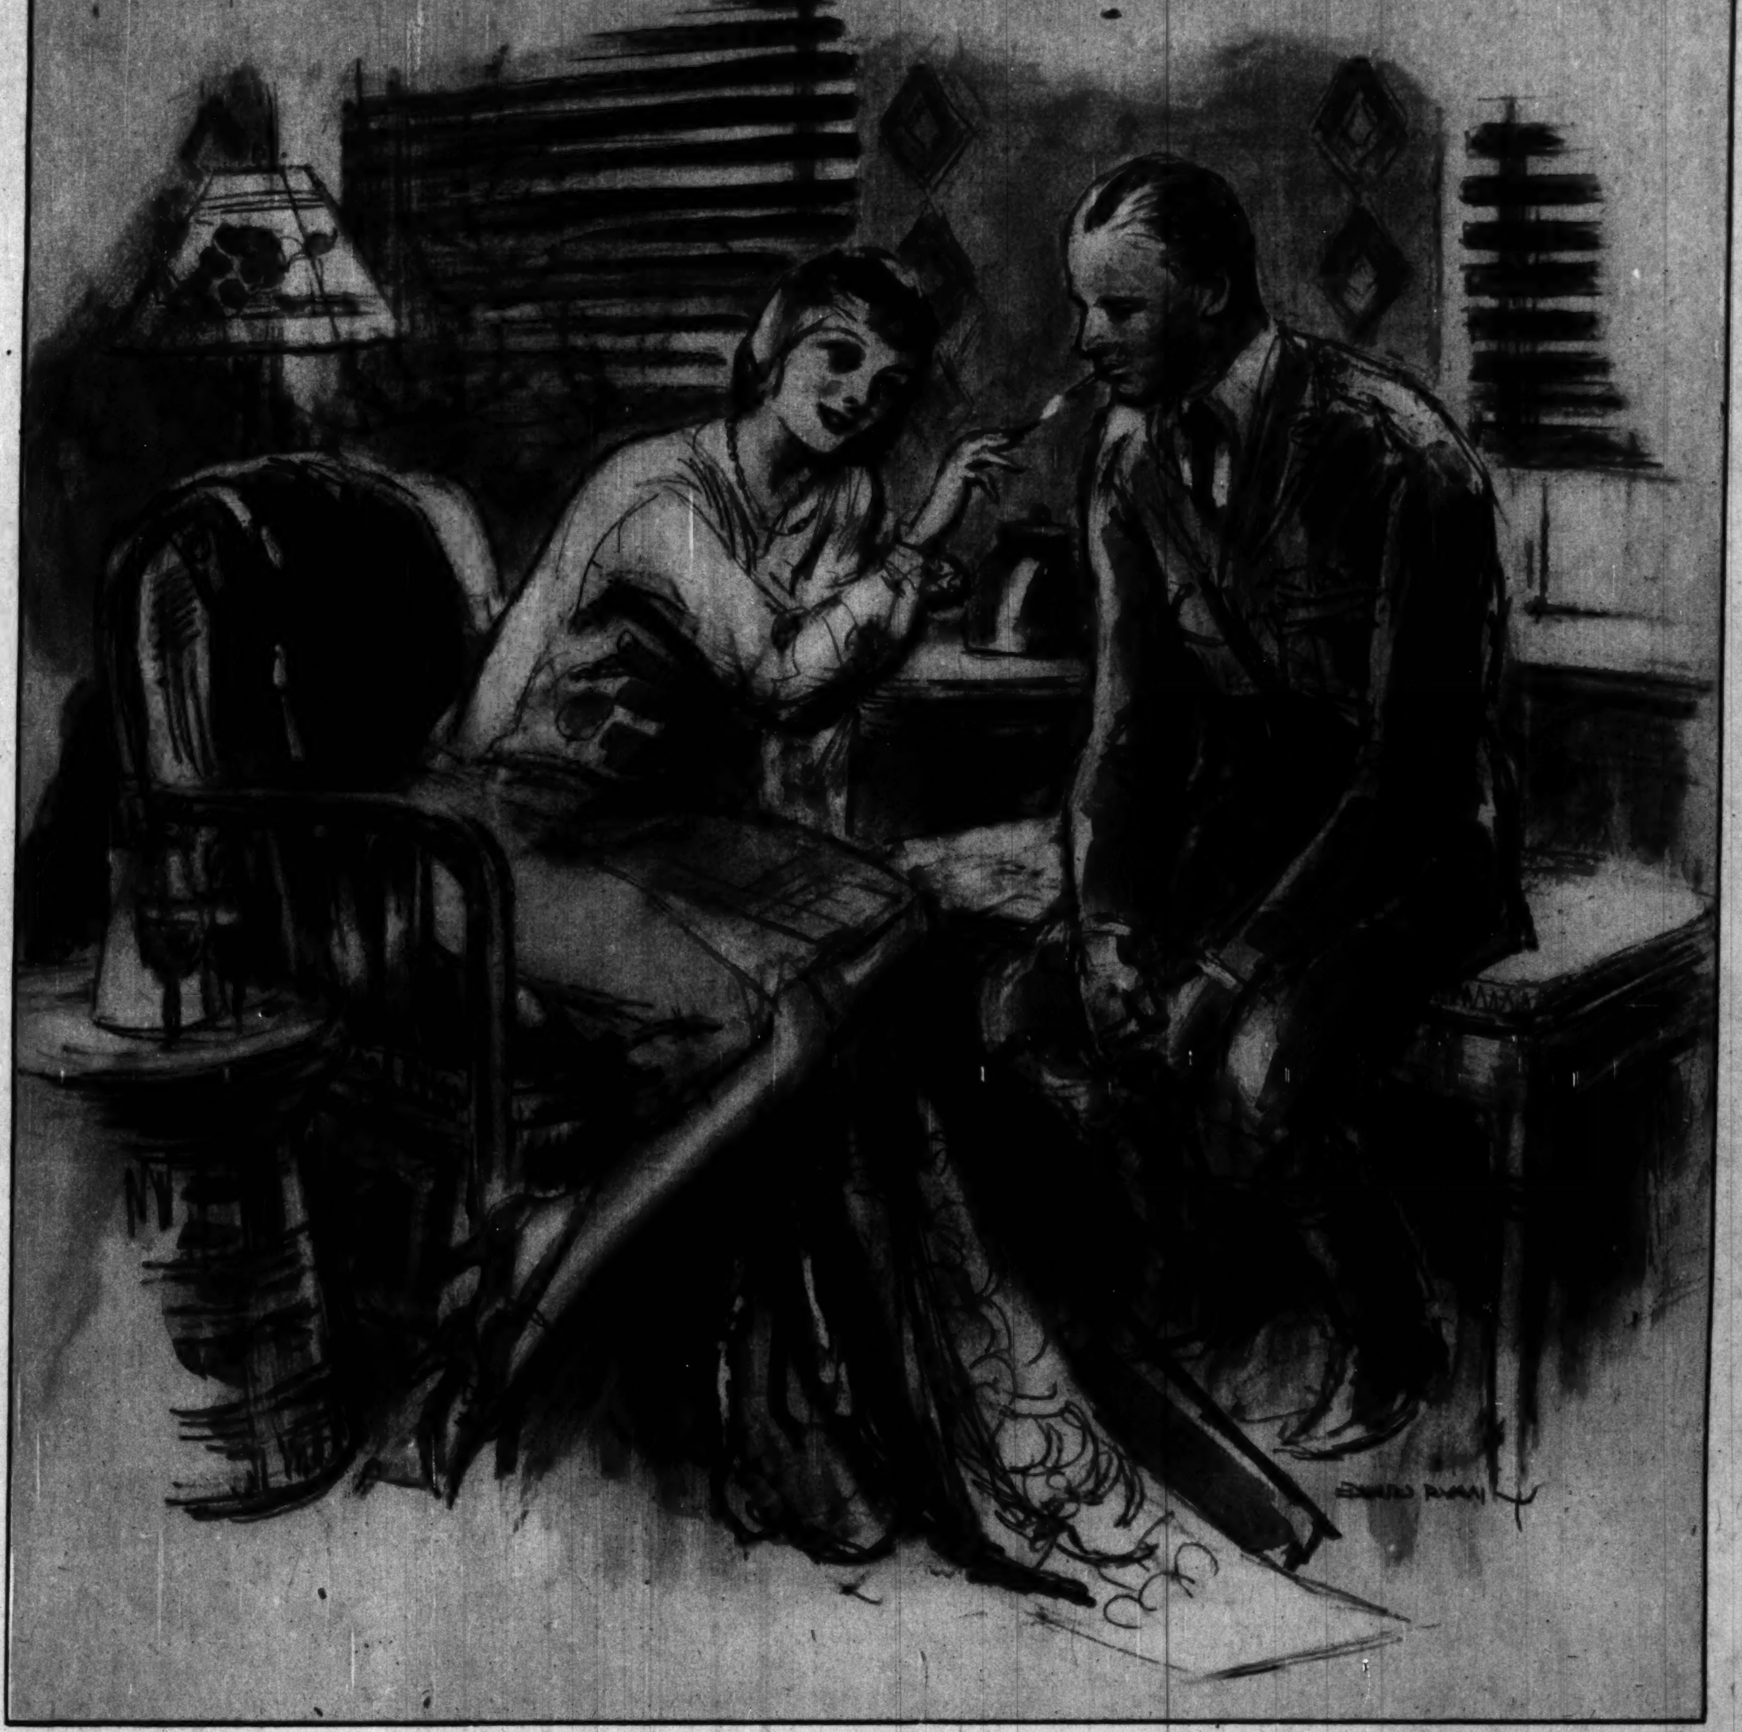
The old man rose with a face apoplectic and stamped in to the telephones. The bark of his voice reached the terraces. Now a signal gun rattled on the lifeless air and a small searchlight bit the night hysterically.

"Ordering him down," Moira said in relief.

"How jolly!" was Sparrow's disagreeable retort.

"Look here! I don't like your tone. I suppose you mean it's difficult to land at night safely. Is that it?"

"Like unscrambling an egg," curtly. Then:



Lieut. Haviland was her fourth husband.

"Sorry I was rude. Always upsets me when some one's bumped off. Say, why should Haviland act that-a-way?" The question to which every one else knew the answer!

THE drone of the plane died in the distance and the music began again. For three minutes the jazz rasped on ragged nerves till somebody stopped it in the middle of a bar. We all stood on the terrace, listening in dread for the crash of Dickie's plane. We were angry with him for worrying us, and yet too worried over him to be really angry with him. Most of us took our feelings out on Moira in scowls. She, in much the same state of mind, silently damned us all.

A motorcycle snorted up the drive, an orderly leaped out and broke through the crowd, which closed in behind him. In front of the old man he came to salute and reported.

"Lieut. Haviland has landed his ship, sir."

"Nobody knows, sir."

Moira's light laugh rang clear and mocking above the general sigh of relief. Dickie's death would have been, with some injustice, on her head. Dickie's monkey business was his own show. Moira saw her advantage and took it. She drew Jimmy Sparrow toward the ballroom and nodded to the musicians. The band crashed into a fox trot and the dance was on.

"Clever girl," I remarked in my affable way to Mrs. Sterling.

She rewarded me with a violent sniff of disgust. "If I were Dorothy Haviland——" she began.

"Don't we all," I asked her suavely, "get about what is due us from life? The most we insist on having, or the least we're willing to accept. Moira, Dorothy, all the rest of us. We manage our own lives. Nobody can help us. It's no use to talk." I lit a cigaret and gazed dramatically at nothing. "Life is a many-ringed circus. N'est-ce pas, as we Parisians say?"

Leaving the good lady with this infuriating piece of whangdoodle, I ambled off in the direction of my bungalow. Before midnight, I daresay her thoughts ran, I would be lapsed in solitary drunkenness.

However, I had other plans. Once out of sight of the Embassy club, I changed my course and gait. Fifteen minutes' walking in the accursed humid heat brought me to the Havilands' place.

"Your husband," I announced to Dorothy, "has been making a long eared object of himself, if you should ask." With that I sat down near her on the verandah, where a beam of light from indoors gave me a view of her profile.

Evidently she had heard the plane. "He was making a test flight," she said coldly. "I suppose plenty of people agree with you, though, that a man who isn't afraid is a donkey."

I lit a cigaret on the end of the last. "Test flight," I murmured, letting her insult pass. "Well, there's no doubt left that his ship will do Immelmann turns over the Embassy by starlight. Heaven knows how he landed the thing!"

"He learned a long time ago how to land a ship in the path of a motorcycle headlight."

I studied her with admiration. "You're almost perfect," I told her. "But you clenched your hands and you're three shades paler."

"And you're three shades ruder than usual," said Dorothy. "Go away. I don't want to talk to you tonight."

"You're evading. You like to talk to me because I'm one who hates this poisonous bog of intrigue as much as you do."

"What have I to evade?"

"The elite," I said, "stopped their revelries for fifteen minutes tonight to worry about your charming husband."

"Well, I daresay they'll be able to catch up again."

"Very likely. I wasn't touched on their account. I was merely telling you the pretty story. Moira and Dickie have split. The other man is the new ace, Sparrow, who, by the way, is a nice little boy and doesn't even know what it's all about. Dickie is doing tail spins over the terrace to show Moira something or other. Moira bit her lip in annoyance and went back to dance with Jimmy. Mrs. Sterling says it's an outrage. . . ." I yawned.

Dorothy's eyes were trained on me under their long, straight lashes. "You expect me to do something?"

"I never give advice."

She hesitated. There was a certain tenderness or friendliness about her now. "I love Dickie," she said.

"I know it."

"But I won't lure him, or nag him, or——. He may have what he wants! I won't fight to hold him, Hellburn!"

"Dickie," said I, "didn't come to the party tonight, as I remarked." Then impolitely I looked at my watch and rose.

"Going?" she asked.

"Yes. Good luck to you, Dorothy." I added mysteriously: "You can bring it off all right."

. . . .

A final quarter of moon came up and hung like a blob of orange vapor in the sky as a faint, cooling west wind stole across the terraces of the Embassy club with a breath of relief for jaded dancers. Jimmy Sparrow, wilted and vaguely resentful, looked over Moira's shoulder to see what had caused the last gulp of astonishment from the crowd.

From what he had seen of Queenstown, all the members of the colony were a little touched in the head by the heat. Every other time a person came into the ballroom or went out of it the whole crowd whooped.

Now, framed by the wide doorway was a girl, and she was looking at him, as nearly as he could tell. To his jaded senses in that moment she suggested dew, and forest shadows, and coolness. She wore a frock that fell in slender lines from her shoulders, and she had the loveliness of a silver cascade suddenly glimpsed.

"Who is that?"

Moira carelessly glanced and smiled mockingly. "Don't you know? You ought to, I'm sure."

"I don't remember. . . ."

"Remind me to tell you," she tantalized him. "Meanwhile, do please find me a drink of something with a gallon of cracked ice in it."

In search of Moira's order, Jimmy bumped into Lieut. Haviland, who had been summoned here by the commandant. He had just broken away from the old man at last.

"O! I say . . ." The two stood there in the flag-stoned foyer, and Haviland's look was unpleasant. Jimmy stammered, "Made it all right, hm?"

"Why not?" snapped Dickie.

Well, no doubt he'd heard enough for one night about his escapade. Jimmy changed the subject. "Say, it's devilish awkward. I wish you'd tell me who that girl is over there."

Haviland looked, and his eyes got bigger. Then he stiffened, and his face grew red. "None of your damned business," he snarled, and turned abruptly into the tap room.

Jimmy took two angry steps and stopped with a rueful grin. "The heat," he decided. "Gets 'em all, I reckon."

THAT unknown girl piqued him. There seemed to be some devilish scheme here to keep him from knowing her, and that gave him a half-spiteful determination. I saw it in his face as he came up to me.

"Say, help me out, won't you?" he accosted me. "Just been here about three days, and I forget people's names, you know. It's awful awkward. That girl over there who isn't talking to any one."

"That girl?" I asked. "O, that girl. Son, it would never do for you to know her. Now, let me think. There's Moira Varick—nice girl. Better let me introduce you to her."

Jimmy, to my delight, cursed me roundly and went off to find a tall glass with ice and a straw in it. I knew he would meet his lady of mystery now in spite of the devil. Next he looked around and saw Moira in a nook of palms at the far end of the dance floor. At the edge of the nearest group of people, and a little apart from them, was the girl who looked like a wood nymph.

Defiantly, Jimmy walked straight up to her and held out the frosty glass, amid the gasps of the multitude. He stood before her in a silence like that of the polar spaces.

"May I offer you——" said his nice boy's voice. He heard her murmur her thanks in a voice delightful and low.

He said: "I'm so awfully new here. Please tell me your name again, won't you?"

"Does it matter?" she asked with her faint smile.

"Seemed sort of foolish," he told her, "not to know the name of the loveliest woman in Queenstown." He always talked with a drawling accent that divided his words. "Felt I ought to try to rem-edy the ig-norance some-how."

"O, I think very likely you'll live it down."

"I could put quite a lot of time on living it down right now if——" he began eagerly, and looked about him, suddenly flustered. "Lots of faces here tonight, aren't there?" politely.

There were, indeed. The place was full of faces, all staring dumbly at Jimmy and Dorothy. A whole herd of eyes! "I wonder," he suggested shyly, "if maybe it wouldn't be nicer out on the terrace."

AS they disappeared into the outer shadows there happened one of the most peculiar of feminine maneuvers. One of those things which go off without a signal, without a flaw, just as a whole flock of pigeons change their tack in the same second.

Dorothy, coolly, quietly, without an effort, had snatched away Moira's most high-handed conquest, the cherub Jimmy. Every woman present knew that Moira was sitting alone, deserted. And now all the women, with one accord, suavely flattering, corraled every last man at the Embassy and held him. There was not a chance of a single man escaping to join Moira Varick.

For five minutes there was a buzz of small talk. Five enduring minutes for Moira to sit there in a helplessness that admitted her defeat in open warfare at Dorothy's hands.

Dickie Haviland came out of the tap room, but he was looking, not for Moira, but for his wife. She, naturally, was nowhere to be seen.

Dickie came up to me. His face was flushed and angry. "Hellburn, have you seen my wife, by any chance?"

"Everybody in four hemispheres," I told him, "knows by this time that your wife has just gone out on the terrace with Jimmy Sparrow."

"By God——" he began.

"Don't make an ass of yourself," I soothed him. "Here in Queenstown women do go out on terraces with men not their husbands. You, of all people, know that."

The boy's fists were clenched. "I don't give a——"

"Poise, laddie!" I said softly. "She's yours, but don't rush it. Go, for heaven's sake, and talk to Mrs. Sterling. Tell her some ornate lie or other about flying under sealed orders."

Dickie nodded understandingly and went.

It seems foolish either to put it down or leave it out. In either case, I presume, you have guessed before this. Of course, I loved Dorothy Haviland with a hopeless and idiotic reverence. I wanted to see her happy, and succeeded in that.

The RED KNIGHT of GERMANY

By FLOYD GIBBONS

(Richthofen's books with death balanced well in his favor at the close of March, 1917. He had killed thirty-two enemies and wounded or captured thirteen more. But his carnage in the air had not yet reached its zenith. "Bloody April" was to follow.)

INSTALLMENT V.

Written in Blood.

TO kill, to wound, or to capture an average of a man a day for a month is the unprecedented war record which young Von Richthofen wrote in blood during the thirty days of April, 1917.

It was the month America entered the war.

The appearance of this new and formidable ally in the ranks of Germany's foes added fresh fuel to the killer spirit that dominated the uhlan of the skies.

He produced results and demanded increased production from the members of his unit. He kept careful books on their killings and became intolerant of those who lagged on the record. His own bag increased almost daily.

Individual, almost personal contact killing on such a scale was beyond even the imagination of Prussia's ruthless war lords. It became the boast at German headquarters that Richthofen's appearance on any new sector was sufficient to cause extensive troop movements on the part of the enemy.

He made "Bloody April" a month of death and carnage in the air. In the number of casualties inflicted the German air service at that period achieved the zenith of its power.

German technical genius and industrial efficiency were responsible in no small degree for the April successes of her flying forces. They brought out their new spring model planes at least six weeks before the British could deliver theirs at the front.

For this failure on the part of home production in England scores of young British flyers paid with their lives. Their old last year machines—of the slow, cumbersome B. E. and F. E. type, and the De Haviland pusher scouts—were hopelessly outclassed by the new Halberstadt and Albatross scouts.

The German machines could literally fly circles around their adversaries; could outclimb and outmaneuver any British plane in the air.

It was not until the middle of the following May that the lagging British supply department was able to equalize matters by delivering numbers of the new English models—the two seater Bristol fighters, the S. E.-5 single seater fighting planes, and the De Haviland-4 two seater fighting and bombing planes.

By April 5 the Germans had completed their retreat to the Hindenburg line, and four days later the allies opened their spring offensive of 1917 with the attack on Vimy ridge and the first battle of the Scarpe.

The conflict waged unremittingly, night and day, throughout the month, and the activity of both sides in the air reached a peak never before touched in the war.

The flying uhlan took a photograph of the wrecked plane in which he killed Lieut. J. C. Powell and Air Gunner P. Bonner. It remains today, with his notations on the back, in one of his several scrapbooks in his mother's home at Schweidnitz.

Further documentation comes in a detailed account of the fight that Richthofen wrote for publication. Another account of it was written by his younger brother, Lothar, who was now a full-fledged member of jagstaffel II., which name had been abbreviated to jasta. In addition to the above, Richthofen's official report on the combat has been found in the German reich's archives in Berlin.

Richthofen himself described the fight as follows:

"My comrades had started earlier and were much nearer to the enemy. I feared that my prey would escape me and that I would have to look on from a distance while the others were fighting.

"Suddenly one of the impertinent Englishmen tried to drop down upon me. I allowed him to approach quite near, and then we started a merry quadrille.

"During an interval in the fighting I assured myself that we were alone. Soon I had got him beneath me without having seriously hurt him with my gun. I thought he intended to land, but there I made a mistake. Suddenly, when he was only a few yards above the ground, he once more went off on a straight course.

"I attacked him again, and to do so I had to go so low that I was afraid of touching the roofs of the houses in the village beneath me. The Englishman defended himself up to the last moment. At the very end I felt that my engine had been hit. Still I did not let go. He had to fall. He flew at full speed into a block of houses."

Powell and Bonner were from the 13th Squadron, Royal Flying Corps. They had left their airdrome a few minutes before 8 o'clock to photograph German artillery positions, and their comrades heard nothing more of them until the Germans dropped a message announcing that they had been killed.

Richthofen learned the identity of his victims in the late afternoon of the same day. With Lothar, he motored over to Farbus village and examined the wreck of the English machine crumpled up against the wall of a house.

Before noon of that same day Richthofen had gone aloft again and brought down another plane.

There are three accounts of this fight, which took place more than two miles above the earth. Two of them are by Richthofen, and they contradict each other vitally. The third account is by the only living survivor of the combat, and it differs from the other two.

In the wartime account that Richthofen wrote for publication, and that has every appearance of careful editing by the military censor, the flying uhlan takes credit for having spared the lives of his adversaries.

In his military report of the affair he wrote that he deliberately killed one of the English flyers after the plane had landed behind the German lines.

The Prussian was in gay spirits after his early morning kill. Visiting him at the airdrome was Lieut. Werner Voss, an old comrade from Boelke squadron.

Of all the German aces, Voss was closest to Richthofen in planes downed. On the previous day he had been accredited with his twenty-third victory and was only nine behind the baron.

The weather had turned out badly, with a strong wind and frequent flurries of snow and hail. Richthofen went aloft with Voss to accompany him to his airdrome. They flew about the clouds in the direction of Arras, over which place they were joined by Lothar, who had recognized his brother's red machine from afar.

"Suddenly we saw an English air patrol approaching from the other side (Richthofen later wrote). Immediately the thought occurred to me, 'Now comes number thirty-three.'

"I was nearest to the enemy and attacked the man at the rear of the formation.

"A favorable wind came to my aid and drove both of us over the German lines. My opponent discovered that the matter was not so simple as he had imagined. So he plunged into a cloud.

"I plunged after him and dropped out of the cloud, and, as luck would have it, found myself quite close behind him. I fired and he fired, without any tangible result. At last I hit him. I noticed a ribbon of white gasoline vapor. He must land, for his engine had stopped. He fought on until he landed.

"When he had come to the ground, I flew over him at an altitude of about thirty feet, in order to ascertain whether or not I had killed him. And what did the rascal do? He leveled his machine gun and shot holes in my machine.

"Afterward Voss told me that if that had happened to him he would have shot the aviator on the ground. As a matter of fact, I ought to have done so, for he had not surrendered."

That was the account of the fight that admiring millions read in Germany during the war. But read Richthofen's official report of the same combat and it will appear that somebody is lying somewhere. Here it is:

"Requesting acknowledgment of my thirty-third victory.

"Date: April 2, 1927. Time: 11:15 a. m. Place: Givenchy. Plane: English Sopwith two seater, Clerget Blin motor, type two, without number. Occupants: Sergt. Dunn and Lieut. Warren.

"Together with Lieuts. Voss and Lothar von Richthofen, I attacked an enemy squadron of eight Sopwiths above a closed cover of clouds on the enemy's side of the lines.

"The plane I had singled out was driven away from its formation and tried to escape me by hiding in the clouds after I had put holes in its gasoline tanks.

"Below the clouds I immediately attacked him again, thereby forcing him to land 300 yards east of Givenchy. But as yet my adversary would not surrender, and even as his machine was on the ground he kept shooting at me, thereby hitting my machine very severely when I was only five yards off the ground.

"Consequently I once more attacked him and killed one of the occupants.

If Richthofen's official report to his superiors is the true account, according to his belief, then it is my opinion that the change in the published account was made by the German censor for the purpose of destroying any possible material for a Hun atrocity story.

But now comes the third account of the affair, and this one is from Lieut. Peter Warren, pilot of the plane that Richthofen shot down.

His observer was Sergt. R. Dunn, who died shortly after the plane landed. Death came as the result of a bullet through his abdomen, but it was a bullet that he received at 12,000 feet in the air and not after he was on the ground.

"Really, I am afraid Richthofen, in his report on his fight with Dunn and myself, must have mixed us up with somebody else," says Peter Warren. "I certainly wish Dunn and I had been able to put up as much resistance as the baron credits us with, but actually the fight was almost entirely in Richthofen's favor. Poor Dunn was hit early in the fight and was unconscious through most of it.

"It was the first time I had ever taken Dunn up, although he was a veteran observer with, I believe, three Hun machines to his credit. The fact that we had never flown together before was a disadvantage.

"Richthofen took Dunn by surprise. The first notice I had of the attack was when I heard Dunn shouting from his seat behind me, and at the same time a spray of bullets went over my shoulder from behind and splintered the dashboard almost in front of my face.

"I kicked over the rudder and dived instantly, and got a glance at the red machine passing under me to the rear. I did not know it was Richthofen's. I looked back over my shoulder, and Dunn was not in sight.

"I had lost several thousand feet, but below me, at about 9,000 feet, was a layer of clouds. I dived for it, hoping to shake him off in the vapor. The clouds were only a thin layer, and instead of remaining in them I went completely through. The red Albatross came through with me.

"I managed to flatten out somehow in the landing and piled up with an awful crash. As I hit the ground the machine swooped over me, but I don't remember him firing on me.

"I looked into what was left of the observer's cockpit and saw poor old Dunn crumpled up on the bottom. I had some difficulty in lifting him out. He had been plugged through the stomach, apparently from the back.

"I lifted his head and spoke to him.

"'Think I'm done for,' he mumbled.

"German infantry rushed out, and we carried Dunn to a dressing station in a stone hut. The doctor told me that Dunn would not last much longer. He died six hours afterward.

"I was put into a car and taken to Douai. There I was placed in a room in the old French military barracks.

"I was moved the next day to the prison camp at Karlsruhe, and later to Schwarmstadt, where I attempted to escape, but was caught. I spent the rest of the war caged up."

The mother of Dunn lives today at Workington, England, and has never heard an account of her son's fatal combat with the flying uhlan.

Following the bombing by the British of the Richthofen squadron's airdrome, the plan of mounting machine guns for high-angle fire, as shown here, was put into effect to combat such attacks.

BRITISH general headquarters still demanded more accurate information and photographs of Vimy ridge, against which a massed attack was to be launched. The lives of thousands of infantrymen depended upon this information, and it was up to the flyers to get it.

Photographic patrols went over daily on this hazardous mission, and the next adversaries that went down under the guns of Richthofen were engaged in that work. The German ace reported the fight as follows:

"Requesting acknowledgment of my thirty-fourth victory.

"Date: April 3, 1917. Time: 4:15 p. m. Place: Between Lens and Lievin. Plane, Vickers two seater, No. A6382. Motor unrecognizable. Occupants: Lieut. O'Beirne, killed; Observer McDonald, prisoner.

"Together with Lieut. Schaeffer and Lieut. Lothar von Richthofen, I attacked three enemy planes. The plane I myself attacked was forced to land near Lievin.

"After a short fight, the motor began to smoke and the observer ceased shooting. I followed the adversary to the ground. BARON VON RICHTHOFEN."

Lieut. D. P. McDonald was pilot of the machine, and Second Lieutenant J. I. M. O'Beirne operated the cameras and machine gun from the forward cockpit. The captured pilot lives now with his father in Cape Province, South Africa. Maj. and Mrs. O'Beirne, the parents of the dead observer, live at 95 Eaton terrace, London.

There must have been rain or otherwise inclement weather on the Somme on April 4, 1917, the day after Jack O'Beirne's fatal fight, because Richthofen, whether he took the air or not, appears to have missed one day without having his customary Englishman for dinner.

But on the following day he made up for it by knocking down two planes in less than fifteen minutes. In these two combats he killed one man and captured three, two of whom he wounded.

These were not photography or artillery planes, but armed fighting machines, quite worthy of his most careful attention. The fight occurred when a flight of the Fourth squadron, Royal Flying Corps, bumped into Richthofen and four of his fighting pilots almost directly above the flying uhlan's airdrome at Douai.

Lieut. A. M. Leckler piloted one of the Bristol two seaters, with Lieut. H. D. K. George manning the gun in the back seat. Lieut. H. T. Adams flew the second plane, with Lieut. D. J. Stewart, his observer, protecting the rear.

H. B. Griffiths, a second lieutenant of the same squadron, was also on the patrol. The Bristol fighters carried double armament of Vickers and Lewis guns.

Griffiths, who survived the fight, reported later that he had seen the two planes of his comrades engaged in a hot "dog fight" over Douai—saw them go down, and noticed, later, that their machines were burning on the ground behind the enemy lines.

The next news the squadron received was in the form of a German message dropped over the lines stating that George had been killed, and Leckler, Stewart, and Adams taken prisoners.

THE arrival of the new English air steeds was the subject of many reports and much discussion that night at Richthofen's airdrome at Douai. At the long mess table the flyers gave heated accounts of their encounters during the day, pointing out the strength or weakness of the British planes as they had found them.

During that dinner events were shaping themselves not many miles away that would rudely disturb the evening's discussion.

In an airdrome near the village of Izel-le-Hameau, behind the English lines, there were indications of unusual activity.

Soon the planes, with loaded bomb racks and fuel tanks, were pushed out of the hangars, like giant nightbirds surrounded by retinues of attending gnomes.

The orders for the night were simple. They read: "No. 100 Squadron will bomb Douai airdrome on the night of April 5 and 6 if the weather is suitable."

There was no question about the weather. It was made to order. An early moon was rising to the full. The wind was light.

Eighteen planes of the squadron were lined up, ready for the start. They had been painted a dull black from wing tip to wing tip, with the bodies of the planes a dull gray.

An officer read 10:30 o'clock on the illuminated dial of his wristwatch. The wave of his hand was answered by increased life in the idling motor of the first plane in the line. A sign from the pilot and the wheel chocks were pulled away. The plane moved across the field, gathering speed. The rest of the planes pulled out at three minute intervals.

A large fire was burning in Lens behind the German lines. It was an excellent landmark. The squadron climbed steadily in the hope of crossing the lines without the knowledge of the enemy. It was to be a surprise attack.

In the swoop of the first plane two incendiary bombs exploded right on the airdrome. Richthofen's nest was lit up like a carnival.

The downpour of fire and explosives lasted about twenty minutes and ended as suddenly as it had begun. The night riders, after dropping their bombs, climbed to safer altitudes, although searchlight beams still whipped the heavens and the night sky was punctured with the burst of anti-aircraft shells and flaming strings of "Spanish onions."

Back to the airdrome at Izel-le-Hameau went the exultant pilots of No. 100 squadron. All returned. As each plane landed it was surrounded by its crew of mechanics, who hurried to the task of immediate inspection, refueling, and lubrication.

Thirty minutes later, with bomb racks replenished, they went back over the same route.

Down went the squadron leader again, and two more phosphorus forty pounders were released to provide the footlights for the second show. They landed close to two hangars, which immediately went up in flames. The burning phosphorus ignited everything inflammable that it touched. The gentlemen "upstairs" swooped down, as before, to do their stuff.

With its mission performed, the squadron headed for home, followed by the groping beams of the searchlight and the angry puffs of shell and shrapnel.

Again the waiting crews tended the returning planes, repaired fabric rents, replaced stay wires that had been cut by bullets, or repaired piping that had been struck by shell particles.

One crew waited in vain.

The missing machine was that piloted by Second Lieutenant A. R. M. Richards, with Second Class Air Mechanic E. W. Barnes presiding over the "lump sugar" and the "pepper box."

Their old F. E., during its low swoop over Richthofen's home grounds, had been mortally wounded by a burst of machine gun lead which found its way to the motor's vitals. Richards and Barnes made an unconventional landing in the dark in a field close to Douai. They spent the rest of the war as guests of the kaiser.

The flying uhlan's campground the next morning looked as if a cyclone had struck it. Four hangars had been burned completely, all the rest of them had been damaged, and many of the jagdstaffel's machines had been temporarily, if not permanently, put out of action.

IT is significant that the squadron leader's almost daily record of a victory for the month, so far, shows no kills on April 6, the day after No. 100 Squadron left its cards. It is quite probable that the all red Albatross was among the wounded birds that couldn't take the air.

While extra gangs of workers repaired the hangars and filled up the holes in the flying grounds, the mechanics busied themselves with the damaged machines. Others were put to work ramming piles and posts into the ground, on which machine guns could be mounted for high angle fire.

Richthofen placed great reliance upon the dependability of the English. If they had come last night at a certain hour, they would be certain to come at the same hour the following night. He had reason.

"Again we were sitting in our mess (he wrote, concerning that night of April 6). Of course, we were discussing the problem of the night flyers. Suddenly an orderly rushed into the room, shouting:

"'They are there! They are there!' pointing above.

"We all rushed to our machine guns. The rest of the men were provided with carbines.

"The first Englishman arrived, exactly as on the previous evening, at a very great altitude. Then he came down to about 150 feet and, to our greatest joy, was making for our barracks. Just then he got into the glare of the searchlight.

"When he was only 300 yards away some one fired the first shot, and all the rest of us joined in. He flew exactly over our heads.

"At the moment when he was directly above us we jumped quickly into our bombproof. It would have been too silly for flying men to die by a rotten bomb. As soon as he had passed we rushed out again and fired after him."

That first swoop, as on the night before, was the one that turned on the light. Two more hangars blazed upward as a pair of phosphorus bonfires landed neatly between them.

The conflagration made every detail of the airdrome stand out in bright relief. As before, the rest of the squadron swooped down and across, but this time there were only thirteen planes. In addition to the captured bus of Richards and Barnes, four other machines had been so badly hit by antiaircraft fire in the previous visits that they were unable to take part in the second night's excursion.

If the intensity of the German reception was a surprise to the English visitors, the German defenses had a surprise in store for them also.

As soon as the machines had dropped their bombs they remained at the low height and started looking for more trouble. They directed their attention particularly to searchlights, diving straight down the beams and spraying the lamps and their crews with lead.

This was the beginning of a new form of air fighting that later found complete exploitation at the battle of Messines. It became known as "ground strafing," and there are but few records of its having been employed before this date.

Richthofen's closest friend in his squadron was Lieut. Schaeffer, who prided himself on being as good a shot as his commander.

Schaeffer insisted that he had hit one of the night birds, but Richthofen refused to believe him. So many persons were firing at each machine at the same time that it would be impossible to tell who had hit the target.

That night, back at Izel-le-Hameau, after the second raid, No. 100 Squadron counted noses, and found that another plane was missing. This time it was one piloted by Second Lieutenant L. Butler, with Second Class Air Mechanic Bobbie Robb in the observer's seat.

Word came through the next day that both Butler and Robb were prisoners of war and unwounded. They had been forced to land by a bullet through the old motor.

In Richthofen's opinion, the only effect of bomb dropping at night was a moral one. He did not believe that the material damage done was worth the effort.

It was too impersonal to suit the spirit of Germany's leading ace. He liked to see his adversary, lay plans to get him, and then get him.

He got one the following day. It was his thirty-seventh.

(A plunge of two miles downward in a broken plane—a mighty crash, and then darkness—this is the other side of the story of Richthofen's battles in the air. It is told in next week's installment by one of his victims—an Englishman—who escaped death by a miracle.)

HIGH CHIVALRY

by ACHMED ABDULLAH

THE STORY SO FAR:

LORD CARMYON, penniless, is living in Paris after the war. He meets the lovely Sultana Evelyn, whose reign in Kivastan, a small principality of Asia, is threatened by a rival sultan. Carmyon and his world war buddies, Prince Tamerlanoff and Hector Aristide L'Hommedieu, volunteer their services. Evelyn leaves for Kivastan by one route, and the Musketeers by another. The Musketeers are arrested as they leave the ship at Calcutta. Carmyon escapes; the other two are thrown into jail. Carmyon finds Evelyn at the home of a friend of her father. Through the mysterious work of this friend the jail is set on fire, and Hector and Tamerlanoff escape. It is announced that both they and Carmyon have perished. Disguised, the three set out with Evelyn for Kivastan. Tamerlanoff becomes involved with Feofar Khan, a Turkoman chief, over the latter's dancing girl. Carmyon and Hector join their friend in the fight, and Evelyn agrees to forfeit everything she owns in order to get them out of the scrape. Meanwhile, Mustaffa Bek, son of the rival sultan, starts from Paris for home by way of Russia, kidnaps and then abandons the pilot of a Russian plane, and acts as his own aerial chauffeur.

INSTALLMENT XII.

Across the Border.

"REALLY every bit as fantastic and incredible," Prince Tamerlanoff, later on, described Mustaffa Bek's sudden plopping out of the skies in the heart of the Central Asian steppes, "as—O—strolling down the boulevards and seeing a crowd of laughing, gesticulating people, and asking what it's all about, and finding out that a President of the United States, dressed up in the pink tights and short, white skirts of a prima ballerina, is doing a toe-dance in public."

To which Lord Carmyon replied that, judging from his own rather vicarious knowledge of American Presidents, he quite agreed that Calvin Coolidge was the last man in the world to be guilty of such conduct . . . "but what about the late Theodore Roosevelt? He might have done the very thing—on a bet, or a dare. Anyway, fantastic and incredible or not, Mustaffa Bek got here in his airplane, didn't he? And jolly lucky for us that he did!"

Of course there were excited questions, excited answers, lengthy explanations; and then Mustaffa Bek inquiring what day of the month it was.

"The seventh. Why?"

"I suppose we can make it by the fourteenth. O, yes"—counting on his fingers—"one day to Teheran—take on gas there—day and a half to Constantinople . . . thence by railway, if we prefer . . . O, yes—easily by the fourteenth. I wonder if I'd better cable from Teheran and reserve a table . . ."

"What are you talking about, Mustaffa?"

"The Café Mirliton . . ."

"Pardon?"

"I'm sorry. My fault. I forgot."

"Forgot what?"

"You don't know it. New Paris restaurant. Opened since you left. Perfectly toppin' place . . . it's all the rage these days . . ."

"Aren't you forgetting a brace of details?" asked Lord Carmyon.

"Not that I know of."

"What are we going to do in Paris?"

"What any sensible person does there. Nothing at all! In other words—enjoy life!"

"Which costs money. And we're as stony-broke as we ever were."

"Don't let that worry you," laughed the other. "I've plenty—enough for the lot of us . . ."

"We wouldn't insult you by refusing." Lord Carmyon turned to Evelyn. "Would we, dear?"

"Of course we wouldn't, Freddie," said the young sultana, while Tamerlanoff and L'Hommedieu voiced similar sentiments.

"Well—there you are!" rejoined Mustaffa Bek. "When shall we start?"

"Wait, old fellow. There's still the second objection," Lord Carmyon reminded him.

"Namely?"

"We came to Central Asia, like the hair brained romantic young fools we are, to do deeds of high, clanking chivalry—to reconquer a kingdom . . ."

"Right-O! And you had a corkin' good try at it. But—without meaning to hurt your feelings—you failed, my dear boy."

"We did. But—trouble is that we're still the same hair brained, romantic young fools. We aren't cured yet. And so"—with that trick of sudden, stilted speech which was his in moments of great elation—"we're going to have another try at our kingdom—another fling at the far, far moon. Cold shouldered by Fate, are we? What of it? We'll make shift of her cold shoulder—till we meet her again. And then she'll give us a warm shoulder and—by Gad!—a kiss or two into the bargain. And, if she refuses, it'll be our fingers around her throat until she squeals for mercy." He laughed. "Or has age come to us so quickly that we should put our stomachs to the counter and earn our living selling sugar and coffee and kippered herrings—and no finer excitement than a half bottle of Burgundy and a shilling seat in a music hall?"

He addressed his two friends.

"Am I not right?" he demanded. "Shan't we have another try—another fling at the far, far moon?"

"Yes," said Tamerlanoff soberly, while the gascon, forgetting all about his recent dreams of peaceful, stodgy middle age and honest onion soup, concurred with a fervent:

"Ainsi soit-il!"

With shining eyes Evelyn looked at her Three Musketeers; and her words—for she meant the opposite, and you'll understand what I'm trying to imply if you know women, and if you don't it's high time that you should learn—were not at all sincere:

"No, no! You nearly lost your lives—for my sake! I won't let you do it."

"O, yes," smiled Lord Carmyon, "you'll let us."

"I won't!"

"You will!"

"No!"

"Yes!"

"No!"—again not at all sincerely, though Lord Carmyon didn't know it, nor did she want him to know—"I command. I am the sultana."

"I, on the other hand, am a most arrant snob."

"What has that to do with . . . ."

"A great deal. Y'see, being a snob, I've hitched my wagon to a high, glittering star . . . . made up my mind to marry a queen—nothing less will do, nor a queen in exile, but a queen who sits on a throne. So, it's settled, isn't it?"

"Yes," she sighed.

Then, without as much as a blush, she used one of the oldest lines in the vocabulary of woman; a line already mouldy with age that time when Eve said it to Adam immediately after she had asked him to bite into the apple.

She used it, and, which is much more to the point, got away with it:

"O, Freddie dear! You are such a masterful brute!"

"O, no!" he replied; meaning, of course, "O, yes!"

He smiled. For—as any other man, even the most rabid pacifist, would have been in his shoes—he was pleased at the compliment; and to prove that, although a masterful brute, he had not forgotten his chivalry, he kissed her hand.

Then he turned to Mustaffa Bek:

"We'll use your airplane."

"Why, a moment ago you told me that . . ."

"We'll use it—not to go to Paris, but to fly the other way . . ." He pointed east.

"You mean—to Kivastan?" asked Evelyn, excited.

"Exactly. The capital of Kivastan."

"Absurd!" commented Mustaffa Bek. "I heard rumors, and doubtless true rumors, that my father is already there, that he has usurped complete powers, has the country under his thumb, and is pulling Mussolini stuff on the loyalists, the sultana's adherents. Mussolini stuff with a vengeance . . . for you know the old gent's homicidal instincts. What's the idea of entering the lion's den?"

"But look here . . ."

"We won't go all the way by plane, nor exactly advertise our coming. I've a plan . . ."

He elaborated in detail.

"Risky," he wound up. "Tremendously long odds. But shall we try it?"

"Yes!" came the laughing, elated chorus.

For, speaking of himself, Lord Carmyon had spoken for all of them: average, normal, healthy, young, and, of course, conceited; though afterwards Lord Carmyon said that it was not really conceit, but that great thing called human will . . . "We had willed to live, willed to succeed. Ah!—we had a sort of mad idea that the bullet was not run, the sword not forged which could kill us—not yet a while . . . not until we had achieved what we had set out to achieve."

They developed the plan at length, point for point, detail for detail; Evelyn, with her knowledge of country and people, taking an active, constructive share in the discussion. The seven rogues, Gul-dur-Burrum, and Arslan Khan received instructions to proceed in a northeasterly direction, to skirt Chadak and to go to Yanikand, a small town not far from the northern border of Kivastan. There word as to their future movements would reach them by a confidential messenger, identified by the young sultana's seal ring. So they rode away, while the others bent over the soviet flying chart of central Asia and picked out their route, also in a northeasterly direction to avoid Chadak and the settled portions of the steppe.

On both sides of the northern border of Kivastan towered an enormous mountain chain, almost deserted, Evelyn explained, except for a few mountaineers who eked out a lean living and had no dealings with the people of the plains.

"That's the place for us to make our landing," said Lord Carmyon. "Not very safe, but we must do it. Look here, Mustaffa, show me the tricks of this bus of yours. You've been driving her for days and must be tired . . . so I'd like to handle the stick if you don't mind."

"Not in the least . . ."

"But I do mind, mon p'tit!" exclaimed the Gascon. "I mind very much. I've had the dubious pleasure of flying with you. As a pilot you are no ace . . . no, no . . . you are hardly a two-spot!"

But Lord Carmyon had his way and an hour later was at the stick, swinging the great plane cleanly into the sky.

Higher. Even higher.

Yet the strange sensation came to him that the very height brought the steppes and, several hours later, the rolling foothills uncannily near; setting out, as in some delicate, minute mosaic of ancient Florentine craftsmanship, every detail of plain and river, of valley and ridge.

No night flying, he decided. Too dangerous, with the rocks steadily rising into pinnacles.

So shortly before sunset he started climbing down; found a stretch of tableland which would do, though, with thorny trees studding the ground here and there, he had to choose his landing place warily.

He had trouble there. For all at once the motors missed in a series of snapping, explosive hiccoughs, while the speed grew loggy, with the tachometer needle gradually dropping and the propeller slowing its revolutions until the air stream alone kept it moving; and so he was in for one of those thrilling, breathless struggles where a flyer matches his nerve and knowledge—perhaps, too, a little, his fatalism—against an unholy, inimical trinity of wind and air and balking man-created machinery.

"Ah, I knew it!" thought the Gascon, more angry than afraid; and he stammered a quick prayer. A prayer which was not needed, except on general principles. For Lord Carmyon already had succeeded in making the motors hit again by a sudden flushing of gas, and landed in a slow spiral.

OFF again early the next morning.

There were moments, as they reached the heart of the mountains to the north of Kivastan, Carmyon's hands bending sturdily to the task, the motors singing once more sweetly and evenly, when the peaks seemed to press up, straight up, as if trying to catch and impale the plane; other moments when the earth seemed to stand away like a sky of fantastic, multicolored clouds jerked upside down by a Titan's playful fist—unattainable, fabulous, belonging to some incredible world of dreams.

On, though, eating up the miles!

And it was late in the afternoon when, very near the frontier of Kivastan and within a day's march of the fertile, inhabited plains to the south, Lord Carmyon looked for a landing place in the rocky wilderness, and found it in a long, narrow field, wedged in by the welter of pinnacles and snow-clad peaks. So he cut to six hundred and climbed down; dropped precariously across a line of trees twenty feet high; pulled back on the wheel; hit the ground easily on three points, and made it safely enough.

They left the plane and removed their scanty belongings. Then they scouted about in all directions and, as they had hoped, found the land deserted; a darkly brooding land, blind to the sunset, deaf to the winds, and not a sound of living things except, far in the thickness of the frost-rimmed woods, a creaking and rustling as a timber wolf leaped through for his evening kill, and, high up, a brown eagle barking angrily at the coiling gray mist.

It was part of their plan to destroy the airplane so as to do away as much as possible with all signs of how they had got to Kivastan. So, by cutting and drilling holes through the immense tanks that still held many gallons of gas, and with the help of split cartridges and a long powder train, warily, from a distance, they set to work, tossing a twisted resinous torch.

They never forgot the sight.

The night had piled itself up like a dome of deeper black above the black mountains. The torch described a crimson curve; struck the powder train in a shower of golden sparks. The powder hissed, sizzled, popped; the fire skipping across, racing on toward the great plane, toward the throat of the leaking gas tanks. The explosion came suddenly: a short, staccato grumbling, followed by a noise like a colossal cough—an overpowering concussion—and, at the same moment, a violent, tearing splotch of light jumped up against the blind face of the night. The upper darkness seemed to leap back with an immense flash and crash.

Came a gigantic flame—a single flame. It rose straight, with muffled detonations that grew to a vicious crackle and splutter as of machine gun fire while, from the cone of the flame, a lance of sparks stabbed up. The sparks rolled themselves into golden balls, rapidly splitting into trembling, fantastic spikes which floated above the tossing sea of fire, sank into it, mated with it, smashed it into a dullish purple disc.

The disc itself fell. It crashed into the crumbling, roaring, twisted wreckage. It shivered with a thousand flickering tongues, orange and scarlet and dead white. Then an avalanche, a maelstrom of flames, and the great plane burned mournfully, impressively . . . it died there, rather superbly, in the far, wild mountains of central Asia.

That night they rested close to a blazing campfire of pine logs. But the cold was withering, and they were glad when morning came and they started down toward the plains, making forced marches . . . "for it's a gamble who gets to your father first," Lord Carmyon said to Mustaffa Bek, "we, or Capt. Jones."

"And who tells him the more convincing lie," suggested the other. "We, or Capt. Jones."

"I bet on us!"

"Because you don't know the Jones person half as well as I do, my dear old trout!"

IT was nearly noon when they reached the first small town the other side of the Kivastan border; were greeted by the clatter of horses' hoofs; heard the savage rhythm of a Tartar soldier song; saw, not long afterwards, a column of Mervistani troops moving down the street.

First came a squadron of cavalry, a ruffianly-looking lot with accoutrements that smacked of the middle ages. For they had iron helmets topped by peacock feathers and cuirasses of narrow steel leaves threaded with leather thongs, while the officers wore chain mail and even their horses were clothed in armor. The riding gear was a blaze of barbaric splendor, with richly embroidered saddle carpets, throat tassels of scarlet and gold, massive bits and stirrup irons inlaid with silver. The weapons, too, were medieval: spears, ugly, two-edged swords, battle axes, and heavy shields of buffalo hide studded with iron bosses. But the infantry which followed was armed with modern rifles and, Lord Carmyon noticed appreciatively, was smart and clean, efficiently led, and swinging along with a will.

"Top-hole!" he commented. "Wouldn't mind commanding those bullies!"

But he apologized quickly as he heard Evelyn's choked whisper:

"They are Mervistanis—enemies—and this is my country! How would you like to see a regiment of Prussian guards goose-stepping down Piccadilly or . . ."

Suddenly she interrupted herself.

"O!" she gave a cry of horror as an officer lashed out with his knotted nagaika whip at a peaceful, portly bazaar merchant who had not moved out of his way nimbly enough.

A growl rose from the people on the sidewalks; futile, ineffectual curses were hurled at the troopers; a gutter-bred urchin threw a stone, then hurried out of harm's way; more whips lashed out and drew blood. Indeed, it was evident that no love was lost between Mervistanis and Kivastanis, between invaders and townspeople.

"My people!" whispered Evelyn; "my poor people!"

"Come on!" he said, about to turn down a side alley.

For it had been their original intention to pass quickly, after a short rest in some inn, through the town and to buy horses in one of the neighboring villages where there would be fewer bazaars and, by the same token, less gossip to follow in their wake and, as like as not, to precede them. But on the spur of the moment, without consulting the others, Mustaffa Bek drew a line straight through their plan. He pointed at the commander of the Mervistanis, a stout red bearded Tartar with a white turban wound about his iron helmet; exclaimed:

"By Allah! I know that bimbo! Watch me high-hat him!"

"Never mind," urged the Englishman. "Don't be a silly ass! Come along!"

"He was my military instructor when I was knee-high to a grasshopper," Mustaffa Bek continued unheedingly. "Used to devil my young soul—the beast. Well, here's where I devil his, and, incidentally, get us some horses—and jolly good ones."

And, before Lord Carmyon was able to prevent it, the other had stepped squarely in the officer's path, had called him loudly by name:

"Timoor Khan!"

No doubt one reason a tramp is always dirty is that his "work" requires it. The real one, though, is that he has lost his self-respect—or given it a kick.

EARLY SPRING MODES

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—It so often happens that our clothes give out before the modes come out. The result is that we are obliged to take a chance on some established fashion which may or may not prove worthy of our confidence.

This present month represents one of those precarious moments in our history. The spring collections from Paris have not yet been revealed to us on this side and we are therefore completely in the dark as to what a day may bring forth. Yet if ever there was a time when we did not feel scissors-shy, it is during this present year of grace.

And why? Simply because the silhouette offered last autumn represented a comparatively new sentiment. The flare is a recent love and we have not yet had time to wear it out. When you consider this flare in connection with such features as the asymmetric composition you understand why the silhouette presented last autumn is bound to lure the couturiers with promise of unexplored resources.

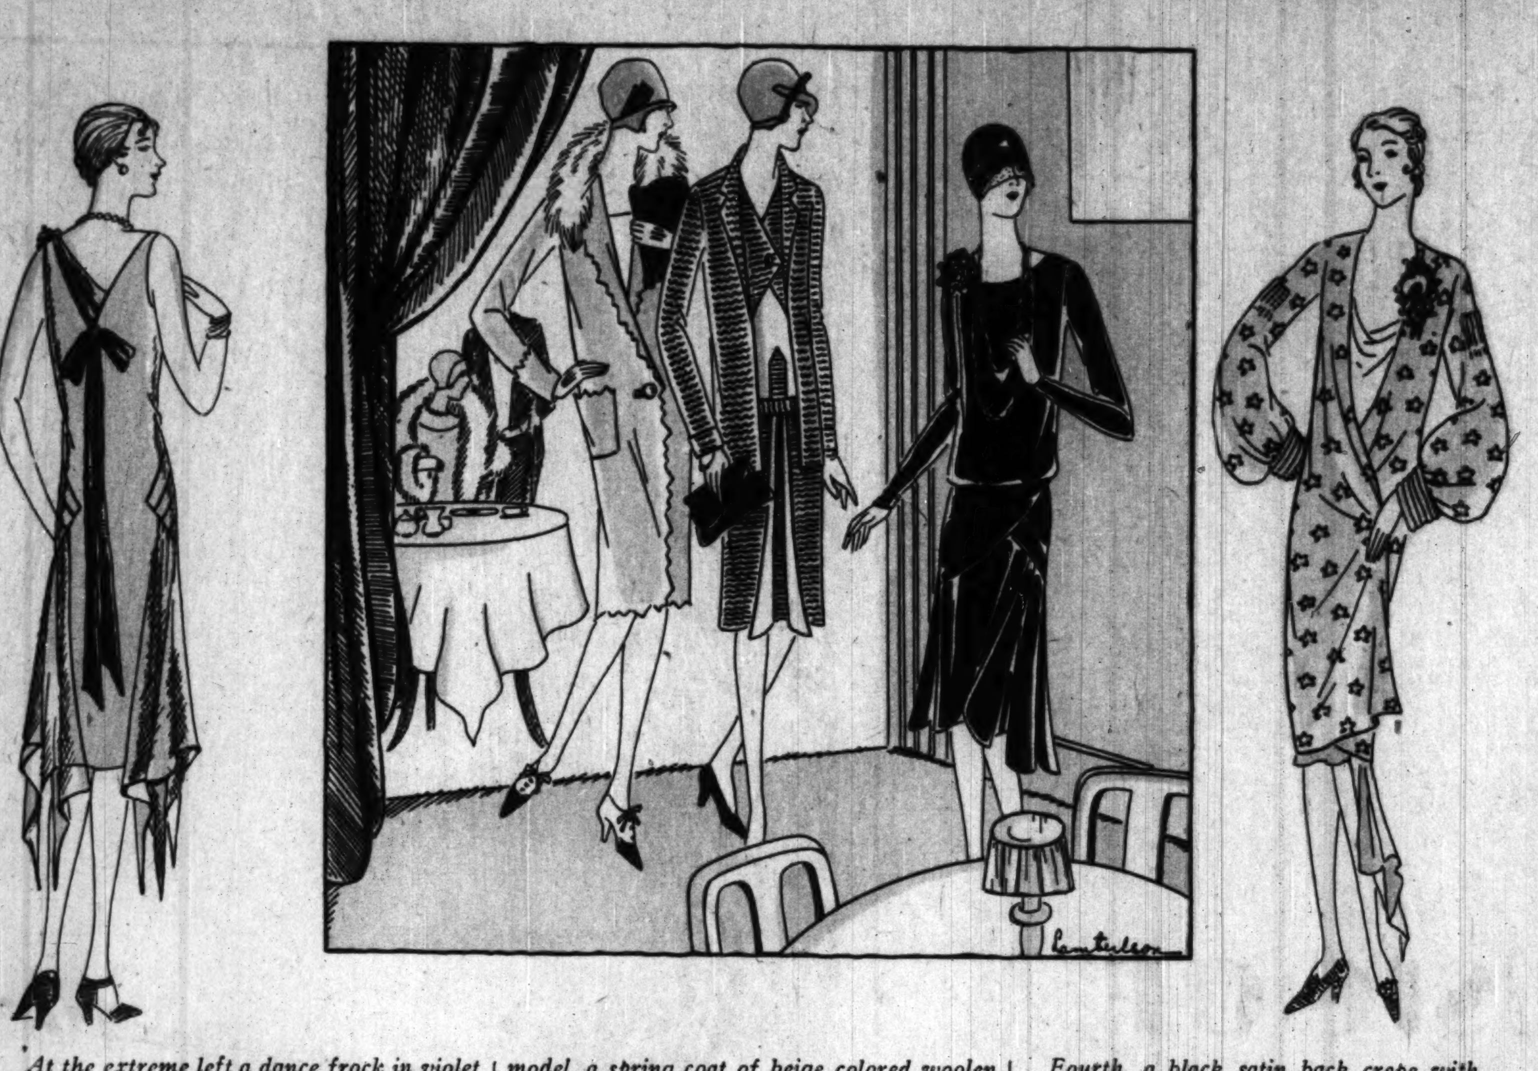
Yes, our Winter's Tale of Fashion is a full-fledged serial and it is bound to be continued throughout the spring. Many are the new adventures in material and workmanship which will doubtless be recorded in these spring chapters, yet is it not probable that the lovely heroine, Miss Flare, and her companion, the one sided cut, will run right through the book?

Now let us take up first the matter of the evening gown. If a winter's wear has reduced your supply to a minimum there is really not much danger connected with picking out a new one right now. In this connection one is reminded of a performance at the Metropolitan this winter when a certain woman of New York society, justly celebrated for her beauty and her taste in dress, appeared in—but, yes—in nothing more nor less than one of those same sheath gowns we have been seeing this many a year.

This particular sheath was made of white georgette and it was beaded in strass. When you come to the trimming you come, of course, to a difference, for the strass arranged in three bands about the hips that mounted upward at the center front—this, together with the allover strass embroidered skirt and the V defined on the front of the corsage by more strass bands—proclaimed that here was no mere leftover gown of another season.

Yet, independent of its trimming, there was the sheath. And this story is intended only to prove that if you are a sheath-minded woman there is not a thing in the world to keep you from your mental bias, for both abroad and on this side of the water there are certain fashionable leaders who always include in their wardrobes one representative of this type. The only way in which these models proclaim their youth is by some such novelty of trimming.

Another model which may be trusted to perpetuate itself in the hearts of the fashionable is some such modified princess style as we have pictured at the left. Now these princess models are much like the sheath ones. They resist any slanderous whisper of, "Why, look at that old frock?" by hitting on development such as the attachment of a drapery or the variation of a neckline to bring them right up to the minute.



At the extreme left a dance frock in violet chiffon and tulle is trimmed with purple velvet ribbon.

Scallops are the feature of the second model, a spring coat of beige colored woolen set off with badger.

In the center, a lavender tweed suit presents some new features.

This frock we have sketched is in violet chiffon combined with violet tulle. That fact of color is in itself noteworthy for, appropriately enough, the violets are coming up now—in both afternoon and evening gowns. First cousins of the Chanel purple which many a smart New York woman has been sponsoring this winter in both velvet hat and costume, these lovely violet tones range from the most delicate lavender to the darker shades.

The tulle draperies are arranged here to fall from diamond shaped pieces of self material treated to fine tucks. They are echoed by folds of the tulle, giving the proper diagonal and one sided effect to both front and back of the décolletage. A cluster of violets on the shoulder and a bow of purple ribbon forming streamers at the back give just the right note of contrast to the light tint of chiffon and tulle.

This model has several communications to make regarding pronounced tendencies of the present mode—those which will probably be carried over for our spring and summer wardrobes. One of these relates to the manner in which the draperies are attached. What infinite variety is encountered at this point! Among the many mannerisms taken on by these draperies one cannot particularize, yet worthy of special mention is the ingenuity displayed by Louise Boulanger. This couturiere is fond of putting on her side panels with deep bands of shirring which are often topped by some point or square of the material running up over the girdle. Such gathered panels of Boulanger constituted, in fact, one of the smartest features of the midseason collections.

A great many of the newest panels and draperies depend for their effect not so much on originality of application as on novelty of cut. Those on the evening gowns are frequently pointed, but this is not enough. They must be counterpointed, too. Thus one of Chanel's midwinter models makes the two pointed draperies of the front of a white moire evening gown much shorter than the two in the back.

Skirts of our daytime frocks are hardly less capricious. Representative of a mode that will probably survive the spring months is the fourth sketch on our page. Here is another of those same black satin-back crêpes that have come out in mob scenes wherever fashionable society gathers together, and its skirt shows the same aspiration toward irregularity of line combined with the effect of a molded hip line which we have been viewing all winter long. In this model the crossing of the girdlelike yoke is interesting, and so, too, is the gathered drapery with its swoop below the hem line.

The neck line of this gown is perfectly plain. Not so, however, are many others which have lately been offered us. This zone offers, in fact, a vulnerable point of attack for those dissatisfied souls who never want to let well enough alone and who are determined to jazz up old V and square and oblong lines with something absolutely new. The passion for scarves which, far from subsiding, has been a feature of recent modes, is responsible for many of these novel neck lines. For example, Martial et Armand do an agile trick with a piece of material cut in one with the frock and coaxed around the front to simulate a round yoke. This is thrown loosely over one shoulder to hang below the waist in the back.

As for the scarf which ties in the center back, this never seems to pall upon even the most faithless characters. As a result, we find as indicative of present sentiment a frock from one of the French ateliers which, made in black crêpe de chine, strikes its most conspicuous note of difference through a scarf of self material which is attached to either shoulder and which ties to form a V neck line in the back. And, of course, the knot is attended by two streamers.

Another potent resource in the hands of the present day designer is a sort of fichulike scarf that is either pinned or adjusted by an ornament at one side of the corsage. By means of this useful little agent anything that is hard or severe about a neck line is rendered absolutely innocent. Picoted at the edges and cascading down the front of the bodice in a single jabot, these fichus are even more graceful in effect than the familiar kerchiefs.

Our last three sketches represent respectively a street coat, a tweed suit, and an evening wrap. The novelty of the first consists in the scallops allotted to the outlying districts of a beige novelty woolen, while that of the suit is sounded by inset and overlapping pieces of self material distinguishing the jacket.

HIGH CHIVALRY - By Achmed Abdullah

"What is it, O pig?" he bellowed. "Another complaint? Another petition?"

"No! A command!"

"Eh?"

"A command! Come here to me!" Mustaffa Bek's voice rose sharply, and Lord Carmyon, listening, watching, marveled how quickly the man's western veneer was cracking, how suddenly the lackadaisical, slangy boulevardier became the oriental despot. "Aye—come here and salaam to your sovereign lord's oldest son!"

Timoor Khan stared for a long time, as though not believing the testimony of his eyes. Then, all at once, a ludicrous change came over him. His jaw dropped. He half climbed, half tumbled out of the saddle. He fell on his knees in the blue, sticky slime of the road, and covered the younger man's hands with smacking, explosive kisses.

"Heaven-Born!" he stammered. "Aywah—Heaven-Born—it cannot be . . ."

"But it evidently is!" replied Mustaffa Bek.

"Forgive me, O my Lord!"

"Yes, yes. Lead the way to a quiet place where we can talk."

He touched the other with his foot. O, yes—he was quite the Asiatic potentate; continued to play his new rôle—or was it his old rôle, or perhaps no rôle at all?—a few minutes later, when he faced the Tartar in a room of an inn. The Three Musketeers were with him. He had introduced them vaguely as "companions of mine." Vaguely, too, had been his reference to Evelyn and Mihr-i-Nisa, who had put on their face veils on entering the town. "Women of my harem," he had called them, with true oriental negligence, and they were now in an adjoining room, listening through the door curtains.

On the way to the inn Lord Carmyon had spoken rapid, whispered words, winding up:

"Of course, you must find out first if Capt. Jones has arrived at the capital."

"I doubt that he has."

"So do I. Still—you must make sure. By the way—how are you going to broach the subject?"

"O—casually."

But it was Timoor Khan himself who spoke of Capt. Jones, saying:

"I cannot understand it, Heaven-Born."

"You understand very little, O man of small head and large feet!" was the retort discourteous. "But what particular thing can't you understand today?"

"You were coming from Europe, with Jones saheb, from the south, traveling through Hindustan. And only this morning message came by drum code from the capital that Jones saheb has not yet arrived at the southern frontier. Yet here you are, to the seeing of my eyes. Why"—he shook his head—"I cannot understand how . . ."

"There is doubtless a reason which, as doubtless, is none of your business." He lowered his voice. "Be pleased to remember that I am my father's son. Be pleased to remember, furthermore, that during my absence my father appointed me regent of Kivastan."

"Yes, O my lord!"

"Listen now! I want fast horses, a couple of racing dromedaries, and a comfortable litter for the women, and reliable guides to show us the quickest way to Kivakand, the capital. One more thing"—in purring accents—"can you be trusted farther than the tip of your crooked nose?"

"I can be trusted implicitly."

"Personally, I doubt it. Still—I shall have to risk it. I am but my father's mouthpiece. In obeying me you are obeying him."

"Indeed, O my lord. And the orders are . . . ?"

"Silence!"

"Silence?"

"Just that. Not a word of my having come here must leave this town by gossiping lips or whispering signal drums. If any of your officers should have recognized me or guessed my identity, swear them to secrecy, or—better yet—throw them in jail. As to yourself—remember that you have a head. Not much of a head—but it's the only one you have. Silence is the order. You will obey, O creature with pig's ears?"

"Yes, heaven-born!"

Mustaffa Bek rose.

"You may kiss my hand!" he said condescendingly.

The other did so repeatedly.

AN hour later they were once more on the move, splendidly mounted, the young sultana and Mihr-i-Nisa in a luxurious litter swinging between two thoroughbred white dromedaries, guides preceding them. Lord Carmyon turned to Mustaffa Bek:

"D'ye think Timoor Khan will keep his mouth shut?"

"Positively!"

"What makes you so sure?"

"If he believes I spoke the truth he will obey, because he's afraid of my father. If he thinks I lied . . ."

"Well . . . ?"

"Then he'll say to himself that I'm engaged in some intrigue against my father. And, not knowing which way the cat will jump, if I'm going to win or lose, he'll straddle the fence for a while—and say nothing."

"My word! You do know psychology!"

"At least oriental psychology."

Then after a while he added with a sigh:

"Speaking about oriental psychology—jolly quaint thing . . ."

"What?"

"Here I'm on my way to pull a frightfully dirty trick on the guv'nor. And yet, in spite of it and in spite of his homicidal mania and all his many other rather disagreeable traits, I'm really no end fond of the old boy . . . shall be tremendously tickled to see him again."

So he rode on, thinking in quite a filial spirit of his father, who just then, in a not very paternal spirit, was thinking of his first-born as he sat in the audience hall of the ancient palace of the sultans of the house of Colin Mor Macdonnell.

And, seeing him there, listening to him, peeping a little way into his tough old soul, he might have reminded you of many a man you know back home in Chicago or Philadelphia or Kalamazoo.

Not externally.

For Sultan Iskandar Bek's outer man would never have passed muster on the golf links or in the Chamber of Commerce, in a gathering of the K. of C. or the K. K. K. For he was very tall, very lean, hook nosed, with a beard dyed blue with indigo to hide the gray hairs, diamond earrings, and dressed in turban and flowing robe of decidedly unbecoming baby pink.

But the inner man! The real man! There he was exactly like certain American business men of the big deals, speed-'em-up, hard-boiled, go-getting variety.

Such an American, having a son of Mustaffa Bek's careless if charming caliber, and supposing he had read enough F. Scott Fitzgerald and tobacco advertisements to jazz up his diction, would have exclaimed:

"A cake eater—that's what Jack's turned out to be! Good Lord—my son—a damned cake eater!"

Sultan Iskandar Bek voiced the identical sentiment in slightly different language:

"By the Prophet—on Him the salute! More to my son's choice it is to comb his beard delicately and perfume it with attar of roses than to show his fine skin to flying lead!"—meaning not war by this allusion, but the fact that, a few days earlier, a Kivastani patriot's bullet had narrowly missed him and that if anybody of his dynasty had to be assassinated why should it be himself?—"Wah—the bitter sending of Fate!"

Again an American business man would have said to his confidential secretary:

"Smith!"

"Yes, sir?"

"I can't be two places at once. I've got to look after the main office."

"Yes, sir."

"So I'm going to give that boy of mine one more chance to make good when he comes back from his Paris joy ride. Maybe a bit of responsibility will be the right medicine. I'll make him manager of our Knoxville branch office—what d'ye say, Smith?"

"Yes, sir."

Similarly, Sultan Iskandar Bek was now addressing Koom Kuli Khan, his grand vizier, telling him that, perhaps, it had been the course of wisdom to appoint Mustaffa Bek regent of Kivastan, the more so as, during the absence of the sultan and most of his troops from Mervistan, certain unruly elements there had begun to make trouble.

"The Russian bear showing his paw?" suggested Koom Kuli Khan.

"It is possible. Possible, too, that presently I shall appeal to western Europe, chiefly the British, against the Russians"—Iskandar Bek smiled thinly; he had been in Paris at the time of the peace conference where, not without profit, he had listened to the late Woodrow Wilson's magnificent idealism—"I shall make a most touching appeal, spread by all the Nazarene newspapers, in the name of a persecuted racial minority."

"Meaning, of course, by persecuted minority, the Kivastanis?" purred the other.

"Meaning, of course, by persecuted minority, myself, O great jester!" laughed the sultan. "I shall return to Mervistan," he added, after a while, "as soon as Mustaffa Bek has proved himself a worthy ruler. His rule must be iron, not velvet. It is the only way."

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK

By Jane Eddington

Cured Meats

THOUGH far from being illustrated in all the works of man, reason is a grand and lovely human attribute, especially when seen actively contributing to man's prime necessities, which too often receive but casual attentions, devoid of reason.

The early man, exercising his gift of speech, must often have discussed with his wife and friends the business and charm of eating. Reason may easily be fired by good essential talk—or this is always a possibility. At any rate, these reasoners must have said one to the other: "Is there not some way in times of plenty to provide for lean days, scarcity, unsatisfied stomach gnawings?"

So, quizzing themselves with comment, they found a way, a great discovery! Some Prometheus-like divinity had by this time given them fire, and they had somehow or other discovered the preservative power of smoke. Perhaps smoked meats came to be just about then, or soon.

Indian women, stripping the carcass of a deer of its long, fibrous collops and hanging this flesh on the limbs of trees bent over a smoky fire of damp leaves, were consciously and reasoningly preparing for the future, while squaws in hot countries depended upon sun drying of meats. In other types of champêtre they cured meat in other ways. In Spain, for instance, they cured pork hams in snow; they also cured the olive and grape, and squeezed the juice out of one and the fat from the other, not only to provide food but to contribute gustatory pleasures.

Note, too, the primitive fisherman, with his quickly spoiling catch of herring. He finds a way to cure them with smoke, and so throw into the talk of man both figures of speech and humor—the trail of the red herring.

Salt curing is something else again. And here let us remark that our grand and lovely attribute called reason is never for discarding the sound products of the past, though unreason has to be reckoned with. Smoke cured foods do their part even to this day in rescuing eaters from hated monotonies, while they give certain gustatory satisfactions.

"THE MUSIC OF WHAT HAPPENS"

LIFE, the Great Conductor, raises his baton and from four corners of the earth comes the great symphony of What Happens . . .

In Russia, Trotsky damns a Tribune correspondent for persistence . . . six million dollars in gleaming gold are shipped to the Argentine . . . Al Smith tells his dry law views . . . Tribune London correspondent cables British flare-up at Coolidge message . . . Chicago council plans more double-decked streets . . . Vienna correspondent cables of new riots . . . Mexico City telephones of Calles invitation to Lindbergh—every political, social and economic happening is there, black on white in your morning Tribune!

A thousand eyes and a thousand ears could not see and hear what the World's Greatest Newspaper brings to you in print every day. Hundreds of men and women, keen, news-hungry, unflagging, patrol the thoroughfares of the universe. Ships, trains, motor cars and 'planes transport them where history is being made. Photographs and word-pictures are flashed to Tribune foreign offices to be hurried across space to the Tribune Tower, monolith of the world's most efficient news agency. Wherever a significant chord is struck, you will find Tribune people recording every note of it . . . The Music of What Happens.

News is the elusive, costly ingredient which makes newspapers great. The World's Greatest Newspaper is so highly regarded by other publishers that 29 leading American newspapers maintain special leased wires into The Tribune office so they may share in Tribune scoops. Some 402 other papers regularly buy Tribune features, art and articles. European newspapers often get European news from The Chicago Tribune quicker than from their own European correspondents. Hundreds of thousands of people see the flashing stride of civilization's advance as it passes before them on Tribune pages. To get world news first, to read it while the echoes of events are still sounding, more than 775,044 people buy The Chicago Tribune each week-day—1,152,481 buy their Tribune every Sunday. Their experience has proved they can trust what they read in The Tribune.

Abraham Lincoln praised The Chicago Tribune's reader influence. The Tribune carried first word of Dewey's victory at Manila to McKinley. The Tribune gave advance copies of the Versailles Treaty to the Senate. In everyday news, too, The Tribune is as far ahead. Forceful, frankly written, The Daily Tribune has more circulation in Chicag and suburbs alone than the total circulation any other Chicago week-day newspaper. In additi The Tribune is the preferred newspaper of 20% t 90% of the families in 1412 cities and tow throughout the Chicago territory.

Because The Tribune does the world's great news-gathering job, it is of incalculable value as newspaper and an advertising medium. The co fidence which The Tribune has built in itself shared by its advertisers. Supreme in its field, Th Tribune has always offered the high quality of advertising columns at a quantity price.

Spring Hats Are as Variable as April Weather

Paris Provides a Charming Model for Every Mood and Every Occasion, and the Keynote Is Again One of Femininity

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Back in the days when bustles were just going out of fashion, when the bicycle and bathing beauties were just coming in, when, in short, the sports idea and the individuality of women was just dawning on the public consciousness, a forerunner of the great Mr. Ziegfeld staged a show where the tenor stepped out behind the footlights in a seaside scene and warbled:

Tall girls, short girls, plump girls, lean girls,
All sorts of dainty girls coming out to bathe.
When you see the little beauts,
Tripping in their bathing suits,
You'll be glad it's summer; you'll be glad that you're alive.

That show was a great success and ever since the sports idea and the individuality of women has been on the increase. It is still on the increase, for when we look at the spring hats the great Parisian modistes are preparing for the women of the world we feel like warbling:

for there is a great deal of individuality, a great deal of variety and immensely varied charm in the newest hats of the Paris creators. This, of course, spells distinction for the individual woman and a fascinating variety in the fashionable gatherings.

It is no longer necessary for every woman to eclipse her most speaking feature—her eyes—under the downturned brim of a little cloche. The eyes and even the eyebrows are left clearly visible in many of the new hats. On the other hand, there are hats that cover the forehead and shade it, hats that leave one eyebrow bare and eclipse the other. There are hats that are brimless front and back but spread quite a brim at either side, or at both sides. There are small hats that are hung with veils like the yashmaks of the Turkish women, hats with veils like a domino mask, hats with diagonal veils that sport one beauty spot of chenille.

There are hats with twists, and tucks and aigrettes, and there are plain round topped hats, clinging to the head like a savant's skull cap. There are some capelines with really spreading brims, and there are hats whose brims have migrated to the top of the head, where they stand erect like a halo.

In short, there are as many types of hats as there are types of women, and then some. Of course, this gives us cause for rejoicing, for each woman will be able not only to find a hat which is flattering to her and suits her particular type of beauty but to find several hats, each different, each becoming, and each expressive of a different mood. Love, they say, lives by contrasts, and charm certainly lives by changes. So that the woman who is careful always to choose hats which basically harmonize with her personality can, still featuring her personality, choose hats which differ considerably among themselves.

To illustrate this theory of varying the hat our artist has sketched five chapeaux, all smart, all correct in the matter of style, for they come from notable Paris creators, but all very different. All of these hats, incidentally, are designed for afternoon wear. The difference between them and sports hats is even greater than their variations among themselves.

The first hat on the left is a creation of Maria Guy, composed of a black felt calotte, skillfully fitted to follow the lines of the head and draped with a soft veil of black tulle. The effect of this hat is feminine and mysterious. The cascades of the veil falling on either side of the head are beautiful in themselves, and they present a tremendous change from the preceding fashions in hats, which have admitted no loose trimming, featuring the look of "decks stripped for action." Naturally a hat of this sort, because of its romantic and decorative quality, is only appropriate to leisurely occasions—a very dignified tea, a serious concert, or even a dinner in town where one is not really dressing in evening clothes. It would be quite inappropriate to a shopping trip, or any other occasion where practicality must hold the center of the stage. It is a hat of poetical suggestion and should be kept for poetical occasions.

The next hat to it, though decidedly a dress hat, is much more worldly in character. The form is of beige bankok, which is circled with a grosgrain ribbon disposed over the crown in very telling pointed motifs. Three tufts of glycerined ostrich, the first dark brown, the second a lighter brown, and the third of beige almost as light as the hat, garnish the left side and sweep down against the neck and the cheek. The definite pattern formed by these trimmings makes this hat effective. Le Monnier, who designed it, has a particular gift for making effective hats.

Another one of definite character is the Reboux model seen at the top of the picture. The aigrettes which form a semi-halo over its left side shade from brown to beige and form a striking contrast with the turquoise colored velvet ribbon which binds them to the closely fitted little crown. This crown is of the broadtail finished felt which Reboux launched recently with great success and, like good broadtail, is black. This hat, like the first, is so dressy, so leisurely in effect that it is best suited to evening or to formal afternoon occasions. It is so decorative, both in form and in color, that it is best matched with luxurious surroundings, with rich furs and the rich silks such as the satins which make our most formal afternoon clothes.

Next, to the right, is a hat of much simpler character, which, however, is imaginative and new. The crown of the hat and the band which fits so smoothly over the brows and neck are of black picot. The twist of black panne velvet which encircles the nape of the neck and traverses the crown is somehow suggestive of the halo coiffures which were worn shortly before we all decided to bob and then to shingle. This idea of reproducing long haired coiffures in the lines of hats is pretty widespread among the Paris milliners and may (some style critics say) herald the return of long hair to fashion. Camille Roger, who created this model, has some other "coiffure" hats in her collection.

The last and most brimful hat is Agnes' new version of the capeline. It is made of sisol fiber, which, like several of the other exotic straws, is attracting the Paris creators, and is trimmed with wide crêpe de Chine ribbon in three tones—beige, red, and blue, which are most effective against the gray-beige tone of the sisol.

Next, a dashing little hat from Le Monnier is founded on a form of beige bankok, trimmed with grosgrain ribbon and three tufts of glycerined ostrich, which shade from brown to beige.

Below, a capeline of natural colored sisol trimmed with crepe de Chine ribbon in red, navy, and beige comes from Agnes and typifies the tendency toward wide hats for summer wear and towards exotic straws.

THE HOME HARMONIOUS

Antiques Are Reproduced So Faithfully, These Days, That One Doesn't Have to Inherit Old Furniture to Have a Colonial Home

BY WILLELLA DE CAMPI.

IN spite of the emphasis on modern art, enthusiasm for old furniture continues to be as keen as ever it has been. There is a certain sense of peacefulness and natural charm about colonial furniture which is dear to the hearts of American men and women. Realizing that it is not possible for the average householder to furnish his house with pieces which have been actually handed down from early colonial days, present-day manufacturers are meeting the demand for this style by making accurate replicas at surprisingly reasonable prices.

A lovely home in one of our suburbs is advantageously furnished throughout with modern reproductions of colonial style. It is a six room house, built of brick, with window sashes painted ivory and doors and shutters a soft, bluish green. In the entrance hall the woodwork is painted French gray and the wall paper shows scenic medallions in tones of green on a pale gray ground. Furniture in the hall consists of a graceful lowboy, with an interesting type of early American mirror hanging above it and a pair of slat back, rush seat chairs. Sidelights are of pewter finish with glass "hurricane" shades. A pewter bowl and pair of candlesticks are placed on the lowboy. The same two toned green carpeting which is used on the stairs covers the floor in the hall.

The living room presents a most delightfully homelike and hospitable atmosphere. Woodwork, doors, and the fireplace mantel are painted French gray. The wall paper, in two tones of gray, shows a semi-visible, allover pattern of willowy leaves. Window draperies are of heavy rayon in spring green finished with finely plaited ruffles of the same material. They are caught back over carved wooden knobs, painted a dull gold. Topping the draperies are narrow wooden cornices, painted dull gold to match the knobs. Glass curtains are of ecru scrim.

At one side of the fireplace, standing at right angle to it, is a love seat upholstered in heavy linen in a pattern of tiny green and ecru squares. This is supplemented by a red lacquer smoking stand and by a wrought iron reading lamp with an octagonal parchment shade. Facing the love seat, at the other side of the fireplace, is a comfortable arm chair done in black wool tapestry, decorated with crewel work in soft colors. A little footstool matches the chair.

A lovely dropleaf butterfly table beside the chair holds an odd wooden box, a few books, and a bright yellow pottery lamp with a plaited parchment shade in the same color. Over the fireplace hangs a convex mirror and on the mantel shelf are two brass urns filled with trailing ivy. Side lights match those in the entrance hall in design, but are of brass finish instead of pewter.

Against the wall across from the fireplace is a sofa upholstered in chocolate brown sprinkled with tiny flowers. As shown in the accompanying illustration, a wing chair done in green rep shares with the sofa a convenient tiptop table. A green pottery lamp with a parchment shade banded in green and decorated with green coin spots, is placed on the table.

Lending a sense of unity to this pleasing conversational group is a fourfold screen covered with a decorative paper and shellacked. A lovely secretary desk in one corner of the room is balanced by a highboy of the same design in the next corner. Giving a final sense of liveableness is a set of shelves filled with interesting books which fits against one wall space.

In the dining room, which is at the other side of the entrance hall, the color scheme is ivory, amethyst and amber. Woodwork and walls are in two tones of ivory. It was considered best to keep the walls plain and light in color, since the room is quite small. At the windows amber casement gauze glass curtains give a soft pleasant glow. Simple over draperies are of amethyst casement silk, finished with a narrow ivory and amethyst edging. An amethyst rug with a small, allover pattern in ivory is used on the floor. Decorative accessories are of amethyst glass. The furniture is maple in a mellow, amber tone.

The kitchen is modern to the last detail in its equipment, but a note of colonial quaintness is introduced by means of cretonne window curtains, showing clusters of old fashioned flowers on a white ground.

Upstairs are three bedrooms and two bathrooms. The main bedroom has ivory woodwork and a delightful flowered wallpaper. At the windows are draperies and valances of rose colored sunfast with narrow, scalloped edges. Ruffle ivory net is used for glass curtains. The furniture is maple. Covers on the twin four post beds match the draperies. Between the beds is a table which holds a green glass lamp with a plaited lemon yellow shade. A dressing table and bench placed between two windows is lighted at night by a pair of tall glass candlestick lamps with square parchment shades, decorated with flower prints.

On a lovely spinet desk is another lamp with a shade of plaited, rose colored book linen. A Windsor chair accompanies the desk. In one corner of the room is a commodious chest of drawers of simple, dignified lines. In another corner is a large wing chair upholstered in flowered glazed chintz. Beside it is a small table which holds an old fashioned sewing box, a bowl of flowers and a lamp with a plain parchment shade, banded in rose green and black. Rose wool chenille rugs are used.

A little girl's room is most cheerfully fitted with painted furniture of colonial design. The woodwork is French gray and a pale gray wall paper shows blue polka dots. All of the furniture is painted robin's egg blue.

Careless Washing Spoils the Hair

If you want beautiful hair, ordinary old time methods of washing will not do. To bring out the real beauty, the hair must be shampooed properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color, and leaves it fresh looking, glossy and bright.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women, everywhere, now use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

It leaves the hair soft, silky and easy to manage and makes it fairly sparkle with new life, gloss and lustre.

A four-ounce bottle lasts for months.

An Old Recipe to Darken Hair

By JANICE RANDALL

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents. Everybody uses this preparation, now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

MORALS IN 1928

It's Called "The Dirty Decade," but Doris Points Out That It's Fairly White to Many People

By Doris Blake.

TO be gay or not to be gay obviously isn't the young woman's problem only. The same under current of recklessness that winds in and out of her thoughts on the value of chastity is heard from the lips of older women as well. Doubts about whether a life lived clean and honorably is the more profitable venture arise in minds that seem orderly enough in every other direction.

It is peculiarly a form of today's thinking. And it is not to be wondered at, either, in persons of little religious or idealistic training.

How much of the disturbance is brought about by the exploiting of women who, in an earlier day, would frankly have been called courtesans or worse, there is no way of telling But I suspect this exploiting is, in some measure, responsible for the jumbled up estimates of virtue now current.

Common Sights.

One sees women of most doubtful character trailing their memoirs across the printed page at so much per word, and rumor usually doubles the estimate. Another (or the same) rides by in a splurge of glory and acclaim. Yet another skillfully maneuvers her way to social recognition and standing in the community through a moneyed marriage. Another reaps the harvest that would have made Pompadour green with envy, using Pompadour's age old method of reaping.

Again, there are circles to be found in the large metropolis where money, perhaps, or talent of one kind or another, excuses conduct and morals that in another era would have earned ostracism from the respectable of the community. Today members of the latter mingle with them freely, smile tolerantly, and welcome them as shining lights at their dinner tables.

With the fences down all around them, is it any wonder women see a bit crookedly when they try to look through them? One's feet need to be firmly planted in the soil of idealism not to feel a slight wavering, now and then.

An Older Woman's Query.

Illustrative of the older woman's experience in a world which laughs at sin as a word long since deleted from its vocabulary is one who signs herself "A Friend."

"I am a widow past 40 and a combination of the old and the new type of woman. Friends kindly tell me I do not look nor act my age, but this is of small import as pertains to my question to you.

"Is it true that in this large city virtue in woman is not considered nearly so sacred, in fact is ignored, in eighty per cent of masculine thoughts? Having a profound appreciation for the best in everything, music, art, literature, I find purity enhances all value for me and while I can and do make allowances for environment I feel even this can be elevated by clean desires.

"A few days ago I heard a person of varied experience say that the woman who has held herself pure was considered a bore and would find herself lonely in the extreme. That men, even the best, regarded such a one as unnatural and tiresome, and that the reward she earned was loneliness to the degree of almost becoming an object of pity. This statement was approved by four of the seven present and these were so called representative high type people.

"I heatedly refused to believe such a statement and on forcefully voicing my beliefs and holding to the hope that I should preserve my ideals always I was told, 'Yes, and while you are a very cultured and attractive woman I would bet a great sum that you are a lonely, lonely one.'

"Do you believe my adhering to high standards will consign me to passing my life without masculine friends? I am jolly, romantic, and well situated to entertain. I belong to an aristocratic old family and am a college graduate.

"I don't need any enlightenment as to what i right and what is wrong. But do you think the general male opinion is as represented above?"

The Other Side.

We'd have to believe that we had come upon decadent days, indeed, were we to accept the idea that men no longer respect chastity in women. And while we have evidence of a slackening of moral fiber among certain classes of the so-called respectable, there is no proof extant that for purposes of family life, at least, man is content with other than the virtues that have won and held him through the ages.

We have a surfeit of pornographic literature, it is true, and the theater may sneer at the virtues and deride the idealist, and art may exalt the ugly and the abnormal, but the percentage of American manhood involved in the cult of decadence is comparatively small, after all. And of all the men of all the countries of the world, the American is the greatest sentimentalist about women. Being such, his ideals are not likely to be upset or changed by the contempt the few may have for virtue.

After all, we are more or less victims of the environment in which we are thrown. With a change of environment we may become part of another people, as in the case, perhaps, in a large metropolis to which one comes a stranger. One's circle is limited. The importance of the utterances of that circle is accepted. Get in with another group and the utterances may be of a diametrically opposed character and uttered with the same finality.

But one never need remain a victim of an ill-chosen set of friends. Even though loneliness may have to be suffered until new contacts are made, it is better to be lonesome for a while than to be in an atmosphere unhealthy for one's own ideals. They are what supports one in the trying hours. People of opposing points of view on the vital things of life are not congenial. Nor would congeniality be earned by the sacrifice of ideals.

A thing we humdrum people forget who read of or see the exaltation of the woman of the town, so to speak, is that loneliness does not escape her. Everybody's lonely, more or less. And the loneliest of all are the lionized when they are left in their cages alone.

A True Incident.

A year or so ago, at Deauville, I had a look into the soul of one of those women who are written about, talked about, fêted by men of a half dozen different countries. She was an American who, by her wits, rose from the humblest surroundings to her present heights of publicity and fame of a sort. In that brief and intimate revelation of hers I saw one who would have exchanged every possession she had for respectability. She said it. She said it with the vehemence that only a woman with years of hurts, affronts, and insults could say it.

There is no question about whether men (men, I mean) have lost their taste for women of high ideals. If some of them have lost their chivalry in action and belief, become cynical, doubtful, isn't it because of the women they are thrown among, women who have adopted lax manners and morals, and inspire the doubt?

If loose conversation, suggestions off color, and free advances are permitted in a certain group—well, aren't eighty per cent of the group going to be infected with the spirit of decadence?

DREAMS.

Have you ever had a dream that come true? If you'll mail us an account of it, we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Dreams, Chicago Tribune.

A Tip Unheeded.

Just before the Dempsey-Tunney fight, I dreamed both Dempsey and Tunney came to my house to play cards. It was agreed that whoever won the card game would win the fight. They played for quite a while and then Tunney got up, saying, "Well, Jack, I'm winner. See, I hold all of the red cards while yours are all black!"

You can imagine my surprise, later, when I heard Tunney had won. Then I realized I should have bet on Tunney. From that time on I made up my mind to take advice from my dreams. G. P.

Tears Mean Sorrow.

I recently had a tragic dream. I thought I was in a strange bedroom. A woman was lying in bed but I did not know who she was, as there was a shadow over her face. Three men were grouped around the bed; a fourth sat huddled in a chair, his head held in his hands, crying. I was standing in the doorway looking in.

I was praying and saying good-by, over and over again. I cried so hard that I woke up shaking with sobs. There were real tears on my cheeks. I could not control my sorrow.

I looked at the clock. It was 9:30 a. m.

Next morning I received news of the death of my good friend. She had died at 10:30 a. m. eastern time. Three doctors had attended her. The man, crying was her husband. J. K.

The Lucky Number.

I shall always believe that dreams are significant because my good luck followed one.

A magazine was offering four prizes for the best short stories, and I decided to submit mine. Every night until the winners were announced I dreamed, and every dream was connected with the number "4." The title of my story was suggested through one of the dreams and I called it "The 400."

When the awards were made I won fourth prize of $40, on the 4th of April, the 4th month. A. S

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

Linen Towels, Finished with Italian Hemstitching, Make Attractive Gifts or Bridge Prizes

TWO-THIRDS of a yard of linen split down the middle of the length will make two of these charming towels. Linen of different colors is used, and a pair of them will make a most attractive gift at any time of year, or a prize for a card game. If you plan to give a pair of these towels, have them match in this way: make one pink towel with blue threads drawn in, and the other blue with pink threads drawn in.

The linen is hemmed by hand down each side, making as narrow a hem as possible. Then across each end an inch wide hem is laid and basted—then hemmed. Then five threads are drawn just above the hem and one-quarter inch above these drawn threads another five threads are drawn.

Now you are ready for the Italian hemstitching, which is done with white, No. 8 embroidery cotton. Both ends of the towel are finished in the same way. Then a colored thread of mercerized floss is drawn through the drawn threads, each side of the hemstitching.

Italian hemstitching is one of the most beautiful of the decorative stitches and isn't difficult to accomplish. The work is done on the right side. Fasten your thread securely at one end of the towel and bring the needle to the right side of the work by passing it under the first four threads. Put the needle back in the same place and this time bring the point out diagonally across, making a backstitch over four threads and ready to start a backstitch over the same four threads in the other drawn space. Make a backstitch over the part of the cluster where the needle has just been brought out.

Now you are ready to proceed, first making the backstitch at the top of the cluster, bringing the needle this time out diagonally and making the other backstitch. It is easy and fascinating work and can be used on countless things.

MOTHER

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhœa, remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.

Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative," and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."

IF BACK HURTS FLUSH KIDNEYS

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's waste and stimulate them to their normal activity.

The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Refresh Your Face as Actresses Do

Other faces grow dull and drawn and tired looking. But not actresses' faces. In spite of late hours, weariness, grease paint, on-creeping years, their skins must remain fresh and youthful.

Yet they have no magic—no secret you may not share. They know a better cleansing method, that is all. A method that dissolves the hidden dust and powder and dried oils; that brings the reviving, youthifying blood tingling to the surface. Not with costly treatments or soaps or creams. But with Calonite—a pure white powder that they apply with a wet wash cloth.

Let your face enjoy this refreshing, too. Feel the drawn tired skin respond—instantly. Feel the gentle bubbling, as dirt you didn't know was there, dissolves. Feel the warm, life-giving blood glowing in your cheeks. Look for the blackheads, the sallowness, the oiliness—all gone! How clear and clean and new your skin looks then. How fresh and young it feels. After a Calonite cleansing you look and feel a new person.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it this very night.

Your money back if not delighted.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

THIS unusual model, pattern No. 3159, is a semi-sports design. The back is straight and in one piece and is crossed at a normal waistline by three narrow belts that fasten on either side of the front panel, giving a snug fit through the hips. The deep V in the front is completed with a vestee and helps to give length to the figure. The pressed plaits at either side of the front panel flare gracefully when walking and give the needed width to the hemline.

Crêpe satin, flat silk crêpe, crêpe Roma, angora jersey and silk twill are suitable fabrics from which to choose for this attractive design.

The vest, collar and sleeve bands will look well cut from a contrasting material. Two pieces are required for each of the parts. After the vest is cut, lay the two pieces together with the right sides facing. Run a basting thread down the exact center and mark the small perforation that shows on the pattern.

Then stitch from the neck down to the perforation each side of this center basting, starting at the neck with a quarter inch seam away from the basting, and run the seams off to nearly nothing at the perforation. Then cut through the basting as far as you have stitched and turn to the right side. Set the vestee in place on the front panel, turning in the panel edges. Stitch close to the turned in edges, first overcasting the seam edges on the wrong side of the dress.

Don't make the sleeve bands too close a measure, for they are not comfortable so; and you must remember that the sleeve fullness that is set into the band takes up a litle from the size of the cuffs. After the three belts have been stitched together, run a tape needle into one end of a belt, fastening through the eye to one edge of the belt. Push the needle through and you will find your belt quickly and easily turned right side out. Before turning a belt to the right side you should make the turning at the belt ends, basting each edge to hold in place. Then, after the belt is turned, basted and pressed, you can easily slip-stitch the edges together so the sewing will not show.

Pattern No. 3162 is for attractive pajamas that young ladies will enjoy wearing. Rayon, printed in colorful floral design, cotton crêpe, voile in pastel tints, cotton broadcloth, and later on for warm weather wear, batiste and cross barred dimity are suitable materials. Crêpe de chine and wash satin are practical and dainty materials for "best" ones.

The pattern is really very easy to understand and use. The main thing to look out for is to make certain that the length from neck to seat is ample, else the garment will not be comfortable. The sleeves may be made long or short, as you prefer.

Pattern No. 3161 is a design that is suitable for everyday occasions, or for afternoon tea or bridge, depending on the choice of materials and colors. The straight one piece back, the front having a circular skirt and separate bodice covered by a fitted hipband, and the slightly bloused bodice with the deep V opening at the front are the main points of this smart frock. There are clusters of tiny tucks on the shoulders that create a becoming ease over the bust. The fronts are underfaced, joined to the collar and rolled back, forming revers.

For everyday wear black crêpe satin with beige georgette vestee or navy blue flat silk crêpe with matching georgette will be chic. For more formal wear black transparent velvet with gold metallic chiffon brocade vestee or a wine red chiffon velvet with flesh colored chiffon vestee will be charming.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

This is leap year. Do you know of any girl who invited a man to leap into matrimony with her? If you'll send us a brief account of the affair, we'll pay $1 if we print it. Address Leap Year Proposals, Chicago Tribune.

A Thrifty Gal.

At our co-ed school leap year arrived and proceeded until May surprisingly free from casualties for the unsuspecting male. And then the most popular man in the senior class was hooked in this wise:

Jim had dashed into class several days after the term had started and had flopped down beside a studious appearing girl in the front row. In the drop quiz that followed he was at a complete loss until the girl adroitly helped him out. [It is easy by the time you reach your senior year.] So he kept his seat in the front row and continued to profit by the knowledge of this classmate, who he thought was merely worshiping at the shrine of his popularity.

When the notebooks were called in a week before school was out, Jim was without even the beginnings of one. He appealed to the girl beside him and she produced a complete notebook. "The price of this notebook," said her firm voice, "is the use of your fraternity pin and all that it implies for one week. I will return it at the end of that period."

Jim looked at her wonderingly. Did she think he was crazy? Hadn't he guarded that pin from prying female fingers for four years? But it was notebook or flunk, and a flunk meant that he could not graduate. And she said it would be for only one week. With a rueful smile he slipped the pin off and as he cautiously slipped it into her hand he said, "I'll be around at 8 if you'll be ready."

That was four years ago. Since then the pin has been supplemented by two rings and much happiness.

Speaking of Altars.

A young woman in our town was much in love with a young man from a neighboring city, but he was bashful and though in love with her he never could get up courage to put the momentous question.

Then leap year came and one Sunday afternoon they were discussing churches when Bob said: "My, you ought to see the lovely altar they've put in our new church!"

Quick as a flash she came back with: "Lead me to it." And he did.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their systems. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Sick Child Is Handicapped.

"I wonder if any of your readers has a high chair, no longer in use, one on wheels which can be lowered. I have an invalid child who can't sit on the floor, and when children come to play with him he is up too high to enjoy them. MRS. G. M."

This poor little fellow is missing a great deal because of his illness, isn't he? If one of you has a chair of this type to give him, I know it won't be so hard on him and he'll be a lot happier.

◆

Radio Would Bring Joy.

"I am writing to you in behalf of the boys in ward C-16 at this sanitarium. We had a radio out here but the man it belonged to has left and you don't know how much we miss it. Sally, do you think you could find another for us? A. B."

Hours drag into endless monotony when one must lie abed with little or no diversion. Wouldn't you like to create a little happiness for the boys of C-16 by presenting them with that radio you are about to discard?

◆

Family Is Destitute.

"In the northern part of Wisconsin lives a family, consisting of mother, father and 11 children. The father has tuberculosis and the mother, just recovering from a serious illness is able to do almost nothing for her children. Often they have nothing to eat. They are running around barefooted.

"If your readers would lend this family a little assistance by sending old clothes, it would help to relieve the suffering. The mother wears size 46 and shoes, 5½ or 6; the oldest daughter, 18, wears size 16 and shoes, size 4½; there are two girls 11 and 12, and boys, 13, 14, and 15.

"I do not know the exact ages of the younger children, but they range from 1 to 15. I am getting a box ready for them and would appreciate having any articles of clothing for it." "J. S."

Surely this is a destitute family whose exposure to the ravages of winter for lack of warm clothing may do them the utmost harm. Won't you help them guard against this by sending any discarded clothing you can?

How to Make a Homemade Airplane Model Loop the Loop

Expert Explains Method of Improving Flying Qualities

This is the second of The Tribune's series of airplane model articles. The author, Merrill Hamburg, an expert on model aviation, will undertake to answer all questions on plane construction. Address him at the American building, Lafayette boulevard at Second, Detroit, Mich.

By Merrill Hamburg.

FIG. III

Fig. I. shows how to put washin and washout into the wings. Fig. II. shows the steps in constructing cone wheels for the baby R. O. G. Fig. III. illustrates the correct position of the propeller shaft and thrust bearing. Good tips, here, for improving that R. O. G.!

MODEL aviators can have a world of fun with their Baby R. O. G.'s, the construction of which was described last week, if they will follow the suggestions in this article. The longer one works with the R. O. G. the more amazed will one be at its flying qualities.

The first step is to build a plane that will give the longest possible flight. Any well built R. O. G. should do 30 seconds, and the best will exceed 50. If the plane built last week will not equal the first of these marks, take it back to the work bench and see if it can't be improved. The kit containing the necessary balsa wood, metal parts, tissue, cement, and banana oil needed to build this model can be had by sending 65 cents to Merrill Hamburg, secretary of the Airplane Model League of America, American building, corner Second and Lafayette boulevards, Detroit, Mich.

Most beginners make their propellers too heavy. If the ship has a tendency to nose-dive no matter how far forward the wings are set, the chances are it needs a lighter propeller. The maximum thickness should not be more than 1-16 inch at the hub, and 1-32 for each blade. Sand the prop down to these dimensions. Then hold it up to the window. It should be so thin that the light will show faintly through. Now try gliding the plane from the hand to the floor, and notice that it no longer has that strong tendency to nose-dive.

Perhaps the propeller shaft has a tendency to strike the fuselage stick and thus slow up the propeller so much that the plane will not fly. In that case, more than likely the propeller shaft isn't straight. Examine Fig. III. on the diagram. This shows that the shaft should be perfectly straight and should clear the fuselage stick by enough margin so that there's no danger of the two striking. Notice, too, how the thrust bearing is bent. Compare the plane with the drawing, and see what corrections you can make.

The Trouble Shooter.

Many beginners make the error of powering their ships with a single strand rubber motor. This isn't strong enough to pull the ship satisfactorily. Make a double strand motor by taking a length of rubber a little more than twice as long as the distance from the front hook to the rear hook, doubling it, and tying the loose ends in a square knot. This knot should be at the rear end of the plane—not the front! If it's at the front it will strike the fuselage stick when it's turning.

Perhaps the motor catches on the "can" and won't unwind. The "can" is a little piano wire loop on the middle of the motor stick. Its purpose is to prevent the motor from bending the stick into a bow. If the rubber catches on it in unwinding the can isn't high enough. Bend another one, a little larger, and the motor troubles will be over.

One great reason for short flight is the weight of the plane. Perhaps, throughout, the parts have been made too heavy. In that case there's just one thing to do—build another Baby R. O. G., following the dimensions in the drawing exactly. The wing spars should be just 3-32 inch wide by 1-32 thick. The motor stick should be just 1-16 inch across the top and ¼ inch from top to bottom. Bamboo ribs and tips should be just 1-32 inch square. Build the parts to these sizes and the whole plane will weigh less than 1-10 of an ounce. And it will make a long flight.

Some builders have difficulty getting the proper "set" to their wings. Both halves of the wing should form exactly the same angle with the tail surface. If the wings are tilting off at an angle the plane is going to fly erratically. The way to get the right set—the right balance—on the wing is to adjust the wing clips. Inspect them closely. If they're not square the wing won't be properly set. In that case, take off the clips, rebend them, and put them back on. Once the wing is properly balanced the Baby R. O. G. will fly steadily.

A number of boys are writing in to ask if the wings are covered on both sides. The answer is "no." The wings are covered on the top only, and the tail surfaces on the bottom only.

Cone Shaped Wheels.

Last week's drawing shows the R. O. G. equipped with flat fibre or cardboard wheels. Many boys are now building cone shaped wheels. Fig. II shows how to do this. Simply cut small disks out of heavy drawing paper—make them any size desired—and remove a V-shaped segment. This leaves the disks resembling a pie with one piece cut out. Bring the edges together where the segment was removed, and glue them together. This gives two flattish cones.

At this point small brass washers may be glued at the inside centers of the cones. These will act as bearings for the axles. These washers should not be larger than ⅛ inch in diameter, with a hole the size a phonograph needle will punch. Glue together the edges of the two cones for the completed wheels. They're light and serviceable.

If the plane has a tendency to roll over on its back, or to turn in too small a circle, consult Fig. I. in the drawing. It shows how to correct this.

First of all, though, the builder should know what causes his ship to roll over. The answer is—the turning movement of the propeller. Propellers are called "right hand" or "left hand" according to the direction in which they turn. One may imagine oneself sitting in the cockpit, looking forward at the prop. If it turns to the right, or clockwise, it's a right hand prop. If it turns to the left, it's a left hand. The Baby R. O. G. has a right hand prop.

Washin and Washout.

The prop, whirling swiftly to the right, tends to throw the plane to the left and even to turn it over on its back. This turning force is called "torque."

The rudder, or fin, acting like the keel of a ship, helps correct this tendency, but many builders find that the fin won't do the entire job. Their planes still flop over, or else turn in too sharp a circle. Fig. I. shows the most effective way to correct for the torque.

This drawing pictures the wing as one would see it from a point directly behind it. The heavy edge is the trailing edge. At the left the leading edge is bent up. That's called "washin." Washin gives the left half of the wing more lift, because it allows the rush of air to strike underneath and push up on the wing. And, with the left side of the wing lifting more, the plane no longer will have the tendency to tilt to the left.

Now notice the right half of the wing. The leading edge is depressed. This is called "washout." "Washout" reduces the lift on that side of the wing. This further helps correct the tendency of the plane to tilt to the left.

Experiment with washin and washout. Give the wing washin and washout by twisting it in the hands so that one leading edge will be lifted up and the other depressed. By this means, and by bending the rudder, one may make one's ship fly in a straight line, turn in a large circle either right or left, or turn almost on a dime. It's great fun, and it teaches many of the principles of aeronautics embodied in the flying of big ships.

Looping the Loop.

Getting the R. O. G. to loop the loop is an art. Set the wing forward so that the plane will climb rapidly. Then wind up the motor until it shows a double row of knots. (Lots of power is needed for this maneuver.) Release the plane. If the wing is set right, it will climb almost straight up, turn over on its back, swoop down, and start to climb again. Perhaps it will do two loops! Perhaps it will loop once and then barrel-roll! One can't predict the maneuvers this little ship will go through if it is given enough power and the wing is set so it will climb.

If one can make his ship loop more than twice, he's a master builder. One might hold a "loop the loop" contest. The boy whose plane does the most perfect loop, or loops the greatest number of times, wins.

More good fun is the altitude contest. Set the wings to climb, wind up the motor, and see how fast the ship can reach the ceiling. Time each flight with a stop-watch. The best climber wins.

Even old time model aviators enjoy working on the Baby R. O. G. It's such a willing performer that they're continually making new ones and experimenting with them.

Stick with your R. O. G.

Make the upper and lower halves of the box in one piece, using 6 inch boards for the sides. Then draw a line 4 inches from bottom and cut the box in two along this line with a bench saw, thus insuring a perfect fit between the halves. Use small brass hinges to fasten the cover and a hasp to keep it shut. The compartments are for spare parts, extra rubber, motors, propellers, etc.

A Few Tips for Plane Builders

Care and patience are the two qualities one must have to bend the piano wire for model airplanes. Piano wire is tempered steel—it must be made to behave! A pair of ordinary pliers are good enough to bend angles in piano wire, but round-nosed pliers are needed for bending curves. Bend the wire just as you bend soft metal wire, but remember to allow for the spring. Piano wire tends to recover its original shape—it must be sent too far before it will submit to staying bent in the form you want it. It's a little difficult at first, naturally. But a little patience and a little practice will make it easy.

◆

Before you start building the model airplanes being described in THE TRIBUNE, have that knife sharp! It ought to be at least sharp enough to slice off a strip from a newspaper page without wrinkling or tearing. If your blade isn't keen, sooner or later you're going to put just a little too much pressure on your propeller or your spars. And just a little too much when you're carving balsa means that you'll have to try over again. A razor edge, of course, demands extra care in handling the knife. You can't slash away at balsa as you do when you sharpen a pencil, for one good stroke will cleave straight through. And you'll need to watch your blade so you won't take a piece of finger along with the wood! Give your knife a steady push, drawing the blade across the wood slightly to help it cut, and you'll have no trouble. Two cautions are worth remembering. Don't carve with the edge of the blade toward you—that's putting yourself in danger. And close the blade when you aren't using your knife—an open blade endangers others.

The indoor record duration of flight for model airplanes is 173 seconds, while the outdoor record is 10 minutes 14 seconds. Both records have been bettered unofficially.

BEAUTY IN HOUSEWORK

by Antoinette Donnelly

The Daily Tasks Every Housewife Encounters May Serve as Steps Up on the Ladder of Pulchritude

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.] — Housewives are not women apart from their sisters, so far as the desire to be beautiful and charming is concerned. But because they lack the immediate competitive inspiration one business girl against another in the same office or shop inspires, the woman at home has to check up on herself frequently to see she is not slipping.

Of the two, the home or the business woman, the home person has more opportunity to look after herself than the other. Even though her duties are many with children to look after, a house and a man, she can make a number of her household duties serve as beauty movements.

On the other hand, her greatest danger lies in the lack of incentive which nothing inspires in a woman like competition. She has her man corralled and, so far, has no reason to worry about his affections. She has the incessant home and children's demands to excuse her lack of interest in her looks if she is the kind of woman willing to avail herself of alibis.

The woman in business cannot slump a single day if her ambition is for advancement or for a husband, either one of which desires is the goal of every worker. She sees with her own eyes that it is the smart looking worker who is picked for promotion or for marriage.

This lack of competitive inspiration in the housewife's life which she may become smugly content about is a rather insidious poison, when you come right down to it. No woman can feel so secure about the permanency of her postion that she is privileged, because of other virtues, to neglect the one of her own personal upkeep.

Competition Is a Spur.

Why do you suppose stage women devote time religiously to maintaining youth and beauty? Because there is that crop of younger actresses barking at their heels and ready to gobble up the honors once the older one loses the impetus to keep up. Competition, in other words—than which there is no better driving force for most of us women. The popular theme of the homebody resorting to rejuvenating courses in the face of a rival again carries the lesson of the need of the competitive angle.

Not, however, that we are advocating a mythical rival being set up in effigy around the house—but a sharp checkup every now and then on oneself is what we do advocate. Compare yourself with women of your own age or near it, women in your own walk of life, and women in other vocations. You may find, as many of you will, that you look as young or younger than most of them. If anything ought to be conducive to feminine beauty it is love and a happy home.

The effect of love on the female countenance has every other beauty potion beaten by a thousand points. In order to preserve love, one also has to preserve that beaming countenance, the neat figures and the charms that captivated in the first place.

I say women at home have more opportunity to look after themselves, even with children. Not, of course, the poor slave of a woman whose day is a sixteen-hour one of unremitting labor. There are such women. But the majority of wives and mothers with the limited families and modern working facilities aren't overburdened with either cares of house or youngsters.

System Is Necessary.

It's all in getting system into one's day, having so many minutes for this and that, having time to get outdoors, to cream the face and brush the hair, and manicure the nails. And what is of vital importance to the youth of a woman is allowing time for mental growth. This, too, she can arrange on her system budget.

I know women who have time for their bridge teas, time for entertaining, time for movies and other pleasures, but who say they never have time to read a paper or magazine on account of their children or their homes. The bridge teas and the entertaining and the movies are all good features, but the mind has to be fed or it stays undeveloped. It has to chew on hard foods just as the teeth have to. By hard mental foods I mean reading that requires concentration and study, not just the cheap novel or the sensational crime news of the day.

The woman at home has more time for the leisurely bath after the noon meal work is cleared away. For a half hour following, she may attend all the small duties of personal care, such as the thorough face cleansing and the manicuring, and so on.

In the Day's Work.

Her great advantage, however, is the opportunity to move around continually during her day, and to make many of her household tasks serve as exercises to keep her figure young. She can prance all over the house if she has a mind to. She can turn on a radio or talking machine and do a certain amount of her work to music, or she can give an imitation of the Charleston or any steps she pleases once the rest of the family is out of the way. And while it may sound like a jazz age remedy to some women, I know one who tells me when she feels she is getting out of sorts she puts on a dance record and "shuffles it off," to use her own expression.

If you're too dignified [which isn't a good thing to encourage, either, for youth's sake], you can still sneak a great deal of exercises into a day's work. You can learn to bend from the waist, with straight stiff knees, when you have to pick up something off the floor, or when you look in the oven or reach to your lowest drawer. When you have to reach up on shelves, you can use both hands, or each one alternately, and treat yourself to a stretching exercise that will help keep your abdomen flat and the chest high.

Bedmaking, cleaning, dusting are all excellent movements for the muscles of the body.

Then, too, in a place where you're boss you can work in rooms that are properly ventilated. Kitchen, bedroom, living room may be kept at the healthiest temperature without interference or requests from others. If you grow accustomed to working in drafts of pure air you'll eliminate headaches, blues, tears, temperament, or what have you?

The poisonous air breathed over and over again by women who will go a day, two, or three days without venturing outside of their homes is responsible not only for beauty ills but for domestic ones as well. You can't be agreeable and sweet if you're drowsy and heavy. Depression comes in when fresh air is kept out. A brisk walk outdoors has been known to blow away the makings of bad quarrels in households. The effect of a good stiff breeze is to blow a grievance clean out of the head. The woman in the home has a tendency to dwell upon her grievances unduly. Her escape is to give them an airing, and not in a neighbor's ear, either.

For or Against Beauty.

All of these things have a direct influence on a woman's looks. Nothing destroys beauty so quickly as fits of the blues or nursing wrongs, real or fancied.

Then there is the item of water drinking, so readily available to the woman at home. To keep skin and body clear and clean there is nothing like the daily allotment of from six to eight glasses. The poisons that clutter up the mind are often nothing more than the self-poisoning that comes from failure of the excretory system to function regularly and efficiently.

ISN'T IT ODD?

By William Atherton DuPuy.

ISN'T it odd that in the Caucasus mountains where Turkey touches Russia, between the Black and Caspian seas in the west of Asia, there should be whole mountain sides in the spring that are white with the blossoms of apple trees that grow wild.

Yet when scientists take the back track they find that this is the native home of the apple of commerce which, year by year, contributes twice as much food to the people of the United States as does any other fruit.

There are wild apples growing all around the world in temperate zones, close relatives of the crab apple and not very good to eat. But here in the Caucasus there grows a wild apple that is sweet. It is the granddaddy of all those apples that come to market in boxes in New York, San Francisco, and Kalamazoo. These all tie back to this region in the Near East.

The journey of those apples to market began some 10,000 years ago. At that time there lived in the Caucasus region certain tribes of white people that were destined to spread west and plant nations that would rule the world. They were the Aryans, sometimes called Caucasians from these same mountains. They found this sweet apple in the woods and planted its seeds about their homes. In doing so they established some of the first orchards our ancestors ever knew.

Later the Aryans moved west. When they did so they took seeds from the best of their sweet apple trees and when they stopped again, they planted them. They might wait a hundred or a thousand years and move on again. Again they would select the best of the apple seed to take with them. Finally they reached the Atlantic, spread out and overran Europe. Apple trees likewise, grandchildren of the flowering forests of the Caucasus, found homes throughout the colder countries of all that continent.

Finally Europeans crossed the Atlantic and planted colonies. Wherever they went this apple that had been companion of the race in its wanderings soon found a place and began to contribute to the comfort of its sponsors. It has a home in all vigorous climates to which Aryans have gone. They have pushed it to the west until now it is becoming popular in Japan where, a little while ago, it was unknown. It has not as yet got much hold in China. In another generation, however, it is probable that it will have pushed on to the west until it will have come back to the Caucasus, much improved by the journey it will have made.

Little Martha is much afraid of dogs, and equally ashamed of this fear, as her parents have tried in every way to cure her of it.

The other day, while walking with her father, they passed a large police dog. The dog paid no attention to them, and Martha did not say a word, but clung to her father's hand and crowded up as close to him as possible. No comment was made, and presently she remarked in a most apologetic and wheedling voice, "Daddy, I wasn't afraid of that dog. I just held on to your hand tight, and snuggled up close because I love you." AUNT M.

Edith and Enid were twins, and both liked to go to Aunt Emma's because she always gave them nice things to eat. One day they were calling on their aunt, and, although a large basket of oranges graced the sideboard, Aunt Emma seemed to have forgotten them.

Presently Edith remarked, "I smell oranges."

Aunt Emma thought she would have some fun, and said, "Oranges! It's odd that you should smell oranges. Are you sure about that?"

Whereupon Enid, the other twin, exclaimed, very earnestly, "O, yes, Aunt Emma; she's sure, all right. I've never knowed Edith's smell to make a mistake." H. G.

I Eat Cabbage and Fried Potatoes Now —No Stomach Gas

"ONLY A FEW months ago," says Mrs. O. E. Hylton, Lansing, Kans., "it was impossible for me to eat many things I liked. After eating beans or cabbage I would suffer terribly from stomach gas. I even thought my heart was affected and I had such bad headaches. Then I got a bottle of Adlerika. From the first spoonful I felt better and the distress after eating left. Now I dare eat fried potatoes, cabbage, doughnuts and other foods I like. It is a pleasure again to play with and care for my two children and look after cooking and cleaning. My friends all notice how much happier I am. I am certainly grateful for Adlerika."

Quick Action Surprises

AS GENTLY and naturally as taking a drink of water, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels, bringing immediate relief from gas bloating, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation.

The very FIRST dose of Adlerika often brings out astonishing amounts of old waste matter from the intestinal canal. This poisonous matter may have been in the intestines a long time, causing gas, headache, sleeplessness and many other symptoms. A treatment of a few weeks with Adlerika often corrects chronic constipation and intestinal stasis, so that just a small dose, now and then, keeps the intestines and stomach in a most satisfactory condition.

What Doctors Say

DR. H. LOUIS SHOUB, B. Sc., well-known New York pathologist, after laboratory tests on living subjects, states: "Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika, because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. J. Lancaster, a physician of over a quarter century's active experience, makes this statement: "In the treatment of gastro-intestinal disorders, (where thorough evacuation is indicated), Adlerika has no equal."

Dr. Carl Weschcke, a graduate of the world-famous medical University of Heidelberg, Germany, in his private practice, first perfected the intestinal cleanser and carminative now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of a specially processed saline intestinal evacuant with buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action.

Adlerika, unlike most other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowels. It is recognized by many physicians as the one dependable remedy for gas, intestinal stasis and chronic constipation, or whenever real intestinal cleansing is needed.

Even if your bowels move every day, Adlerika may surprise you by bringing out poisonous, gas-forming matter which you would never believe was in your system.

In just a single month, over one thousand men and women wrote that they obtained wonderful relief from even a short treatment with Adlerika. Many of them said that now, after all other treatments and medicines had failed, they are at last rid of gas, indigestion, sour stomach, sleeplessness, nervousness or other trouble due in their cases to intestinal stasis. And now, these folks say, they are again able to eat and enjoy the foods they like.

No matter what you have tried for the bowels and stomach, Adlerika will surprise you.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Cured Pork Travels Distances Comparable to That from China to Peru.

By Jane Eddington

CURED pork is a great world staple. Great hams and sides of bacon, naturally, are the most famed pieces as travelers, but pieces of smoked jowl, and smoked blade, and bits of smoked shank get about from state to state, too, and can be made into much more attractive dishes than most people guess. Whole piles of them may be seen in the meat sections of some of our large department stores. The little smoked hock at twelve cents a pound, if as carefully cooked as the remnant hock which the butcher sells, has quite amazing possibilities. Cooked and sliced thin and put into a cream sauce to be served on toast, it is more than a fair rival of smoked beef.

But the de luxe hams get major attention, as they have ever since the hams of Westphalia, or Prague, or Bayonne, or York, have triumphed in the cookery of the greatest chefs, who will tell us, perhaps, that the Bohemian or Prague ham is best for warm dishes and that of York for cold. And when we say cold dish, we are saying a volume about the use of cold ham in menus in common service, such as that of the sandwich. And while we are mentioning famously named hams we should always mention the Virginia hams, those of Smithfield especially, which have traveled to Europe to be served in the entertaining of the guests of an ambassador.

Hard Task for Beginner.

The beginner who would learn hams has no small task to face, and one of the first things to know is that there are hams and hams. There is even the cottage ham, sometimes called the California ham, which is smoked pork shoulder, or in some cases seems to be a piece of boneless smoked pork and somtimes pork butts. And there are the "sweetmeats." The small pieces of smoked pork, perhaps, should not be mentioned in the same breath as hams which weigh from twelve to sixteen pounds, but the one who knows how to use them should not despise the economy of doing so. With good cooking and seasoning they may give us something pleasanter to eat than will a high grade ham imperfectly cooked.

Some of us have just had experience with holiday hams, which the people who put them out give very nice attention to, choosing the uncured product with great care, treating it and smoking it so that the product is compact and almost the least mussy piece of meat imaginable, and finally wrapping it in a piece of stocking net and then in suitable parchmentlike paper, and finally in a fancy paper on which is printed many a Christmas symbol. We had such a ham that had seven separate wrappings so as to make it seem like a veritable treasure when one came to it.

There is almost romance about the business of the smoking of hams, and those who cure them, in their advertising literature will tell us, perhaps, that the smoke is from the good hickory sticks or, perhaps, as of old, from the corn cob. We believe the old Virginia hams were always cured with the smoke from corn cobs, but we may be mistaken in this. However, in some parts of our country the fire in the "smoke houses" had just this fuel. We know if we go back into the history of the smoking of hams that the fire on the hearth of the humble home produced the smoke which gave the ham its keeping powers. In Ireland it was the smoke of the peat, and so-called Irish bacon has even set a name to swear by. The bacon in this sense, as we understand it, included any sort of smoked pork.

On Not Soaking Hams.

The pork packers of the present urge that their hams shall not be soaked before they are cooked. They urge that the type of mild curing which the hams have received makes the soaking unnecessary. We are not convinced that they are wholly right, because some of the best hams we have known anything about were really a bit too salty, even when some treatment had been given them to freshen, and, of course, there is another reason for soaking the ham, especially if it should be a Virginia ham, other than to get the salt out of it. Hams have dried up somewhat in the course of the curing, or as they aged, and they need to have some water put back into them. It would take a good deal of work and experiment to prove how much, but we are sure they should be thoroughly cleaned before they are soaked.

Too many of the old recipes directed the soaking and then the scraping, and washing, and all. We think the latter operation should come first, even perhaps the paring of the ham to remove smoky and weathered edges. Of course, the weathered edges are not very noticeable on hams that are beautifully wrapped and kept in the paper until they are cooked. When hams are not wrapped, the edges do need to be pared off, because they are dirty as well as smoky.

Perhaps the old question about soaking the ham has a good deal to do with the type of cooking given it. When the cook is an accomplished one, if the soaking is done it will be of a more reasonable type than when the opposite is true. At any rate, we are convinced that some hams need to have the salt on the surface washed or soaked off, but there is no need to soak them in water till they are drenched to the core.

Baking Ham.

There are at least two ways of baking ham. The more common one is to boil it first and then finish it in the oven. If there is any danger of the ham being too salty this is a method to recommend, but one will not get the same sort of a product as when the ham is baked in a cover of batter.

A very fine cold product can be secured by covering a fine piece of ham with a batter of flour and water and baking it a reasonable time, the time depending on the size of the ham and the kind of an oven used. We would not recommend this to serve hot, but when it is cold it can be cut in transparently thin slices which are handsome and palatable if the the ham has been made immaculate and carefully dried before the batter is put over it to cover it completely every inch. The fire must not be too hot or otherwise the batter will spread and break and the juices of the ham will be cooked out. On the other hand, it requires a 350 degree or a somewhat higher heat to penetrate the ham and cook it thoroughly.

Baked Ham with Currant Jelly.

Even delicatessen ham heated up in a mixture of melted butter and currant jelly may be good if the slices are thin enough, but fine baked ham cut as as possible and heated up in such combination is about as pretty a dish of meat as one could imagine. The fat of the baked ham is perfectly palatable even without the currant jelly, but with the bit of jelly it may be called delicious.

A little bit of pepper or some similar seasoning may be added to the melted butter and melted jelly and the whole should be turned on a hot dish and served. We recommend this in combination with the new potatoes of winter time, boiled.

Fried Ham.

We might distinguish between fried raw ham and fried cooked ham by calling the latter frizzled. To fry a slice of raw ham, preferably a thin one, melt a tablespoon of butter or two, if you like, in the frying pan and when the pan is hot enough so that the cold slice of ham will hiss when put into it, add it immediately and lower the flame under the pan.

Cook a thin slice slowly for eight minutes to a side. Ham must be cooked thoroughly like any other pork and this cannot be done with too hot a fire. That is why it is best to use butter for the fat in the pan, because it burns more easily than any other fat. If any one can fry ham without darkening the butter, that one will cook the meat to perfection, not drying it to unwholesomeness nor stiffening it so that it is almost unpalatable.

When a slice of ham is turned, if the cooking seems slow, raise the flame for a minute. The warning is, do not keep the pan so hot that it would have to be turned or taken up too soon. In turning a slice of ham with a fat edge, cut the edge first carefully if it has curled, as it probably will, so that it will lie flat. Remember that the surface of a slice of cured ham does not have to be seared as that of uncured meats does. The curing has dried up the juices to some extent and it is important to cook it in such a way as not to dry them out further.

The butter not only controls the heat to some extent, but it flavors the ham acceptably. The compound of fat in the pan when a slice is fried is excellent for seasoning if it is not used for other frying, but there should not be a single black fleck in the pan. If greens, like spinach, have been cooked to go with the ham, this fat may be used for seasoning them.

Combinations with Ham.

H. G. Wells, in his novel, "The Passionate Friends," makes a certain Lady Viping say: "Ham, I told him no ham—and now I remember—I like ham, or rather I like spinach. I forgot the spinach. One has the ham for the spinach, don't you think?" Other people in England may have the ham for the spinach, but in America we commonly reverse that order of preference, especially if the ham is served hot.

Boiled ham, the shanks in particular, is served with sauerkraut. Boiled ham may have many sorts of fruit sauces, and today it is frequently served with pineapple, and a piece of hot boiled ham is also excellent with prunes. Ham and eggs have been considered a highly gustatory combination but the dietitian is not enthusiastic about the combination.

Frizzling Cooked Hams.

Frizzling or frying cooked ham usually livens up, or puts snap into it. Therefore people who must buy their ham cooked do well to give it this treatment. In frying it various seasonings may be added to the butter in which it is frizzling and we have mentioned one in describing ham with current jelly. Another excellent seasoning is mayonnaise. A tablespoon of highly seasoned mayonnaise with a little melted butter gives frizzled ham an excellent flavor. In the mixture of butter and seasoning, heat the ham gently and turn it. It should be cooked gently so as not to cook out any of the fat on the edges or just enough to season it acceptably.

For sandwiches the ham heated up and browned a bit [illegible] its edges is about ten times more palatable than the cold ham is in the sandwich, and the fat is much more edible. In that connection, we always need to mention that it is the fat that carries the calories and it is almost a sin to waste it. A way to hasten or further the browning is to add a tiny bit of sugar to the edge of the ham. Another way to season it is to sauté in the pan before the ham is added some sliced geen pepper. They really should be stewed in the pan gently and then they will serve as an acceptable accompaniment for it.

Frizzled ham can be as well served with fried eggs as raw fried ham. Yet another seasoning for the frizzled ham is some slices of tomato, gently cooked in the butter before the ham is put into the pan. This seasoning may be exceedingly acceptable. Frizzled ham is less likely to be hard when heated up than is raw fried ham, which is so often hard because poorly cooked.

Boiled Hock of Ham.

A hock of ham is a profitable meat, and it may be cooked exactly like the finest of whole ham to make what is called boiled ham. Thoroughly wash, brush, scrape, pare, and soak if necessary, for several hours in water. A way to find out if it is necessary to soak it is to fry a slice of the ham beforehand. In the water in which it is soaked bring it slowly to a boil, so slowly that it will not bubble in two hours, then cook gently for two or three hours afterwards.

The ham can be cooked without any seasoning, or to the boiling water we may add a wealth of vegetable seasoning, including a carrot, onion, green sweet pepper, raw apple, prunes, stemmed ginger, etc. It may be made superfine with such treatment, although a good deal of judgment is needed for its correct treatment.

Instead of using the seasonings we may finish the ham in the oven with a fruit sirup or with some other liquid seasoning. When it has boiled tender we take off the skin and give it whatever treatment we choose with crumbs sprinkled over or brown sugar, and then bake it gently in the oven so as to cook out the fat. It is perhaps safest to bake it with the sirup, which is frequently basted over it, and so will prevent it from getting too hot on the surface.

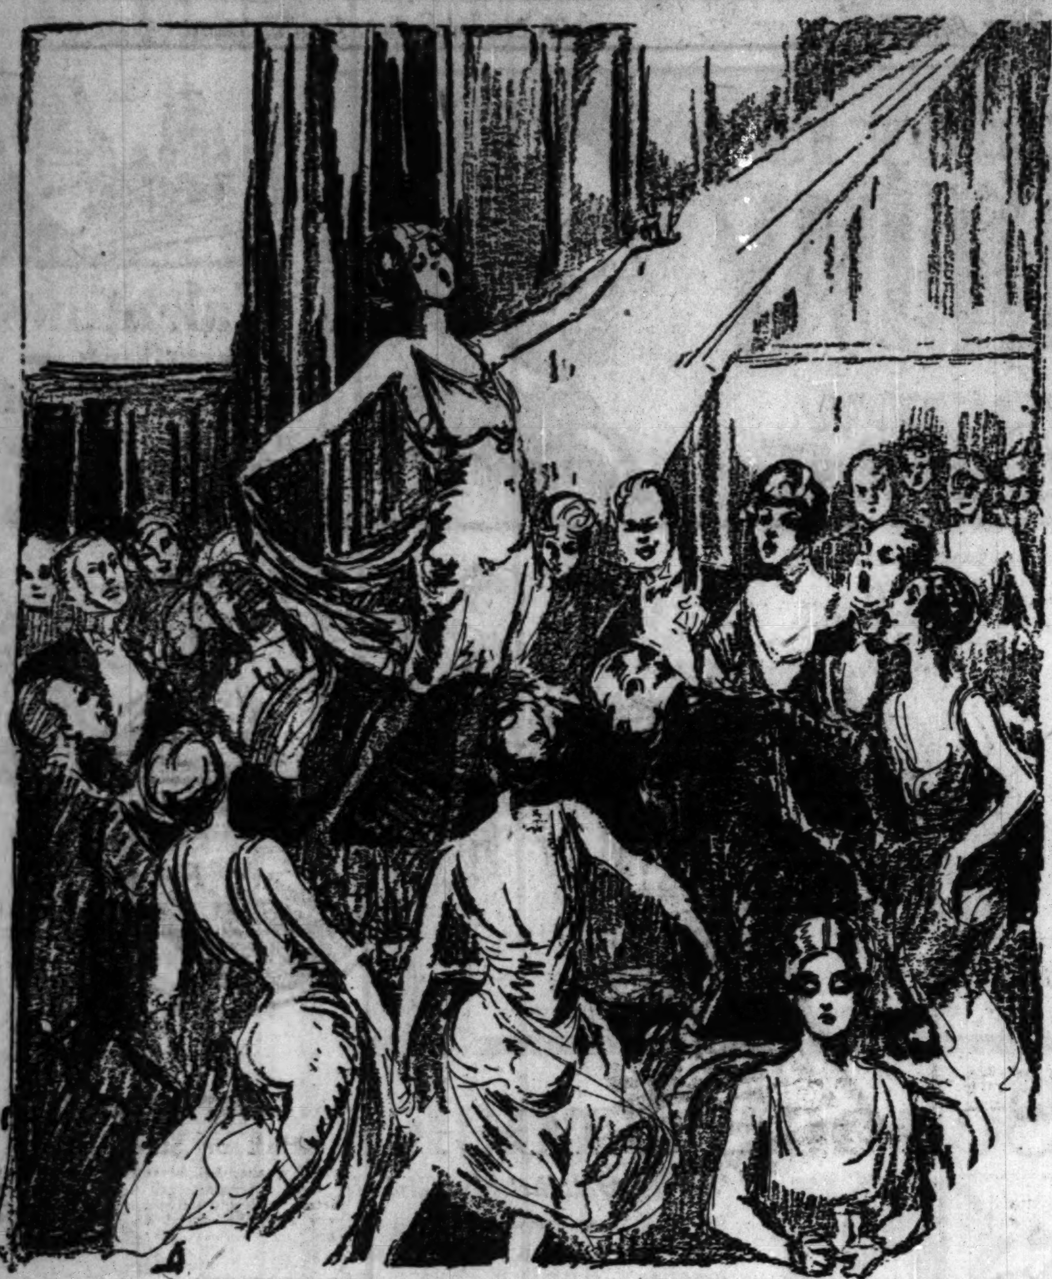
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by Sara Moore



ALTRUIST!

Ring-a-round-a Rosie!
(Rosie's full of rye.)
Though the party founders
I remain a dry.

When the flasks are opened
Prudence oft takes wing,
So I stand with Volstead—
'Cause I cannot—sing.

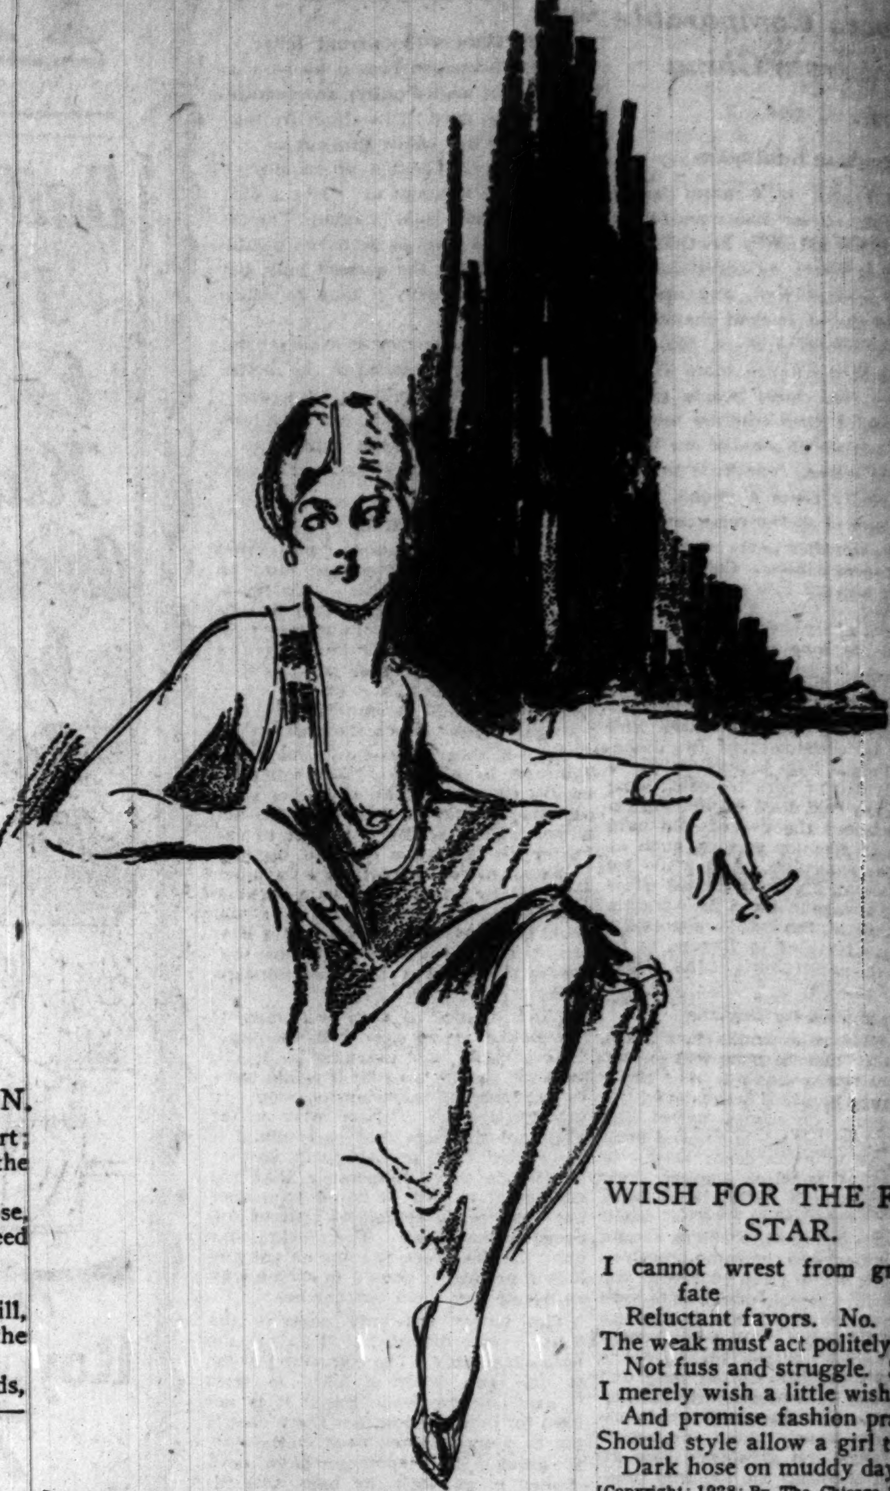
THE NEW OLYMPIAN.

A girl may have her day in sport;
On form, you'll hand it to the lass;
With grace her clavicle cuts loose,
She puts the shot with speed and class.

But why this stern athletic drill,
Why build up muscle for the shove?
She trains to toss it out of bounds,
The loaded shot that's labeled—love.



WISH FOR THE FIRST STAR.

I cannot wrest from grudging fate
Reluctant favors. No.
The weak must act politely and
Not fuss and struggle. So,
I merely wish a little wish,
And promise fashion praise,
Should style allow a girl to wear
Dark hose on muddy days.

Mr. Harry Is Promoted

By Persis Standish.

And His Wife Refuses to Splurge, Giving Some Practical Reasons for Her Stand

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Department, Chicago Tribune.

AT the unwonted hour of four o'clock on a Monday afternoon, Harry appeared in his doorway, much to the surprise of his wife. Mrs. Harry was entertaining a visitor, little Madge Carburry, whom the Harrys had known all their lives. Mrs. Harry could tell by her husband's face that he was suffering from suppressed information and she wondered if he could keep it from Madge. She was soon quit of her wonder, however, for no sooner had Harry partaken of the tea provided him by his wife than he said, "Guess what?"

Mrs. Harry said, "I can only guess the nature of the news, my dear!"

"And what is it?" said Harry.

"That it is good news—or at least that you so consider it," said she.

"And how on earth did you arrive at that conclusion?" demanded Madge.

"Simply," said Mrs. Harry, "by knowing how Harry hates to impart bad news and how eager he is to tell this."

"I admit," said Madge, "that married women are smarter than maidens. It would never have occurred to me to——"

"Listen," said Harry, "are you two going to talk philosophy or am I going to tell MY NEWS?"

"Oooo yes, do tell it," they chorused.

"Very well, then," said Harry, "I know I shouldn't brag before visitors, but really, Madge, I can't wait until you're gone. I just have to tell that I've got a new job—with the same company, of course, but it's a considerable promotion and means a lot more pay. How's that for the New Year's prognosis?"

She Wanted to Cry.

Mrs. Harry knew that it was just as well Harry had told the news before Madge, because she wanted to cry, somehow. She couldn't just explain why. She had been very comfortable, indeed, on Harry's salary, and she had always known he would succeed and had not thought anything else possible, so that the step upward was no surprise to her. But something in Harry's boyish delight in his achievement, something in his frank astonishment at having done this thing, himself, like a little boy who chins himself for the first time, made her want to weep a little. Instead, she got up quietly and went over to him and kissed him on the top of the head and whispered, "Congratulations, my dear!"

It wasn't much of a demonstration, but it meant a great deal to Harry, who understood how much his wife despises any public show of feelings.

After a moment he laughed sheepishly and turned to Madge. "You know, Madge, don't you, that I'll get the dickens for whooping it up in front of you, but when a man's salary is suddenly almost doubled and he is [illegible] somewhat imposing title and a most imposing office it's hard for him to keep his equilibrium."

Mrs. Harry laughed. "You foolish creature! As though Madge wasn't in the family. Of course you shall whoop it up—just to prove that I'm not going to put you in chains after she is gone you may tell all about the new office, if you want to."

Mrs. Harry Explains.

"Well," said Harry, "the nicest part of it all is that I'm not displacing any one. I'm taking Cotter's job."

"Really? How wonderful," breathed Mrs. Harry.

"Yes," said Harry, reaching for her hand, "but Cotter is resigning because his wife's grandfather died the other day and left them three millions, so Cotter wants a rest. He's going in for those fossils he's always been so crazy about in earnest now, and out of a clear sky came a command from the boss to come into his office.

"In I went and there were Cotter and the boss and the latter said, 'Harry, Cotter's resigning on account of his fossils—and so you'll have to carry on for him. You're a bit younger than Cotter or any other man who has held his job before, but I think you can do it, after the way you handled it when he was ill last year.'

"Then we talked salary, etc., and it was settled. So I came right home after we had lunched to tell you about it."

Nothing Startling.

When he had finished talking Mrs. Harry said, "Of course, you've really been doing Cotter's work for two years now—what with his illnesses, and his European trips, and what not."

Madge, however, was exuberant. She said, "How wonderful! I suppose you all will be going to Europe now and having expensive illnesses and a new car and a new apartment and new furs and new everything and letting your assistant carry on for you!"

"I won't let my assistant carry on for me," said Harry, "but short of that we'll get a new apartment and a new car and a new anything else the little lady who goes to theater with me wants."

"Well," said Mrs. Harry, "if you consult me, dearest, we won't get a new thing—not just now, at any rate. We'll go on living just as we have—we're very comfortable and happy here, and here we will stay at just our usual rate.

"I don't mean that if you want to join a golf club and I want to go on a pleasure trip we won't do it—once in a way. But to my notions, even a big promotion does not warrant a complete change in one's way of living if one is happy in that way. When we have an assured income without working for it night and day, perhaps we might invest in a home, but why should we move out of this place we love just to show that we have more money? If we were uncomfortable and unhappy here that would be different.

"My life satisfies me entirely as it is. The only thing I want that I have not is security and enough to do more for others. Well, then, won't I have more security and more with which to do for others if I don't change what already pleases me? We couldn't be happier in a palace, could we, Harry?"

Harry did not answer his wife. Instead he turned to Madge. "With a woman like that," he said, "one's just got to be a success!"

What's in Store for Those Born This Week

Marion Meyer Drew's weekly articles are presented solely for the entertainment of readers. Separate answers to individual questions cannot be given.

Marion Meyer Drew.

THE misunderstandings and peculiar conditions which have besieged the natives of this birth date—the 12th of February—for the last few years are now about at an end, and no one is happier to read that bit of news than I am to write it. The planet Neptune has been opposing the best interests of all those people born near the middle of February, and when they have not made errors of judgment they have surrounded themselves with circumstances which have not worked out so well as they expected them to do. Neptune governs all psychic tendencies on earth, as well as musical talent, certain lines of business, including the rubber, oil, and cotton industries, the navy, and many other entirely legitimate and worthy activities. But there is no doubt in the mind of any serious student of astrology that Neptune brings into play a list of strange influences which wreck our peace of mind and often ruin our prosperity, and those who come under Neptunian aspects may look forward to incomprehensible events in their lives, which will seem harmless, but cause barrelfuls of trouble. The Feb. 12 people are now past this, as I have said; they may get a little Neptunian return about the middle of next August, but the coming year, on the whole, is pretty good for them, with indications of a love affair or profitable new friendship and expansion of business toward the end of the year.

The 13th is strong for travel, commercial enterprises, and all study or intellectual activity throughout 1928; more so during the fall months than at other times, but good for these things during the entire period. These men and women can make money during the next year, but should avoid speculation and analyze conditions seriously. This is a year in which panic is threatened, and those who take advantage of financial turns can profit, but those who trust to luck will find themselves nipped unpleasantly. October is the best month for the sons and daughters of this date.

Feb. 14 carries responsibilities, some poor health, a little depression, and more or less worry about domestic conditions. The first part of 1928 seems more troublesome than the later months, while October and November should be pleasant. I would advise natives of this date to guard their health, avoiding colds and congestions, and to prepare for a rather dull year to come—but it could be much worse!

Wednesday of this week is not one of the 1928's favored birthdates, being too strongly influenced by Neptune and Saturn to show much pleasure or profit through either business or social interests during the coming year. Women of this date should expect nothing whatever from their contacts with men just now, while the men of this date will find that their women folks can cost them both time and money and return them very little. Next June and July ought to show me right on this, for the summer is certainly a very nerve racking period for these people. The later months are somewhat better, particularly in home affairs and in health.

Thursday and Friday both have the sun in opposition to Neptune for the birthdays celebrated at that time. It may seem strange to hear me rave so about the effects of this planet on psychic and spiritual details in our lives, for many of us may fancy that such things affect us only very slightly and perhaps do not even exist, but I wish to say with all the emphasis at my command that years of experience in astrological work have convinced me of the truth of adverse psychic influences—I have seen them at work in the lives of people with whom I came in daily contact—and I want to warn every one who reads these articles to avoid careless psychic investigations, amateur dabbling into spiritualistic seances, and the casual acceptance of the guidance of those who claim abnormal vision or knowledge. People born on the 16th or 17th of this month are apt to come in touch with these conditions with ultimate damage to themselves. Wait for a year before allowing any one to rule your decisions; particularly wait until after next summer.

The Saturday children have a very fortunate birthdate—health, business success and great expansion of mentality all promised by the stars. They must be careful in handling fire or machinery; otherwise the year should be noted down in letters of gold.

For the rest of us this week is quite good. It gives opportunity for social and domestic benefits, along rather small lines, perhaps, but nevertheless things which would be neglected at other times—new furniture or some little theater party—something pleasant and out of the ordinary for the majority. Then, too, there are strong Mercurial aspects this week which bring travel or important correspondence. This is more powerful for people born near March 1 than for any others, although the first week of November would also benefit from it as well as the first week of July—that is, persons born at these times. But the potent ray from the planet Neptune is apt to confuse every one more or less just now, and we should all make allowances for misunderstandings, promises which cannot be kept and decisions which later events prove to have been founded upon false assumptions, and we should avoid being angry or disappointed at these things. Offers will be made in business which will not work out as you may hope, or contracts may not be lived up to, or gossip and false report may spoil some happy affair. The newspapers of this week will carry news of some scandal or wrong settlement of important matters, Neptune being particularly apt to influence prohibition and governmental treatment of vice and crime. The week promises more that it can fulfill, but if you will be content with small favors, everything will be happy.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

Let It Drop.

Husband (furiously)—My favorite pipe smashed to atoms! who on earth could have been so confoundedly careless——?"

Wife (tartly)—I don't know, I'm sure. All I know is that I came down this morning, and found your shoes on the mantlepiece and pipe on the door mat."

Husband (mildly)—O, well, accidents will happen. J. M. S.

◆

Dividing.

Wife (after a bitter fight)—Well, the only thing left to do is to divide this house in two. You can have one side and I'll take the other.

He—That suits me; what side shall I have?

Wife—You can have the outside. I'll take the inside. E. F. D.

Women the World Over

America has at least twice as many women engaged in the study of nutrition as England and France combined.

◆

Mrs. Enrick Berry, the only woman painter who has ever ventured into the heart of Nigeria, has volunteered her services to the American Museum of Natural History in decorating the museum's proposed African hall, which is to be dedicated to the memory of Carl Akeley, the American explorer, who died recently during a recent expedition to Africa.

◆

Care of Babies

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night?

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste, and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good. And it is so pleasant to take. Taste it yourself, and you'll know why "Children Cry for It."

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable, so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or when you even suspect the approach of constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. See how quickly all fretfulness or wakefulness will cease!

Only one word of warning: the above advice is true of genuine Castoria.* The kind called Fletcher's bearing Fletcher's signature is genuine—and does not contain opiates or any other drug that can harm your baby. Other preparations may be just as free from harm; the writer does not know as to that, but does know one family whose children will never make the experiment!

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

Rinso
The Granulated soap

This Sheridan Road woman says:

"I certainly am glad my grocer got me to try Rinso!

"Why, Rinso is so good in our water that you don't have to do the slightest bit of hard rubbing—all the dirt soaks right out in the rich, safe suds. Even boiling isn't necessary, the clothes always turn out so snowy and new-looking.

"Besides, with Rinso I don't have to put my hands in hot suds at all—now they never get red! It certainly is a blessing!

"I use Rinso for all my cleaning now—dishes, floors, linoleum, woodwork, etc. It's easier—and there's no grit in it."

MISS F. K. CORYELL,
831 Sheridan Road, Chicago, Ill.

Let the Riches of Books, Music, and Art Lie Within Reach of the Children

by Mrs. Gladys Huntington Bevans

A FRIEND of mine was discussing her first long-ago trip to Europe.

"One of the most illuminating discoveries I made," she said, "was that you get from Europe just as much as you take to it. When I got home I began to store my mind."

I noticed that, myself. You go to visit a castle which has been standing since the year 900, and how infinitely much more it means to you if your mind can fill the little musician's gallery with oddly garbed players on old instruments, if it can cover the cold walls with tapestries, see a festive board with boars' heads and nobles, the lowlier occupants of the castle below the salt, or see chained victims in the fetid dungeons beneath the banquet hall—how much more it means than if that castle is to you just a dank pile of old stones and nothing more.

So it is, really, with life. You get from it about what you bring to it—whether it is in natural equipment or education, or both. On superficial consideration you might think that the first is an unchangeable factor—what you naturally are, and that only the second can change. But, as a matter of fact, that isn't so because you can't be sure just exactly what you naturally are. If you have all sorts of advantages you may develop in a way that will surprise yourself, and find you are quite different from what you thought you were.

Wealth in Books.

One of the greatest factors in making the world more interesting to us is books and, because this is so, we should see to it that they are among our possessions and the possessions of our children. It is one thing to get books from a library and read them; it is another thing to own them—to have them on your shelves, part of your home. Children as well as grown ups are conscious of the difference.

Book shelves or home libraries that are accessible to children may enrich their whole life—present as well as future. While the books that are essentially little children's books or boys' books and girls' books, are a necessary part of their young life, it is not this sort of book I am thinking of in this special connection. It is rather to books which we would class as adult books and which, because they are before the children's eyes on shelves or in the hands of the older members of their family, appeal to them or attract their attention that I am referring. It is a mistake to think that children can understand and assimilate only those books which are purposely reduced to their scale.

And here I must declare that I am the last person in the world to encourage bookishness in children, or to do anything that would tend to make them highbrow. I believe in a child's life for a child. But when they do turn to books, if there is a mine of them to go to they will enjoy digging around.

For instance, my own boy, who is not much of a reader, has times when books fill the exact need of the moment. Long ago, when he was 6 or so, he began to pore over the pictures in a Gayley's "Classic Myths" that I have. Off and on ever since then he has asked me to read to him from it. When he was 7 he was chuckling over Uncle Remus. He developed an enthusiasm for parts of Wells' "Outline of History" when he was 8, and scraps of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings." Maps he loves and the dictionary is a kind of game. Other children will investigate other sorts of books, provided they are there at hand—books of exploration, history, and some adult fiction.

Music Gives Beauty.

And there are other means than books that open up the world of beauty, of activity, of interest to our children. But unless they have some inkling of them they may grow up before they know them, or they may never stumble on them at all.

There is, for instance, music. There are little songs for little children, little pieces for them to play on the piano, nursery rhymes, records for the phonograph, as well as jazzy and popular songs which are admittedly jolly enough or simple enough for any one to understand. There are a few really lovely songs written for children.

But there is other music of real, often classic, beauty which is of such a character that children—both boys and girls—enjoy it and understand it. There's the Nutcracker Suite by the great Tchaikowsky, there are many of the minuets—Mozart's and Musette by Gluck; there are the gay country dances from Nell Gwynn and one by Beethoven, the March of the Lead Soldiers by Gabriel Pierne, Russian folk dances like the vivid Shining Moon, and Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks by Richard Strauss. Then there are all sorts of rollicking things from the Gilbert and Sullivan operas.

The best way for children to hear such music, short of having it played to them on the piano, is on the phonograph. While many compositions which children might enjoy are given over the radio, they are usually in a program with other music, and the whole thing becomes a blur to a child. It is much better to have music for them in the form of records so they can hear the things they want when they want them, and with composure, and repeat them as often as they please. The hearing of great quantities of music is apt to dull their senses to it.

Within Their Reach.

It is important that none of these things be thrust upon children. That would be almost certain to give them a distaste for it, besides causing them mental indigestion.

All I suggest is that books, and music, and anything else of the arts and crafts that make life more interesting be within their reach, so that they may take them if they so desire, and catch a glimpse of the riches that may be theirs in increasing degree.

For, in their childhood, you must realize for them that the more they take to the world of home and abroad, the more they will get from it.

Opera Lover Makes Telling Complaints

By Edward Moore.

RIGHT of way this morning will be given to a letter from a correspondent. This department a few weeks ago printed what appeared to have been the achievements of the opera season. The letter is a good sequel because it prefers to deal with what may be termed nonachievements and with a definite point of view thereon.

OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH will play with the Symphony orchestra Friday and Saturday.

The questions it asks are, as far as this department is concerned, somewhat rhetorical. At least they are at present impossible to answer, though they by no means classify as destructive criticism. But it is better to let it speak for itself.

Dear Mr. Moore: The open season for the musically dissatisfied to become audible seems to be at hand, and I have wondered if a few comments and questions might be worthy of your expert attention; especially now that our Civic Opera company is on tour and we are having time to think over its past and future.

While everybody interested in it is proudly mailing out rotogravures of its to be future home on Wacker drive, cost $20,000,000, some of us are wondering if a little bit of that modest amount might not be expended on the improvement of the opera company itself and the performances it gives; if one or two stories, for instance, might not be left off the topmost towers and the money thus saved be devoted to building up the artistic personnel and the character of the presentations. Is the object of civic opera to build sky-soaring piles of brick, concrete, and structural iron, or to give us the best possible seasons of operatic art?—that is, if you are willing to concede that operatic art exists. Many critics deny this, or only admit it with great pain.

* *

Old Opera Goers Voice Complaints.

At any rate, while it is the very laudable civic mode to praise our Civic Opera to the skies and to hang admiringly upon everything it does, some of us, old opera-goers, dating back almost to the days when Patti christened the Auditorium, are not so contented as we ought to be. For instance, we think the personnel of the Civic Opera company needs rejuvenation very badly—that it is becoming somewhat shopworn and second hand. We are aware that first rate artists cannot be acquired anywhere, any time, along the musical highways, but we are also aware that if a few more, which apparently are now in circulation, were secured, it might help. There is, of course, no use weeping over the past, but when we recall that a few seasons ago it was our privilege to hear regularly such singers as, for instance, Mme. Galli-Curci and MM. Muratore and Chaliapin, and that there now exist yawning gaps where their places were, it is difficult for us not to repine.

We wonder why no effort is made—or seems to be—really to replace them, if not by their equals, at least by more passable substitutes than have been found. We wonder why Mr. Schipa, who greatly delights us, departs so early in the season and is heard no more. We wonder, again, why Mme. Ivogun was permitted to make only a fleeting appearance or two and then was briskly hustled off stage forever, though she made an impression such as few sopranos ever have here when we were allowed to listen to her. We wonder why such a contralto as Mme. Onegin might not be secured for at least a few "guest" performances, if no more. We wonder why Mr. Schlusnus, whose singing and acting in "Tannhäuser" seemed a glimpse into a better operatic world, had hardly arrived among us before he was waved away again. We wonder why Miss Macbeth, a charming artiste whom we always admire, is carried on the roster apparently as a lay figure and in performance only tossed at us once or twice at a popular price matinée or Saturday night opera.

We wonder, too, at the répertoire until we are almost ready to weep hot tears of disappointment. Its stereotyped, cut and dried, antique, and venerable complexion leads us to believe that, civically speaking, repetition season after season is as inescapable as death or taxes. We would like to grow, to progress, and to have a few new sensations, but we are not permitted, or when we are asked to gather together for such happy occasions the result is usually either trifling or depressing.

* *

Shafts with Barbs.

We read in the papers that one of the grand successes of the New York season at the Metropolitan Opera house has been the revival of "Norma," with Mme. Rosa Ponselle. And we recall that seasons ago Mme. Rosa Raisa gave at the Auditorium two or three portrayals of the Druidess that created a new standard of lyric tragedy in these parts; an unforgettable performance which thrills merely in the now distant remembrance. Mme. Raisa—the gods be thanked!—is still on the pay roll, but who would ever imagine that she is the greatest exponent of this famous rôle since the "great days of old" when Pasta, Malibran, and Grisi flourished? Let echo answer.

"Don Giovanni," a brilliant success last year, goes immediately on to the scrap heap. "Falstaff," another one, can get only two or three opportunities to poke his head above water. And—honest, now!—what earthly excuse is there for asking the public to pay to hear a grand operatic cast romp—rather heavily—through summer garden operetta like "The Bat"? Is it for such things that towers more topless than those of Ilium must be reared? I have always wondered why grand opera managements insist upon going on these periodical "Bats." Why devote the energies of an organization, which, it is proclaimed, is equaled by few and excelled by none, to suckling fools and chronicling small beer in such wise, or to "Gianni Schicchi," which may delight the pundits, but does nobody else that I ever heard express himself?

One realizes that there are operatic politics, on which account we must submit to more or less miscasting of rôles, retention of substandards, playing of favorites, "and all that." One realizes, too, that Civic Opera is an organization and is run as such—more or less of a mechanism whose wheels and pulleys must move in a duly appointed way, whether Art, with the capital A, revered of earnest souls, greatly flourishes or not. But as one looks back over the last half dozen seasons one is honestly puzzled to discover where any progress has been made, if, indeed, it has not been progress backward. We have a high grade troupe which may be relied on to do the same things in what is practically the same way, over and over, to order, with competency. And when that is said, about everything has been—or so it seems to me. It all goes into one ear and out of the other—that is, most of it does—and only at rare intervals does anything survive to make enduring music in the inner chambers of the soul.

Would it be out of order to suggest that quite a few of the members of the troupe be given a sabbatical year and for the time being, at least, their peculiarly personal wares be exploited elsewhere while a line of new goods be placed in the window instead, and that a similar course might just as profitably be pursued with the répertoire, also? Why not, just for a change, forswear what seems to have settled into a dogged system of routine and embark upon something with at least a spice of adventure?

Very sincerely, JOHN HERVEY.

Three Soloists with Symphony.

Mr. Stock's news for the week includes three different soloists for three different concerts. Jacques Thibaud, the violinist, will be among those present on Tuesday afternoon, playing Lalo's "Spanish Symphony," an elderly work whose vitality is greater than its years when it is expounded by a violinist with the knowledge of how to make it the show piece that it is. Hugo Fox, first bassoon of the orchestra, will play the Weber bassoon concerto at the children's concert Thursday afternoon. It is a repetition, as is the rest of the program, of what was done for another audience two weeks before.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, conductor of the Detroit Symphony orchestra for ten years and a pianist much longer than that, will take to his earlier profession in the concerts of Friday afternoon and Saturday night, playing Brahms' Second Concerto. It has been nine years since he last appeared as soloist with the Chicago orchestra, though he had a long record established in earlier years.

Orchestrally, Mr. Stock has likewise decreed some pleasant things—Scriabin's "The Divine Symphony" Tuesday,

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Do you suppose the German author, Meyer Forster, who wrote "Karl Heinrich" three decades ago, had the slightest idea of the enormous benefit he was conferring on humanity? I reckon not. He probably loved writing his story and hoped that at least a few would enjoy reading it.

RAMON NOVARRO
Now he's a royal highness getting knowledge at Heidelberg.

A few did. One of them hearing that Richard Mansfield was looking for a new vehicle, brought the tale to him. Enthusiastically he took it to his heart, and the dramatized version took the world by storm. After that it was played by many great actors in many parts of the world, and theater lovers grew to know intimately the story of Karl Heinrich, whose fate it was to sacrifice romance for a crown.

We are acquainted with "The Student Prince" in operetta form. It now becomes our pleasure to see it on the screen.

Pleasure, I said! So many times adaptations of stage successes are anything BUT that!

* *

Charm Lies in Its Tenderness.

A simple romance, this, whose charm lies in its spring-like freshness; its tenderness of sentiment; the old world charm of sets and scenery, and the exquisite melancholy, that is like a breath from a field of tuberoses, bringing, sadly sweet, even into the breezy atmosphere of the scenes in which figure the robust drinking songs, a reminder of the evanescence of happiness.

A simple romance—that has been gorgeously screened. There was intelligent thought behind the lavish hand that spared no expense, and the result is a charming thing, made more so by the music that accompanies it in McVicker's presentation of the film.

The action starts in Karlsburg, where the populace awaits the appearance of little Prince Karl Heinrich, the heir apparent, aged 8.

He arrives in charge of his governess and is handed over to his father, Karl VII.

"It must be nice to be a prince!" sigh all the kids as the royal carriage passes.

"It must be nice," sighs the wistful little fellow in the carriage, "not to have to sit up straight and to wear any clothes you want to!"

* *

A Tutor with a Heart.

The stern father almost at once dismisses Karl's beloved governess and puts the boy in charge of a tutor. Fortunately Dr. Jüttner (most sympathetically played by Jean Hersholt) understands boys. His heart goes out to this lad who must be not like other lads. He becomes friend and beloved playfellow as well as teacher to his lonely pupil and is finally sent with Prince Karl to Heidelberg.

The two take lodgings at Ruder's Inn, which is the rendezvous for the merry students, with whom for a time the prince has a happy, carefree existence. And here is Kathi—the innkeeper's niece.

Kathi and Karl love each other.

Dr. Jüttner, though he knows he is erring in his duty, can't bear to drive the new light of joy from the face and heart of his charge by telling him that a notice has arrived that he is to wed the Princess Ilse. He puts off and puts off the evil day—and, unwitting of the shadows ahead of them, the two young people wholeheartedly carry on their romance.

Till—one day—comes a messenger from Karlsburg with the message that the king is dying and the heir to the throne must return at once to be in readiness to assume the responsibilities of his kingdom.

Karl and Kathi have been planning for a long, long drive. Karl has bought his pretty sweetheart a brand new gown and hat and she is in her room joyously putting them on. The message falls blightingly on their happy day.

"I will come back!" Karl mutters brokenly, all the old time sadness—and more—welling up into his eyes.

"I will be waiting," Kathi tells him, with a smile that quivers through a mist of tears.

But both of them KNOW—the song is ended.

When again they clasp hands it is over the bier of hopes long dead.

* *

Ramon Novarro was a Happy Choice.

Ramon Novarro, who, it now appears, will neither go into a monastery nor sing like a bird in grand opera but has signed another long time contract (these press agents!), was a happy choice for the rôle of Prince Karl. Phillip De Lacey, depicting Karl as a child, is a darling. I love his sensitive, sparkling, little face.

Norma Shearer, somehow not quite her usual utterly beautiful self, is, nevertheless, a most appealing Kathi. She plays the rôle with great enthusiasm and a sympathetic understanding of the character. All other players are well cast and do conscientious and effective work. And, from the production standpoint, as I told you, there is nothing to criticize.

There's not a lick of scented sin in the makeup of "The Student Prince" as screened. Therefore—WILL it be a box office success?

Time will show.

* *

Bits aBOUTem.

HOLLYWOOD MAIDENS ARE UP IN ARMS, I understand, because of the recent statement made by Prof. A. M. Low of London, who is alleged to have claimed that the modern girl owes so much to the chemist for her beauty that she might be called "a walking chemical experiment and a parade of substitutes for nature." The professor's analysis is told as follows:

"Hair—Seventy-five per cent use henna, peroxide, or some brightening washes. Glutinous chemicals are used in permanent waving.

"Face—The roses are of red oxide of lead creams; are extracts of petroleum; eyelashes are darkened with sienna, lampblack or carbon.

"Hands—Bleached with chemicals, fingernails are covered with tinted celluloid.

"Clothes—Mostly of imitation wood or imitation silk, made from grass or wood fiber and cellulose. Shoes are often made of paper pulp, stamped and printed with chemical dyes."

* *

THOMAS MEIGHAN, with Mrs. Meighan, has gone west to begin a short series of films for Caddo Productions, a new and personally conducted enterprise that hopes to distribute through Paramount. After the work has been completed the Meighans will return to their new home in New Port Richey, Fla.—or else to Great Neck. Hollywood never has, and, from all indications never will, appeal to the Meighans as a place of residence.

See you tomorrow!

The Lincoln Revolution

By Clifford Raymond.

THE Lincoln revolution had the peculiarity in that it occurred where it needn't have. Slavery was ruining the south, not the north. It was degrading the white workers and as they increased in numbers and came more into contact with the competition of slave labor they would not have tolerated it. If let alone it might have ruined itself and its aristocracy with it, but when it was assailed from the north it had sufficient vitality to make a beautiful fight of four years against greatly superior resources.

The north in other circumstances might have had nothing whatever to do with it. It actually had nothing to do with the north except as the necessity developed of destroying the political power of a slave holding, landed aristocracy which was an anachronism in Washington and even as such had the nation by the nose.

In the most serious material if not moral sense it was the white worker of the south and not the black who was enslaved. The white was free labor in competition with slave. So long as slavery was successful it could degrade the white worker and when its own faults began to take effect it would have ruined the white aristocrat.

* *

If the north could have kept its hands off the south the revolution against slavery would have been begun and carried through by white southern workers when they increased and nonslave-owning farmers. It would have been delayed, but eventually the southern white would have turned on the aristocracy with a Watt Tyler rebellion or a French revolution, if not with a Lincoln at least with a Bryan and with "you cannot crucify labor on a cross of ebony." But for this there had to be a complete absence of northern morals and sentiment. The northern abolitionists had to be silent. The north had to accept the free spread of slavery into the territories. It had to accept the fugitive slave law. It had to do everything morally and politically impossible for it to do. It would have required a doctrine of state rights by which New England, New York, Illinois, etc., stated their indifference to conduct, habits, social conditions and ways of life outside their own boundaries. If so complete an aloofness had been possible the south would have released its passions on itself. It would have had the revolution with the north looking on. In the course of it and at the conclusion of it the north would have received what Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and upper Canada, now Ontario, received after the colonial revolution, a wave of fugitives and refugees, of aristocrats and families of distinction, with their property confiscated and their fortunes broken.

If these admitted impossibilities had been realized the civil war as another American revolution would have been more clearly perceivable. It wouldn't have had any of its moral glamour. There would have been no morals. The whites would have fought for themselves and not for the slaves. And having won a round head victory over the cavaliers, they would have deported the blacks just as previously they had deported the Indians. It was unlikely that having run the aristocrats out and taken their property they would have continued in contact with the black labor which had caused the revolution.

Lincoln had precisely the social background for this revolution if it had been in the south and if the north had been looking on. Although slavery was morally indefensible to him he kept the moral issue out of it so far as he could, so far that the northern abolitionists were displeased and even clamorous.

* *

The progenitors of Abraham Lincoln had been drifting down hill. The Lincoln family had been weavers and iron founders when they were in New England and Pennsylvania.

Some urge or inclination in addition to the effect of primogenture kept the family edging toward the frontier. This urge can be one of courage, ambition, and competence. It also can be one of shiftlessness, incompetence, and failure.

The Hankses, Lincoln's maternal side, had a trend which suggested something in the direction of social incorrigibility even if it was only suggested. For the Lincolns, conceding an undiminished self-respect in the family, there was a record of transfer from one state to another and in each transfer a perceptible diminishment of estate and circumstances. When Abraham Lincoln was born the family was worse off in relation to the times than it had been before in America. It was to be even worse.

From this plat of descending curves the rocket of Abraham Lincoln sprang, aimed at a star. A revolution for the protection of the poor whites must have been irresistibly appealing to this inexplicable rocket which reached the star.

America has had revolutions without arms and revolutions with them. The ones which did not have human blood letting are called by other names. There have been revolutions which seemed to fail entirely but which got partly around to their objectives. The country has gone to the ramparts in small instances and has avoided them in large ones.

Shays' rebellion and the whisky rebellion took to the barricades and yet were of no consequence, although the latter had President Washington marching in his last military campaigning. The Bryan revolution never went beyond shouting in its superficial phenomena and yet it may have had a greater effect on the American republic than the citizens thereof perceive or appreciate.

Both Lincoln and Bryan tilted into a great power. The colossus which Lincoln hit came down in fragments. Bryan seemed not to have touched his. He himself seemed to have emerged as a man of busted ideas, but all the popular symbols of the thing against which his lance was laid have disappeared.

In Bryan's case that means either that the thing has passed out of existence for the time being or that it has passed out of the popular imagination. In either case it has ceased to exist. Bryan charged into a thing which was represented by cartoons of jovial rascals, of grinning human behemoths in dollar marked clothes. These were the trusts, the robber barons, the money power. His revolution changed something, either the popular conception of capital or the methods of capital itself, or possibly both. Whether it was the first, which would be the reverse of his idea, or the second, which would be a purpose of it, or the third, which would be an adaptable human compromise, his revolution destroyed the behemoth in dollar signs.

Jefferson was a revolutionist and changed a social order. He was a Virginia aristocrat but he made aristocratic government impossible of continuance. He swept the superior people out of power and he made powerful what had been known as "the vulgar."

* *

Jackson was a frontier aristocrat, a self-made one but one by assertion. He would fight a duel with a gentleman but he had to know his gentleman. Otherwise he horsewhipped or caned his opponent. He headed a revolution of the backwoods and the frontier against the survival of federalist aristocracy, against the political machinery of that aristocracy, against the congressional caucus for nominations, against the electoral college scheme of indirect presidential elections, against sound banking and for everything the frontier loved, easy money, free lands, the will of the common man rampant in his ignorance of the decisions he made.

Thus the nation is more accustomed to bloodless than bloody revolution, but it was out of the question for the Lincoln revolution to go so easily to a conclusion, although if it had developed logically and without such extensive and expansive passions and moralities it would have had its bloody action in smaller area and for fewer of the population.

The next revolution? Mr. Bryan has left it with the nation. It is one against knowledge.

"Strange Interlude" Stirs Controversy

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The town—the theatrical part of it—has burned with enthusiasm and gone cold with indifference over the production of Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude."

To many the play, written in nine acts and performed from 5:15 o'clock in the afternoon until 11:15 at night, with an intermission of an hour and a half for dinner, is by far the most significant addition to American drama made within the memory of this generation.

LYNN FONTANNE
gives a fine performance as the unhappy Nina in "Strange Interlude." [Muray Studios Photo.]

To their opponents, it is no more than a freak play, overwritten, pretentious and as bloaty with self-pride in its sheer bulk as a 7 foot prizefighter.

I, being a hopeful young person, take sides with the first group. "Strange Interlude," I think, stripped of everything those who dislike it may consider silly and artificial appendages, is still O'Neill's greatest play. And will, by reason of its revolutionary form, have a decided effect upon the drama of the future.

This new form includes an adaptation of the idea employed by Alice Gerstenberg in her single-act play, "Overtones," in which each character was accompanied by another self that spoke what was in the mind, as well as what was expressed in the spoken word of that character.

O'Neill has each character speak its own thought, either before or after an audible speech. And during the speaking of that thought, which practically restores the "aside" of the old drama to common and honorable usage, all action of the other characters is halted.

Thus, if Nina Leeds, the heroine, is sewing and carrying on a conversation with Sam Evans, the man she marries, and they are sitting on opposite sides of a table, she continues sewing so long as Sam's remarks are directed to her.

But the moment he begins to wonder what effect his statement or his question may have upon her, and express this wonder in speech, she ceases sewing and holds the pose until he finishes. Then she either continues momentarily to stare and to think aloud of what her reply shall be, or she resumes sewing and answers him naturally. At first, of course, this all seems strange and a little foolish. Particularly when the spoken thought seems irrelevant and only holds up the action. But gradually you become accustomed to it, and finally, before the play has covered more than two of its nine acts, you find yourself not only interested in the novelty, but eager to know the mind wanderings of the characters.

* *

Characters More Interesting.

Gradually it dawns upon you, or at least it so dawned upon me, that these characters thus made completely revealing, are much more interesting as human studies than the conventional single minded, flat voiced individuals who speak much, but reveal little.

Here we get the whole person, the full rounded and complete personality. Here are human cheats honestly exposed, sometimes to their discredit, occasionally to their glorification. And the story takes on a new fascination by reason of its completeness.

I do not mean to say that you do not weary occasionally of the length and repetition of much of "Strange Interlude." But its highlights are flaming memories, and I never have sat with any audience that was apparently more closely held by a drama than was the first audience that saw this play.

A description of the drama is more difficult. There will be as many meanings read into the O'Neill text as there are befuddled auditors seeking personally satisfying answers.

But let it go as another play by a man who has long been morbidly fascinated by the mysteries of life and the problems besetting discontented humans. A dramatist who, groping himself for the solution that satisfies, would like to talk it over with so many as happen to be similarly interested.

In presenting his argument he offers the major adventures of four normal, or, it may be, slightly abnormal humans.

Nina Leeds, New England born, living with her widower father, deeply in love with a young aviator who has been killed in the war, bitterly resents the puritanical repressions that denied her the freest physical expression of her love the night before her lover sailed away.

* *

Marriage Her Rebellion.

She comes to hate the father responsible for shaping those repressions and deliberately dedicates her life to an expiation of her denial of love and the motherhood she craves.

Later she marries Sam Evans, a characterless writer of advertising copy deeply in love with her, and is happy in the thought that in bearing him children she will have fulfilled at least a part of her destiny. But when his mother tells her of strains of insanity in the Evans ancestry that prohibit any of its women bearing children, she is again bitterly resentful. Evans himself does not know of this ancestral taint, and must not be told for fear of the possible consequences.

Nina, still desperately in pursuit of happiness both for herself and Sam, forms a sort of biological partnership with their mutual friend, Edmund Darrell, a young and high-minded physician, who has selfishly denied his love for Nina because of a fear that marriage would interfere with his professional career. The child born of this arrangement is donated to the cause of happiness as Evans' son and named for the dead aviator.

ENGLISH WITHOUT A DON'T

PREPOSITIONS

By Wallace Rice.

JOHN DRYDEN, single-handed, began the prohibition against prepositions at the end of sentences which has made trouble for 200 years. Having written criticisms with the prepositions in their natural places, he rewrote them for a second edition and put them elsewhere.

He knew that "preposition" is Latin for a word placed before another, because that is the only place, in Latin, where such words can be placed. He did not know that in English it has always been right to put them at the end of a sentence. His innovation is another proof of Dr. Sayce's statement:

"We must get rid of the notion that English grammar should be modeled after that of ancient Rome; until we do so we shall never understand even the elementary principles upon which it is based."

He sat watching the hole he had seen the little beast run in and out of—isn't this good English? But hear what the schoolmaster does to it: He sat watching the hole in and out of which he had seen the little beast run. This is called "correct" English, but is it good English, natural, free, idiomatic?

The girl he's going with; the girl with whom he is going? Is there any reasonable choice for anybody here except a school teacher?

Great writers have ended sentences with so-called prepositions ever since English became a language. Havelock Ellis, a master of style, says:

"Those who lay down that every sentence must end on a significant word are the same worthy and old-fashioned people who think that a piece of music must always end monotonously on a ganging chord."

The land we live in; the flag we fight for; the God we pray to. These may not be good Latin, but they are English—the best English.

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

WHEN, the 25th, "Two Girls Wanted" shall have used up the time apportioned in the Princess, it will be moved, it is expected, up the street to the Adelphi, where Miss Eagels also will finish the 25th. . . . The 26th is restored as the date for "Excess Baggage" in the Princess: March 4 was indicated last week in a bulletin from New-York. . . .

MAX HOFFMAN (JR.)
He's the son of Max and Gertrude, and is in "Good News."

J. P. McEvoy, once of THE TRIBUNE, drops a note to tell me that "Allez-Oop!" a recent decedent, was not his revue, and that he merely "wrote three or four sketches for it"; that its "run for twenty-five weeks in New-York and on the road" seems to him to be an indication that the public thought it good; and he adds, like Mr. Mack letting down Mr. Moran, "Maybe I shouldn't have mentioned it." Maybe, Mr. McEvoy; for, quite apart from the fact that three or four sketches make the essence of any revue, my information is that "Allez-Oop!" walked rather than ran through its time in this vale of tears and revues. . . .

William A. Brady (the elder) sends word that he will in time exhibit Willard Mack's play named "A Free Soul" in Chicago, and that, when he does, he, himself, will perform in the rôle wherein he is now performing in New-York. . . . Meanwhile, Mr. Brady is not without hope that somebody will be good enough to disinter whatever the scandal was about Upton Sinclair's tale named "Oil," which, also, has been (or is about to be) dramatized by Mr. Mack; for Mr. Brady, like the Duke in "As You Like It," thinks that the uses of adversity are sweet when the adversity may be turned into advertising. . . . And the younger William A. Brady is gone to London to arrange, he says, for some performing there by Miss Jane Cowl in "The Road to Rome," wherein his mother, Miss Grace George, continues to act in cities not comprehended by Miss Cowl's limited itinerary.

* *

Letters in Epitome.

Lee writes in from Glencoe to complain that, in his second inspection of "Behold This Dreamer!" he found the actors kidding, and cutting up, and "trying hard to make light of the audience"; and Lee subscribes himself as "Yours for more sarcastic play-reviews."

A lady writes down from Minnesota to say that, if Chicago were more New-Yorklike in the matter of giving matinées other than Wednesday and Saturday, she would come frequently in town to have a look at what's going on in the theaters; and she begs that her name be not used.

K. L. B. writes up from Springfield to admit that he, for one, had always been of the belief that Bernard Shaw wrote a play named "Cashel Byron's Profession," and would have wagered against me had not Mrs. K. L. B. suggested that he make certain, whereupon he looked into his set of Shaw and found that he was wrong; and he says that he deserved to have wagered and lost for having had "Cashel Byron's Profession" in his book-case for eleven years without learning that it was just an early novel of Shaw's.

R. T. Reid sends a messenger with a note to ask what law prevents stage-directors from "cutting an Ibsen play to cases," and to add that he could easily "take an hour out of 'The Wild Duck' without sacrificing a single line of real value to the play"; and I'm wondering if he might take out a single line without doing injury to the structure of what is, in some respects, Ibsen's best example of dramaturgy in writing comedy.

Many communiques by post ask, suggest, or insist that I do something about Drama Week, which is this week; and about all I seem able to do in the matter is to explain that Drama Week is 366 days long for me in 1928.

As to Letters on "The Silver Cord."

Letters having to do with the comedy in the Studebaker should be sent not hither, but to Vox-Pop, when they concern aspects of the comedy other than drama or, perhaps, what is called "theater." This isn't the place for letters from ladies and gentlemen who regard the play as "unsocial," which seems to be the favorite adjective of those who have written indignantly about the comedy. Doubtless, there were theater-goers who regarded the comic mother-in-law of the old-time farces as "unsocial"; and it is a rare play that isn't "unsocial": it is all a question of where you're sitting. The meddler thinks "The Wild Duck" is that; and the husband who is a bum sport in his discovered infidelities thinks that Somerset Maugham ought to be hung for having let drop "The Constant Wife." . . . Anyway, give a trial to that most stimulating of forums, the Voice of the People: it is to Chicagoland what Hyde Park is to the discontents of London.

* *

Miscellany.

The author of "Kosher Kitty Kelly" has written something new, "Roulette"; and the title means, I fear, that the lad is bent on giving the low-down on something or other: perhaps, on roulette.

Accounts are that "The Second Man," shown here in October by the Theater Guild, is a hit in London, where Noël Coward has Alfred Lunt's rôle.

"Carita," it seems, is the name of the play at present regarded as something for Miss Eagels when she shall have ended her journeying in "Her Cardboard Lover"; and 'tis told of it that it calls upon the principal actress to pretend to be a man in most of the scenes.

"Broadway" ended its New-York run last night, with 608 performances as its score: thirty-two of these were given at a lowered scale of prices. . . . "The Ladder," for which the admission-fee is nothing at all, is now at the top of the long-run list, with the 500-mark passed last week.

* *

More Miscellany.

Walter Hampden, who appears to have achieved the ambition of every true-born American actor—that of performing nowhere save New-York—is preparing to revive "King Henry V," a chronicle of Shakspere's which hasn't had much attention in this country since Mansfield gave it, when the current century was getting under way.

Miss Patricia Collinge has been engaged by Mr. Tyler for the roster of celebrities he is about to put into "She Stoops to Conquer," wherein she will be Constance—the rôle acted well and becomingly by Miss Katherine Krug in the recent performances of the farce in the Goodman Memorial. Lyn Harding will be Hardcastle; Mrs. Carter, Mrs. Hardcastle; Lawrence D'Orsay, Mr. Marlowe; O. P. Heggie, Diggory. That Miss Fay Bainter will be Kate and Glenn Hunter Tony has been announced. "This," wires Mr. Tyler, "completes the cast with the exception of young Marlowe and Hastings." Yes, indeed!—and they are merely the most important rôles in the farce.

When Miss Barrymore shall have finished her delightful performances in "The Constant Wife" in the Harris, she will be succeeded there, it is planned, by Miss Mary Boland in "With the Help of Emily."

Miss Claiborne Foster is to have Mrs. Carter's old part in a New-York revival of "The Heart of Maryland," which was profitable boob-bait midway through the Mauve Decade.

Opera Lover Makes Telling Complaints

Roussel's Suite and Gliere's "The Sirens" for Friday and Saturday, Bach's Second Concerto for Tuesday and his Third for Friday and Saturday. These are confidently recommended in all respects.

About the Schubert Contest.

The Schubert Centennial regrets, and says so in a letter, not to have seen in this newspaper any announcement of the extension of the closing date of the composers' contest. Wherefore this department, apprised for the first time of this no doubt important item, hastens to relay the information that the closing date is no longer March 31 of this year, but April 30.

No action of the season has been more pertinaciously followed, not even Mr. Insull's successful insistence that Chicago must and shall have a new opera house. It will be interesting to see what comes out after the dust has settled. The first proposition was to finish the Unfinished Symphony, but this evoked comments that varied in their expression of derision all the way from the prick of a rapier to the thud of a baseball bat. Wherefore finishing the unfinished speedily moved out of the front line and the vacant space was taken by a proposition tending merely toward homage to Schubert.

Now the centennial organization defines its aims in this simple fashion. It desires original orchestral compositions in one of these two categories:

(a) Symphonic works in one or more movements, presented as an apotheosis of the lyrical genius of Schubert and dedicated to his memory on the occasion of his centennial.

(b) Variations on Schubert themes.

In the execution of works in these categories composers have the widest latitude both for content and form, are free to use Schubert themes for quotation or for purposes of variations, and are entitled to use Schubert sketches.

If nothing much worth while comes out of this, it will not be the fault of publicity, for every country where any composer has been known to put ink to paper has heard about it. Contrariwise, if something good is uncovered, it will mean a new chapter on the science and art of advertising.

So, as the lamented B. L. T. used to say, we are c. to k.

From Baritone to Tenor.

Considerable publicity, though not yet world-wide, was expended on the change that only a short time ago came over the voice and scenic adornment of the famous baritone, Louis Graveure. No longer ago than last Sunday he gave a song recital in New York, and a startled world discovered that his baritone voice had become tenor and his whiskers had disappeared. What is more, he says he is going to Berlin to sing tenor rôles in opera.

Neither change is entirely unprecedented, though anything so drastic as the double gesture is not usual. John Philip Sousa sacrificed his own beard here in Chicago during the war, giving as reason the fact that he liked to take long walks by himself and that the growing tendency of otherwise charming young ladies to take his arm and help him across the street was annoying him beyond the vocabulary of a polite man to express. Also, Jean de Reszke—and, for that matter, several other tenors, too—was a baritone before he became a tenor.

It is doubtful, though, whether any of them waited as long as Mr. Graveure. For he has been baritoning hither and yon, wherever the booking managers and the Postal Guide could find a recital platform, for at least eleven years, and for some time before that he sang in light opera under the name of Wilfred Douthitt. The telegraphed accounts say that he is forty-six years old now.

Anyway, he sang "Che gelida manina," from "La Bohême"; "Salut, demeure," from "Faust"; the Flower Song from "Carmen," and quite a collection of songs, all in the tenor range and without benefit of transposition.

A Time Worn Query.

One of the rewards of life is the feeling that at one time or other one has been ever so slightly influential, that information put into printed form has been understood and digested. Many times during the last several years this department has had occasion to announce that it can express no opinion about supposedly ancient and valuable violins, especially at long distance—that such matters are the business of violin experts, and not expert violinists, either.

So there is something of a kick in reading this, one of this week's letters:

"I have an old violin which a friend told me recently was valuable. . . . The label inside, which is yellow with age, bears the following, 'Anno 1725 Carlo Bergonzi fece in Cremona.'"

The violin expert can tell how valuable and how genuine it is after he examines it. He can also tell, if he happens to feel in the mood for conversation, that the label means little or nothing. Misleading labels have been stuck inside violins for so many years that the trade does not even consider them deceit any longer, and certainly not fraudulent.

Communications usually have had to do with nothing less than Stradivarius or Guarnerius specimens. The Bergonzi is a variant from the customary. But I have answered literally dozens of letters on the subject in the last three or four years and never yet have I received a follow-up letter telling me that the supposed treasure had been found to be genuine.

Here and There in Music.

The Chicago Civic Opera company has now finished its annual series in Boston, and it joyfully relays the information that all records for receipts were broken during its two weeks there. During this week it will be closer to Chicago, though not any too close, at that. "Resurrection," with Mary Garden, will be sung at Rochester tomorrow night, but with George Eastman's seats occupied by some one else. He arranged for the visit of the company and then sailed on a big game hunt in Africa.

Akron, O., will be the next stop, "Aida" on Tuesday night with Rosa Raisa, Cyrena Van Gordon, Charles Marshall, Giacomo Rimini, and Virgilio Lazzari, Giorgio Polacco conducting; followed by "Hansel and Gretel" Wednesday afternoon, with Lucille Meusel, Olga Kargau, Elinor Marlo, Lorna Doone Jackson, Augusta Lenska, Maria Claessens, and Desiré Defrere, and "La Traviata" Wednesday night, with Claudia Muzio, Charles Hackett, and Richard Bonelli.

For the rest of the week the company will be in Detroit, with "La Gioconda," "Mme. Butterfly," "Carmen," and "Il Trovatore" as the attractions.

SOLOIST

KATHRYN WITWER.

[De Gueldre Photo.]

This Chicago soprano is announced as soloist with the Chicago Mendelssohn club on Thursday night at Orchestra hall. Under the direction of Calvin Lampert, the chorus will sing a series of part songs for male voices and Miss Witwer will include various groups of her own solos. For many years past it has also been the custom for chorus and soloist to present an elaborate work jointly.

Music Notes

It is pleasant news that the Beggar's Opera is returning. It is the first of the musical plays, two centuries old, to be exact, and they say that when it was new, back in 1728, its tunes were already old. That would seem to give some idea of their vitality.

John Gay wrote the piece as an amusing attack on political conditions and in the form of a burlesque of the grand opera of his day. Instead of calling in a composer, he wrote lyrics to be fitted to existing melodies, street songs, folk tunes, ballads, songs, and snatches, with an occasional impertinent borrowing from George Frederick Handel, who just then was going strong as an operatic composer in London. In all there were sixty-nine musical numbers, about three times the number considered adequate for the musical show nowadays.

But neither the satire nor the burlesque account for the life of the work. Its life has been its own, something quite independent of the purposes for which it was intended. They said of it then that it made Gay, the author rich, and Rich, the manager, gay, and it has continued to amuse and entertain its audiences ever since. A great part of its melodies are as good now as ever, and they were good then.

The company is on its way home to London after a tour of the western states. It will come to the Eighth Street theater Feb. 20 and remain there two weeks.

◆

The Mu Xi chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon will give a program at the Stevens hotel this afternoon. Cara Verson and Pauline Peebles, pianists; Harriet Case, soprano; Jane Sisson, violinist, and Florence Dangremond, cellist, will be the participants.

◆

The North End Mothers' club of Evanston is sponsoring a popular priced recital by Josef Lhevinne, the pianist, Friday night. It will take place in the auditorium of the Haven school, Prairie avenue and Lincoln street.

Now and to Come in City Theaters

THIS is the calendar for the Chicago theaters as indicated by the resident-managers down to midnight of Friday last. Change of plans since last Sunday's issue has been made with respect to some of the houses:

"Alias the Deacon" in the Kedzie: a play about a good-hearted card-sharp and a put-upon widow that had a run last season in the Studebaker and the Playhouse. 'Twill be given here (for this week) by the new stock-company, headed by Miss Rhea Diveley and John A. Willarde. . . . This afternoon.

¶ ¶ ¶

"The Silver Cord," with Miss Laura Hope Crews, in the Studebaker: a good and a witty comedy by Sidney Howard, telling about a mother so selfish that she plays havoc with the happiness of her two sons and the women they love. Excellently acted by Miss Crews and Miss Elisabeth Risdon. . . . Second week.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Wooden Kimono" in the Cort: a who-done-it piece that is, perhaps, as good as most of, if not all of, the other who-done-it pieces. . . . Second week.

¶ ¶ ¶

"The Wild Duck" in the Goodman Memorial: one of Ibsen's best comedies in a revival so belated that the piece should have the appeal of novelty to the majority of Chicago's theater-goers. Good acting by Miss Dorothy Raymond, Miss Katherine Krug, and Whitford Kane. . . . Second week.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Her Cardboard Lover," with Miss Jeanne Eagels, in the Adelphi: a fairish French farce that is made screamingly funny by Miss Eagels in a rôle as far as may be from that performed by her in "Rain." . . . Third week.

¶ ¶ ¶

Earl Carroll's Vanities in the Illinois: fourth show bearing this name to be given in Chicago. Julius Tannen, Moran and Mack, and Johnny Dooley are of the company; and they make the show worth while. . . . Fourth week.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Peggy-Ann," with Miss Helen Ford, in the Selwyn: a song-and-dance play based on "Tillie's Nightmare." Miss Lulu McConnell is in it, and is immensely funny. . . . Fourth and final week.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Just Fancy!" in the Olympic: a romantic comedy with music made from A. E. Thomas' piece named "Just Suppose!" Joseph Santley has with him in the cast Raymond Hitchcock, Mrs. Whiffin, H. Reeves-Smith, Miss Ivy Sawyer, and Eric Blore. . . . Sixth week.

¶ ¶ ¶

NONE COULD BE BETTER IN IT

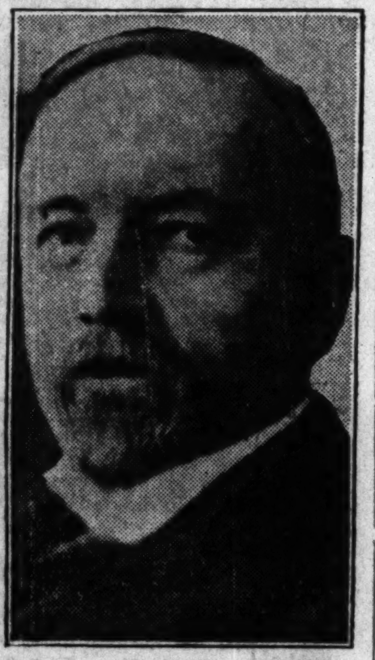
MISS ELISABETH RISDON

SHE'S in the part of Christina, the rebellious daughter-in-law of "The Silver Cord," in the Studebaker; and Chicago should give thanks to Miss Crews' manager for having put Miss Risdon back into the character she originated with the Theater Guild in New-York: not because she originated it, but because she's so good in it that nobody could be better. . . . Miss Risdon has acted many parts here, including six or seven with the resident company that held forth two years ago in the Adelphi. And she is remembered by those who saw "The Lady" in 1923 in that theater.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

By Fanny Butcher.

For those who do their playgoing in the armchair, or who, having seen a play, relish it again in reading it. Next week is National Drama week. Have you a little drama in your home?



Sir Henry Arthur Jones, whose "Mrs. Dane's Defense" is in revival in New York with the customary all-star cast.

IN NEW YORK.

THERE is only one opening this week in New York which you may attend vicariously. That is a revival of Henry Arthur Jones' "Mrs. Dane's Defense."

There is something rather tragic about the business of revivals. All of the old theater-goers say: "The stage isn't what it was when I was a young man. Now, take 'Mrs. Dane's Defense,' for instance. That was a play!" . . . and on and on. And then somebody really believes them—after having looked up the statistics about its popularity and found them good—and there is a revival with all of the stars that aren't at the moment in residence with some hit, and the contemporary audience says, "Ho, hum. How very delightful and old fashioned," or "Did that play give grandma a little moment of shockiness?"

Well, you know how you feel about plays of the generation of Henry Arthur Jones. He was one of the greatest and most popular playwrights of his day, as representative of his generations' tastes as Sidney Howard is of ours [and of about the same popularity]. And now a revival of a Henry Arthur Jones play [you never say a "Jones" play the way you say "an O'Neill play"] is quaint and dated and amusing because it is those things. And that is no more true of Henry Arthur Jones than it is of Arthur Wing Pinero or Oscar Wilde. But unless you see them or read them you can't know what the old theater-goers were like, for the creative listener is just as much a reality on the stage as he is in music.

The popular plays of a period are a reflection of the social ideas of that period. Occasionally a powerful play will change social ideas, but very rarely. It merely reflects them or catches them in the making rather than in the waning. Anyway, after all this preamble, why not read "Mrs. Dane's Defense"? And the rest of the Henry Arthur Jones plays that are in his collected works? They'll be illuminating.

¶ ¶ ¶

"Salvation," by Sidney Howard and Charles MacArthur, is not as yet to be read as a play. Of course it isn't a dramatization of "Elmer Gantry," but the heroine of "Salvation," like the heroine of the ill fated "Bless You, Sister!" is undoubtedly drawn from the same source as the heroine of "Elmer Gantry," and Mr. Donaghey comes right out and calls them the "Aimee McPherson plays." They say that Bayard Veiller had a dramatization of "Elmer Gantry" all finished and ready to be turned over to the producers, with assured success, but he got a severe case of something over it and destroyed the manuscript. Anyway, there's "Elmer Gantry" to be reread (or read, if you're the one person who missed it).

¶ ¶ ¶

There is news that "The Captive" by Edouard Bourdet, which was shooed off the stage in New York amid much booing, and which was supposed to be available only to those who could take it off in a corner and read it without sitting right out in public and seeing a homosexual play, is to be produced in stock in Baltimore. There has never been any ban on its being read in private, however.

¶ ¶ ¶

Walter Hampden has revived "Caponsacchi," which ran up a total of 272 performances last year. If we want to know exactly how it sounds on the stage there is the acting version, the play made by Arthur Goodrich and Rose A. Palmer. And if we prefer to go to the literary source of the play we may dig out a copy of Browning and read "The Ring and the Book." There is published a special edition of "The Ring and the Book" by the Crowell Publishing company, which will wear across its face the legend, "The Walter Hampden Edition."

¶ ¶ ¶

"Show Boat," a revue with the inspiration of Edna Ferber's novel of that name, gives armchair playgoers an excuse to read again that buxom, gaudy tale. Edna Ferber and George Kaufman have another success in New York called "The Royal Family," which is getting itself published very soon, but is not, as yet, available to us in the hinterland. It is about the royal family of the stage—and there are tales of a famous actress, once one of the author's best friends, who now speaks not as she passes because she thinks she is the heroine of the play. O, ho!

* *

IN CHICAGO.

There is no premiere for armchair playgoers to attend in spirit this week, so why not get Percy Hammond's book about the theater called "But—Is It Art?" and have a grand time. He used to be dramatic editor of our paper, and so he's Chicago. His are very amusing pieces about the theater and assorted diversions. The "Epithet" which begins the book, is all about how a feller needs a friend if his name is Percy. It's good for a laugh a paragraph.

* *

PUBLISHED.

"The Cross Stitch Heart and Other Plays" is the latest collection of Rachel Field's one acters, which are destined to be popular. Her "Three Pills in a Bottle" is said to be one of the most popular one act plays ever written, as it has been performed over six hundred times to the knowledge of the author, and any one who has ever published a one act play knows that whenever a group can give a play without paying royalty—that is, without the author's knowledge—it takes a stern soul to send in the ten or twenty dollars, so that six hundred times by actual count may mean twice as many by fact. There are six plays in this volume, as well as in her first one, called "Six Plays."

¶ ¶ ¶

"The Devil in the Cheese," by Tom Cushing, was a success of the season 1926-'27, to the extent of 157 performances. It's a whimsy which hinges on the eating by an archæologist of a piece of cheese he has dug up, and which results in his seeing into the mind of his daughter where he gazes upon a romantic attachment which he had only suspected when he took her away from a penniless young adorer. When the adorer turns up and saves the family from bandits, all is, as they said in the history books, serene along the Potomac.

More Concerning an Unusual American

LA LOIE FULLER was born in 1870 in Fullersville, Illinois, and lived for the last thirty-five years in Paris, where her death has aroused more widespread homage and regret, perhaps, than if it had taken place in her native land. Here she made her first success at the Folies Bergères with her flame- and serpent-dances; here she trained her world-famous ballets; here she knew Rodin, Sarah Bernhardt, Flammarion, Alexandre Dumas, and Anatole France, who described her as "a dazzling artist—a woman of delicate and correct feeling." It was also here, or so the pretty fable goes, that she first conceived her ideas for colored lights, inspired by the nuances dropping from the great rose windows of Notre Dame upon her handkerchief, spread (since in her discouragement she had been weeping) upon her knees to dry.

Her life was eccentric, but as correct as her feeling. Her existence was emotionally and physically austere. In her youth, she welcomed friendship, but never admitted love. In her maturity, she gave great, confused dinners for gourmet friends at which she nibbled only fruit and cucumbers, for which she had an odd passion.

¶ ¶ ¶

She was scrupulous in her contracts, once living with her mother in penury to pay off an illegally-pressed obligation of 400,000 francs. Disfigured by the black spectacles behind which she protected eyes injured long since in her electrical experiments, simply and untheatrically dressed, enthusiastic, speaking execrable French, plump—in later years she looked, as she said, more like a visiting professorin than a dancer. Second only to Isadora Duncan, Miss Fuller was the most widely-known American woman in France. Her death drew from the French press such tender affected phrases as "A magician is dead"; "A butterfly has folded its wings."—Genêt in the New-Yorker.

Theater Not Specified.

SIR: I purchased two seats at the box-office of a Loop theater yesterday for a good two-dollar show, paying for them five-fifty apiece. I gave in payment a twenty-dollar bill, and put the change in my pocket. An hour later, needing to use money, reached into that pocket and found, in this order, two one-dollar bills, a twenty-dollar bill, two one-dollar bills, and a five. I hurried back to the theater and told the treasurer he had given too much change, tendering the twenty. He said:

"Sorry, Sir! I can't take it back. It was my mistake; and I must stand the cost. We have a rule that mistakes are not rectified after the customer leaves the window here; and the rule should work for the benefit of the public as well as for that of the box-office men. The twenty is your gain and my loss." And with that he turned away and refused further to talk on the subject.

As to the rumor that I've been in an asylum, it is true; but I was discharged six months ago as mentally sound.

JAMES L. J. HUFFMAN.
Chicago: January 24, 1928.

The Coghlans' "Diplomacy."

SIR: Your recollections of Rose and Charles Coghlan in "Diplomacy" last Sunday were delightful to me, as one who vividly recalls the cast and the fine performance; but your memory slipped, I fear, in the matter of Frederick Robinson. I have the old playbill by me as I write. I find no such name in the cast, although I recall an English actor of that name who was with the famous company maintained by A. M. Palmer, and remember his being Jim the Penman. Didn't you mean Frederic de Belleville? He was Count Orloff in the Coghlans' revival of "Diplomacy."

JAMES L. LLOYD.
Chicago: February 8, 1928.

[Mr. Robinson was Orloff in the revival for part of the season, and was replaced by Mr. De Belleville.—ED.]

Likes Mother's Speech.

SIR: Your clear, appreciative article this morning on "The Silver Cord" erred, I think, in your expression of doubt about the speech of defense given to Mrs. Phelps in the final act—the speech you implied was a mere stunt, inasmuch as it was out of character. I do not think you will find many persons, especially women, in agreement with you. You are overlooking the fact that, although she is a devil in her way, Mrs. Phelps is utterly sincere in her love for her sons. Sincerity, dear Mr. Donaghey, usually gives us tongues and gives us words wherewith to express ourselves.

MARION L. KIMBALL.
Chicago: February 7, 1928.

Mr. Howard's Intent.

SIR: Missing from your report on "The Silver Cord" was the word I had wagered on seeing there—"mischievous." That is what I think Sidney Howard's play is—mischievous! It is what the urchins call "pie" for men with mothers-in-law. Women with mothers-in-law are likely to be less affected, although the comment heard as this afternoon's audience left the Studebaker would have been gratifying to Mr. Howard, inasmuch as it would seem to him to be justification for having written the piece. But it is a fine comedy—as fine as "Craig's Wife."

MARY HANCOCK BELL.
Chicago: February 8, 1928.

John Gay's Classic Parody.

SIR: Your paragraph today on "The Beggar's Opera" was immense! The idea of having to use the "educational" bunk to sell this exquisite bit of fun reminds me of a public-school teacher who, some years ago, asked the class to request parents to buy tickets for De Wolf Hopper's performances of "The Pirates of Penzance," saying that the piece was "quite educational, in that it teaches us a great deal about the character and the habits of pirates and other outlaws." Then, there was a writer in THE TRIBUNE who said, when the piece was given some years ago in the Central, that the public ought to see "The Beggar's Opera" because it was "a repository of the rich and racy language peculiar to English beggars"! 10 Years Ago in Chicago's Theaters

From The Tribune of February 10, 1918.

ONE of the authors of "The Man Who Stayed at Home," J. E. Harold Terry, is coming to the Playhouse before long to see his work as performed by Mr. Patch's player. Mr. Terry is also the composer of "General Post," in which Messrs. Courtnay and Wise are acting, and of "Billeted," Miss Margaret Anglin's successful entertainment.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home" was fairly successful here by that title in 1918, although it had failed in 1915 as "The White Feather." . . . Another of Mr. Terry's pieces about soldiers and love, based on a provision of England's divorce-laws, was given here in 1925 as "The Lounge-Lizard," and was held to be pretty bad.

¶ ¶ ¶

George Parsons, Miss Mary Boland, Edwin Nicander, Charles E. Evans, Dallas Welford, John Flood, and Miss Julia Ralph are playing in a new comedy, "Sick-a-Bed," by Miss Ethel Watts Mumford.

"Sick-a-Bed" was in the course of time performed here, in Powers', and was withdrawn in two weeks. Miss Mary Newcomb first won Chicago attention by her acting in this farce. Mr. Evans also was in it here; he was at one time an eminence of the American theater by virtue of the popular appetite for him and the late William [Old Hoss] Hoey in Hoyt's thin farce named "A Parlor Match."

¶ ¶ ¶

The plays of Channing Pollock are to be published in a library edition—"The Little Gray Lady," "Such a Little Queen!" "Clothes," and "The Secret Orchard." Mr. Pollack's latest play, "Roads of Destiny," is soon to be produced. It is based on a tale of the same name by O. Henry, and, like the story, is told in three ways.

The four plays listed for publication have long since been forgotten even by those who saw them in performance. Of the four, "Clothes" is most easily recalled, by virtue of the fact that Miss Grace George and the late Frank Worthing were in it here in the Illinois. It was written in collaboration with Avery Hopwood, who soon thereafter [1906] became one of the most successful of native writers for the stage, thanks to his willingness to turn out dirty farces. The piece named "Roads of Destiny" failed.

¶ ¶ ¶

Charles Cherry and others will play "The Naughty Lady," a farce, at the Cort two weeks hence.

"The Naughty Lady" was a variant of Sardou's "Divorçon!"

¶ ¶ ¶

William Gillette is planning to present "A Successful Calamity" in London, where years ago he played "Secret Service" with great success. He will revive "Sherlock Holmes" there, too, for the benefit of war charities.

Mr. Gillette has for some time been in complete retirement, as dramatist and as actor. . . . His "Sherlock Holmes" is about to be revived in New-York, with Robert Warwick in the title-part.

¶ ¶ ¶

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, two prominent movies, are to be put into a speaking play written by John Hunter Booth, author of Guy Bates Post's "The Masquerader." Richard Watson Tully, author of "The Bird of Paradise," is the producer.

Theater-goers took no great interest in Mr. and Mrs. Drew when they tried to cash in on their vogue as film-actors. He was one of the early idols of movie-goers. As a regular actor, he was a man of considerable natural ability who never managed to get anywhere in particular.

¶ ¶ ¶

Madame Carolina White is to be one of the players in "Rock-a-Bye, Baby!" a musical-comedy edition of the farce, "Baby Mine." John Cumberland, late of "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath," also will be in the cast.

Miss White was a soprano of the Chicago Opera in its early years, and was credited by critics and public with being first-rate as Malliela in "The Jewels of the Madonna." She passed from interest soon after withdrawing from the organization.

20 YEARS AGO

From The Tribune of February 9, 1908.

GEORGE ADE is writing a comic opera to be presented by the Harlequin Club of Purdue University, Lafayette (Ind.), this Spring. The piece is to be called "The Fair Coëd." George Ade Davis, Ade's nephew, is writing a part of the music.

This piece was afterward used by Miss Elsie Janis as a star.

¶ ¶ ¶

Miss Maxine Elliott will begin a fortnight's engagement in Powers' Theatre tomorrow night, appearing in a new comedy written, it is believed, to her measure by Rachel Crothers, the successful author of "The Three of Us." The new play is oddly titled "Myself—Bettina." It concerns a young woman of stern New-England stock who has enjoyed some rather exciting adventures in Paris, whither she goes to study art. An incident of the performance is a reference to the "Salomé" dance, during which Miss Elliott is said to undulate gracefully to the Strauss music. Miss Elliott's leading-man is Robert Drouet, well remembered in Chicago. The company includes two English players she brought over, Miss Mary Jerrold and Eric Maturin, as well as Grant Mitchell, Suzanne Perry, Helen Tracy, and Sarah McVicker.

As recently noted here, "Myself—Bettina" turned out to be of no real importance, although it provided an attractive rôle for Miss Elliott, who had her own clientèle. It was in this play that Grant Mitchell first won Chicago's attention.

¶ ¶ ¶

Anna Held in "The Parisian Model" will begin a short engagement in the Illinois Theater tonight. Otis Harlan has succeeded Charles Bigelow; but otherwise the cast remains the same as on her previous visit. One of the new features will be an imitation of Harry Lauder, a Scotch comedian, given by Mr. Harlan.

Miss Held, after a succession of failures, "came back" in "The Parisian Model," and held to her fresh vogue for a number of years, although her talent was slim and inconsequent. With this entertainment, Mr. Ziegfeld, too, "came back": 'twas because of his success with it that he was encouraged by his associates to make the venture with the first Follies, in 1907. . . . Otis Harlan has for years devoted himself to films; he hasn't appeared on the stage in Chicago since early in 1913, when he was in the piece named "Little Boy Blue."

¶ ¶ ¶

"Me, Him, and I," a musical comedy which has made its annual pilgrimage to Chicago for the last few years, will be the attraction at the Great Northern this week. It will be seen in its second edition with new songs, new costumes, new chorus, and new scenery. The ungrammatical titles are played by Ed Lee Wrothe, Billy Watson, and Billy Arlington. Among the new business is a travesty on Creatore, introducing the "Me, Him, and I" band.

"Me, Him, and I" was a show made up of odds-and-ends that is said to have turned in profits of a millon dollars. It served for a time as the conveyance of Bickel and Watson, who afterward became eminent in the Ziegfeld Follies.

¶ ¶ ¶

In Fine Arts Music-Hall Tuesday afternoon and again Tuesday evening, the dramtic corps of the French Theater Association will present "Le Marquis de Villemer," which, it is expected, will give every member of the cast excellent opportunities for romantic and emotional acting of the best grade.

¶ ¶ ¶

Margaret Illington and the company now playing "The Thief" at the Lyceum Theater in New-York will go to San-Francisco the latter part of May at the Van Ness Theater, and will probably open the season of 1908-'09 in Chicago.

Miss Illington, vis-à-vis with the late Kyrle Bellew in the New-York performances, had immense success as the wife in "The Thief." She has been for some time in retirement. The play was revived last season in New-York with Miss Alice Brady in the rôle.

¶ ¶ ¶

A professional matinée performance of "The Witching Hour" will be given in the Garrick Theater on Friday. Souvenir valentines will be distributed on this occasion.

"The Witching Hour" was a notable success, and held at the time to be Augustus Thomas' best work for the stage. William Morris had the principle rôle in the Chicago run.

¶ ¶ ¶

A new theater, built by Hyde & Behman, in West Madison Street near Halsted, and called the Star and Garter, will be opened this afternoon. The theater is said to have cost nearly $500,000. "High-class burlesque" will be given, Charles Robinson and his Night-Owls being the opening bill.

The Star and Garter (a name which proves anew that theatermen don't care much what they call theaters) is still in West Madison Street near Halsted; but what was called "high-class burlesque" is thought to be a thing of the past. Hyde & Behman were a busy firm for years; they were for a long time the managers of George M. Cohan and his family, in the varieties, and staged for those performers young Cohan's plays named, respectively, "The Governor's Son" and "Running for Office."

¶ ¶ ¶

In France, the war against the big theater-hat is kept up. The other night at a "review" the audience yelled for the objectionable headgear to be removed. Some immediately yielded; but others stood their ground, until one of the characters in the play stepped before the curtain and said in solemn accents: "In the name of the French republic, take off your hats!" This was the first appeal; and it proved effectual.

¶ ¶ ¶

The new Shubert Theater at Joplin (Mo.) was opened January 20 by Madame Kalich in "Marta of the Lowlands." The gross receipts for the opening performance were $6,000, the seats on the first floor being sold at $10 each and the boxes at $50. The theater cost $85,000, and seats 1,600.

"Marta of the Lowlands" is recalled as one of a number of plays wherein Mrs. Kalich tried to obtain a footing on the English-speaking stage. It surives hereabout as an item in the répertoire of the Chicago Opera under the title of "Tiefland," with music by Eugène d'Albert, a popular pianist of years ago.

¶ ¶ ¶

The College Theater stock-company has "A Bachelor's Romance" and "The Lightning Conductor" in preparation to follow "A Temperance Town," which is the bill this week.

"A Bachelor's Romance" may be recalled by ancients as one of the plays wherein the late Sol Smith Russell made money without much reason, and "A Temperance Town" as something wherewith Hoyt made the play-reporters believe that he was potentially a great dramatist, and caused them to beseech him, in print, to cut out the kidding and get down to serious work. The truth is that Hoyt's "serious" plays were quite ham even for their day.

¶ ¶ ¶

Edwin Forrest, the tragedian, it is said, sang the first Negro song ever sung on the American stage, and was the first to depict the dress, dialect, and manners of the darky.

¶ ¶ ¶

WENT INTO IT FROM CHICAGO

MISS PEGGY BERNIER

SHE'S something of a celebrity in Chicago, although the show in which she is performing is not to be made known here until Monday of next week: 'tis "Good News," to be given in the Selwyn. Miss Bernier had her start here: she is recalled for her participation in the diversions put on by Paul Ash, for whom she sang a year after leaving Al Jolson's chorus.

Or Play It Reverently.

"This 'Adam and Eve' by John Erskine will make a hot play if they don't go and spoil it."

"How could they spoil it?"

"Strange Interlude" Stirs Controversy

By Burns Mantle.

Proud of his parentage, doubly inspired by the "something to work for" he has needed, happily in love with Nina, Evans ceases to be a weakling in business and rapidly forges to the top of his profession. But Nina and Darrell, finding themselves hopelessly in love as a result of their sacrificial adventure, suffer torments of agony in holding to their high resolutions.

The boy grows to manhood much in the image that Nina has held of her soldier lover, but gradually his affection is absorbed by his sympathetic foster father and denied to both his mother and his real father.

As the play slips along to the conclusion of life for the three principals none of them has achieved the happiness that all have pursued so desperately. Evans dies of a stroke the day the son of whom he is so proud helps pull Yale to a varsity crew victory.

And Nina marries—not Darrell, but another old friend who has come to take image in her mind as her father, and thus to be removed from all contact with the world and the flesh that has proved her undoing in this strange interlude we know as life.

* *

O'Neill's Text Mature.

The text, as you may believe, is adult and bold in its naming of names and biological classifications. But it is a boldness the honest frankness of which serves as its own defense.

There are fine performances in the interpretation of "Strange Interlude," the finest of them being given by Lynn Fontanne as the unhappy Nina. Good actors, you will find, become great actors when given great parts to play, and great actors become inspired. Earl Larimore plays Evans, Glenn Anders the Darrell, and Tom Powers the fatherly friend.

I expect to see this curious play reduced to four hours' playing time, started at 7 p. m. and continued until 11 or 11:15 as soon as the attraction of the novelty wears off. And probably once it has passed the subscription lists of the Theater Guild, which makes the production, it will fall into place in the Guild repertory. I can't imagine that it will have much of a popular success for another decade or so.

* *

Another Aimee McPherson Play.

The only other theater event of any importance last week was the production of another drama seeking to capitalize the first page love adventures of Aimee Semple McPherson.

This one is called "Salvation," and has Pauline Lord as a mentally deficient heroine. At the age of 12 she suffers conversion and becomes a shouting revivalist. Exploited by a greedy mother, a circus promoter and a shrewd, wise cracking press agent, Bethany, the inspired one, rolls up a sizable fortune and, at 20, is in great demand. Then she falls in love with the scheming tenor of the hallelujah choir.

Outwitting her keepers, Bethany and the tenor are secretly married. But the business managers of Salvation, Inc., try to break up the match. From their wrangling the gidl learns for the first time of their purely mercenary interest in her and suffers hysterical collapse. Later she recovers, returns to Chicago, for one grand rehabilitation meeting and then walks out on the mess of them.

Sidney Howard and Charles MacArthur wrote "Salvation" and it should be a good play. But it isn't. Pauline Lord should also play it well. But she doesn't. So the hosts can go back to their hallelujahs in the McPherson temples. Their God has proved a jealous God and again put their enemies to rout. "Bless You, Sister" remember, was also a failure.

De Mille Turns Kliegs on Reform Schools

By Rosalind Shaffer

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Cecil De Mille is turning a spotlight on the reform schools of the nation in his "The Godless Girl." This picture will present to the film going public the result of research by De Mille's agents in widely distributed sections of the country in actual reformatories. The result is likely to make a stir. De Mille hopes his picture may do for American reform schools something of what Dickens' "Oliver Twist" did for the charity schools of England.

The back lot at the De Mille studio has been laid out as a huge reformatory. The yard of the institution has a fence supposed to be electrically charged, separating the boys and girls of the school. A guard in a tower, armed with a machine gun, overlooks the yard.

The "mud horse," an instrument of discipline discovered in one school, is shown in operation. It is a hand barrow which the boys to be disciplined load with rock, carry to the other end of the yard, dump, load again, carry back, till the time assigned is consumed.

Actual stocks of the sort used by our Puritan ancestors, strait-jackets, foot chains with iron rings with which squads of children are fastened together and to their beds at night, all are shown.

Such contrivances, designed to be used on dangerous juvenile criminals, were discovered, the De Mille studio announces, in actual use as a matter of course where children in one institution committed minor infractions of rules.

De Mille, at heart a crusader, is intensely interested in his subject. His daily routine finds him lunching on the set and discussing the work of the day with Jeanie MacPherson, who is the writer of the story. In the middle of the barren yard a dainty mahogany carved table is set, with its dish of spring flowers, lovely napery, colored glassware and silver and china for the noonday lunch of the famous director.

Marie Prevost is playing the rôle of one of the girls in the institution. Her dark hair has been bleached flaxen blonde for the part. She says it's a lot of fun at parties because some of her friends hardly recognize her. Lina Basquette has the leading feminine rôle, the girl whose love finds a way around the charged fence to the boy on the other side.

Foolers Fooled.

The departure of Blanche Mehaffey and her new husband, George J. Hausen, for the east, was celebrated by a few convivial friends before train time. Among the guests was Rosetta Duncan, who was the moving spirit in a gang that collected tin cans and wired them to the groom's car. Then the schemesters sped over and fixed it with a nearby traffic cop to hold the car with the cans so that the couple would miss their train.

The wily Hausen must have been on the alert, for when the cavalcade left the hotel it was discovered that the cans were wired to the car conveying the Duncan sister and her escort. The cop spotted the cans, stopped the car and gave the frantic Duncan and her escort a bad fifteen minutes, while the Mehaffey and Hausen equipage rolled on to the honeymoon train.

A Difficult Bit of Acting.

Lon Chaney is working on the film version of "Laugh, Clown, Laugh." A brief scene was glimpsed from behind encircling sets which disclosed Chaney going over the childhood relics of his adopted daughter.

The old man finally realizes that the young girl is more than a daughter to him, that he loves her madly. Loretta Young, a young actress barely 16, takes the rôle of the girl. She enters to find her adopted father fondling her first pair of dancing slippers. She, too, realizes the old man loves her and the acting of this most difficult situation between the two is exceptionally well done.

News of Films and Players.

An interesting angle on the Hickman trial has been the daily articles written by movie folk. One enterprising local editor secured the services of King Vidor, Adela Rogers St. John, Edgar R. Burroughs, and others, and the week's comic picture has been the spectacle of a local reporter whose job it is to herd the celebrities and get their copy to press.

A circus man flipping fish to a troupe of trained seals is the Hollywood simile for the affair. The reporter in such a position has to get the copy in in spite of expressed desires for conferences or other studio luxuries that spell delay, even if he has to write the stuff himself.

Tim McCoy, western star of M-G-M, says the Indian Minnehahas are simply going to the dogs. McCoy has just returned from a trip on which he stopped at several Indian reservations. The gals are cutting up all the old treasured Indian blankets into sport coats, bobbing their hair and using lip sticks.

"They'd a lot rather look like Clara Bow than Pocahontas," says McCoy.

Norma Shearer is busy making the theater scenes in her picture version of "Trelawny of the Wells," re-titled "The Actress," at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The scene is a beautiful conception of the old-time theater. Lighting fixtures between the boxes are crystal drop candelabra filled with burning candles. The audience shows costuming of a generation or more ago. On the stage Norma bows to her audienece in a leopard skin much more enveloping than a modern flapper's dress.

Dear Miss Tinée: In a review of "French Dressing" you said that H. B. Warner might have "it," but you couldn't see it. I think he has something better than "it." He is a real actor. If Clara Bow is a sample of "it," I don't care for "it." However, I imagine Mr. Warner was miscast in "French Dressing." From the name I shouldn't care for the picture, anyway, but I would imagine it would take a light comedian to play in it.

Did you see Mr. Warner in "Silence?" I thought he was wonderful in that. He was always one of my favorite stage actors and nearly always played detectives or gentlemen crooks (not that I believe there is such a thing as a "gentleman crook," but the kind they represent in stories is what I mean). I think those are the kind of parts he does best.

He was good in "Under Cover," "Among Those Present," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," etc. They so often miscast people in pictures that I don't believe half the casting directors know their business well.

I am anxious to see H. B. Warner in "Sorrell & Son." Bert Lytell is [illegible] other actor who is best in the [illegible] sort of pictures Warner [illegible] thought he was good in "Lady [illegible]ers," and that other tragic [illegible] world picture he played in.

I think Lois Wilson was [illegible] forsake the kind of parts [illegible] out for. I like her much better [illegible] kind of parts she used to play. [illegible] have plenty to play the other kind [illegible] is a relief to have a few to play [illegible] anly parts and you used to [illegible] depend on Lois Wilson, Irene Rich [illegible] Alice Joyce to look and act a lady con[illegible]vincingly. Maybe they [illegible] of one kind of part, but they had [illegible]ter stick to what they do well.

I liked Gilbert Roland [illegible] the start, but I liked his [illegible] "The Love Mart," best. I [illegible] sticks to that sort of a rôle. I [illegible] like to see Richard Dix playing a [illegible]iard, or Gilbert Roland a [illegible] Yankee.

Sincerely yours, G. C. S.

Editor's Note: It's always a [illegible]lating experience to get one of [illegible] letters, G. C. S.

Balzac and Follies-to-Opera Debut Divert Metropolitan

By Alfred Frankenstein.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—[Special Correspondence.]—Events at the Metropolitan Opera house include the American premiere of Franco-Alfano's one act opera, "Madonna Imperia," the debut of Grace Moore, this year's Follies-to-opera girl, and the first performance of the season of "The King's Henchman."

Alfano's new work is based upon the first of Balzac's "Droll Stories." Filippo Mala, a humble secretary, outwits a great lord to win the favor of the popular courtesan, Imperia, and even receives a blessing from an ununderstanding priest. Balzac's frankness is stepped down a bit in the libretto, but, even so, it is a rare bawdy comedy that emerges.

Alfano's score is a sort of Italianized Debussy, Debussy swollen and ardent, Debussy making nocturnal festival in the wine barrels and forgetting the clouds. And the Metropolitan did well by the score, with Maria Mueller as Imperia and Frederick Jagel as Mala.

* *

Ballyhoo Was Deserved.

Grace Moore made her first appearance as Mimi. There was much ballyhoo about her before and after the debut and, for once, most of it was deserved. Not that she is a great singer. The voice is a bit too underfed for that. But she is one of the best operatic actresses in the Metropolitan list.

Her work is calculated to make the character believable and, at the same time, to elucidate and make convincing the singing of music. Wherein she is a huge success and should continue to be so if the fact of that success does not lead to laziness and vocal and histrionic sloppiness and that, as you know, too often happens.

* *

"Henchman" Is Wagnerian.

It is, perhaps, a bit late in the day to write of "The King's Henchman." By now you know the story. It is "Tristan and Isolde" with the names changed. The music, too, is inescapably Wagnerian. The great burden of it is carried in the orchestra. Twists of instrumentation and the tang of tunes reflect the German. Heavy brasses utter fateful motives. Moments of tension are held by loud singing strings and broken by drum thrusts. Gently weaving figures reflect a forest.

It is not a stilted, objectionable Wagnerism. The Wagnerian method was the natural treatment for this Nordic tale. But the story of "The King's Henchman" is a tragedy and the music is not the big, tragic stuff another composer might have made of it.

The intense human emotions released by a love scene in moonlight Taylor could set down. But when the king sees his brother dead at his feet there is no breakup of the regal pose. The climax of tragedy where human experience dives out of the human sphere into something eternal and nameless could not be reached. One feels a striving toward it, but it dissolves in a scramble of scales and a cymbal crash.

CAVEMAN

EUGENE O'BRIEN

That is what Mae Tinée, years ago, termed him in an article in The Tribune; but she was writing of him as he was in films. Mr. O'Brien was back in a speaking-rôle in 1923, in the Princess, in something named "Steve": it may be remembered as something Mrs. Whiffin, also, was in. And this week he is in the bill in the Palace.

A Trifle Pessimistic.

"Everywoman" was the name of the play which made such a lasting impression on me. I saw this back in 1915 or 1916.

I was just starting out in the business world to make my own living, and as I look over the years gone by I have come to know how true to life was each character portrayed in this play.

There were youth and beauty. Both passed away to greed, vanity, and the one character which I shall never forget was "Nobody," portrayed by a man, and after each scene he would appear at the back of the stage with these words, "I am Nobody. Nobody cares for me."

How true to life! After youth, beauty and wealth are gone nobody cares for us. I would enjoy seeing this play again some day. E. H.

Never to Be Forgotten.

Of all the plays of recent years, to me the most outstanding one was the "Music Master," played by David Warfield.

The poor, shabby music master, the sweet old man, fighting poverty, struggling along to find his lost daughter, yet willing to give her up when he thinks it is for her happiness—that is a big lesson in unselfishness few people could hold to.

He was cheerful in all troubles, another lesson we all might heed, yet with it all he had a wonderful dignity.

His was a character we all admire, not only on the stage, but in real life, as well. David Warfield had both charm and a strong element of humor. He appealed to our sympathies, to our warm human emotions of compassion and affection. H. L. Z.

WHIRLIGIG

MISS GERTRUDE LEMMON

She's the principal dancer in "Just Fancy!"; and her whirling speciality on her toes is among the things in that diversion that are lustily applauded by the public.

Best Movies

If you will confide in us to the extent of telling what movie, in your opinion, rates above all the other movies you've seen, and also tell us why you think this particular movie is deserving of praise, we'll lend a sympathetic ear. And, what's more, we'll pay $1 for your letter if we print it. Address Best Movies, Chicago Tribune.

"The Merry Widow."

The best picture I have ever seen was "The Merry Widow," starring Mae Murray.

The story, more or less true to life, although changed a little from the book, was well directed and the scenery was wonderfully photographed, especially the early morning fog when Mae rushed to the duel.

Miss Murray made a sweet and demure girl in the first part and later a beautiful and decorative widow. The director let her dance, which she does so well, and toned down her acting and made a first class actress of her.

John Gilbert played the part of the prince with a real manner which added much to the enjoyment of the picture.

The closing scene, in the cathedral, when the new king and queen marched down the aisle, was in colors and made a beautiful finish to a wonderful picture. H. C.

* *

Theodore Roberts' Best Work.

The greatest movie I ever saw was "The Ten Commandments."

Theodore Roberts as Moses did a masterpiece of fine character acting.

The receding of the waters so that the Israelites could cross the Jordan and the rushing back of the waters just as the king's forces attempted to follow was wonderful.

Could anybody with a soul sit through a picture like this and then ruthlessly break any of the ten commandments? A. W.

The Finest of All.

"The King of Kings," seen last summer in Hollywood, is by far the greatest production of all time.

The acting of all the characters could not be bettered, the direction was the work of a master, the theme "the sweetest story ever told."

The depiction of the Christ by Mr. Warner was the greatest of them all. He was the Good Samaritan to all, sinner and good alike.

When it reaches Chicago, see it if you never see another movie. E. J. L.

A Wonderful Portrayal.

The play that stands out most vividly in my memory was the performance of "The Green Hat."

Katherine Cornell—what a beautiful, slim creature of love and tragedy she made! She dismissed her past amours with an indifferent shrug of her slim shoulder . . . and we, the audience, wondered why we ever did condemn with severity such amourous profligacy in other more realistic instances.

She made us throb achingly in response to the glorious, poignant love she bore Napier. We were awed at her accomplished motherhood, and suffered with her.

Then, that great magnificent gesture at the end! To brave death gladly so that the one she loved would remain to be loved by another.

I left the theater, the tears streaming down my cheeks, shamelessly, and a lump in my throat from the pity and beauty she invoked. F. G.

My Best Joke

Well Traveled.

A group of tourists was looking over the inferno of Vesuvius in full eruption.

"Ain't this just like hell?" spoke up a Yank.

"Ah, sese Americans," exclaimed a Frenchman, "where have they not been?" E. W.

And Why Not?

"Surely, Miranda, you're not going to marry again when the Lord just took Smith."

"Yes, I shuah am," replied Miranda. "As long as the Laud takes 'em, so will I." J. G.

Jones, while in Michigan met on the street his Scotch friend, McCarty, also a visitor, and noticed that McCarty was carrying a suit of clothes over his arm. They exchanged greetings and went on about their business. Later in the day, Jones again met McCarty, who still carried the suit over his arm.

"Why are you carrying that suit around?" asked Jones.

"Well," said McCarty, "I haven't been able to find the place I am looking for, but perhaps you can direct me. Just where can I find the Detroit Free Press?" G. R. P.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Races Co-operate on Lincoln's Birthday

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY'S anniversary of the birthday of Abraham Lincoln, who in 1863 freed the slaves, will be observed in Chicago and in many other cities as race relations Sunday. An exchange of Negro and white ministers in thirty-five churches of various denominations and in three of the Y. M. C. A. centers will be made. Race relations Sunday has been observed for several years past on the Sunday nearest the Lincoln anniversary, but the fact that this Sunday is the actual date is expected to give the interchange of services special interest.

Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of the University of Chicago is chairman of the commission on interracial relations of the Chicago Church federation. In issuing a statement announcing the services today, Dr. Mathews says, "America has made more progress in the last few years in the solving of the problem of race relations than ever before in its history. The problem used to be called the Negro problem, but with intelligent study it is found to be just as much a white as a colored problem. Political and social progress alone will never solve it. It is a task which falls primarily to the churches.

"Today there are in the great lakes states 500,000 Negroes, nearly 200,000 in Chicago. The interracial commission of the Chicago Church federation feels that its most effective work can be done in getting the races acquainted and in informing each group of the advancement of the other."

At 7:45 this evening at the Olivet Baptist church, 31st street and South Park way, the Harmon awards given to three Negroes in this vicinity who have distinguished themselves will be presented. The recipients and the field in which they have won the award are: Anthony Overton, banker; Edward Scott, artist; Eric Walrond, literature. Dean Mathews will be chairman and present the awards.

Home-made Remedy Stops Cough Quickly
Finest cough medicine you ever used. Family supply easily made. Saves about $2.

You might be surprised to know that the best thing you can use for a severe cough, is a remedy which is easily prepared at home in just a few moments. It's cheap, but for prompt results it beats anything else you ever tried. Usually stops the ordinary cough or chest cold in 24 hours. Tastes pleasant—children like it, and it is pure and good.

Pour 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle; then fill it up with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or use clarified honey, instead of sugar syrup. Thus you make a full pint—a family supply—but costing no more than a small bottle of ready-made cough syrup.

And as a cough medicine, there is really nothing better to be had at any price. It goes right to the spot and gives quick, lasting relief. It promptly heals the inflamed membranes that line the throat and air passages, stops the annoying throat tickle, loosens the phlegm, and soon your cough stops entirely. Splendid, too, for bronchitis, hoarseness and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of Norway pine extract and palatable guaiacol, famous for healing the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

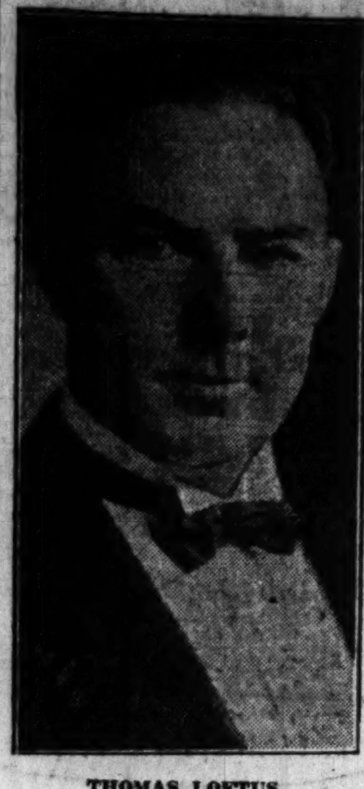
IN RECITAL



THOMAS LOFTUS.

Mr. Loftus, a baritone, will appear at Orchestra hall this afternoon. His program will contain various operatic arias and lieder, but he is making something of a specialty of Irish songs, for the performance of which he enjoys an enviable reputation.

English Hunt Ball Is Colorful Event

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—When one recalls the part played in the social annals of America by the "four hundred" it is amusing to discover that the guests to the extremely smart Melton Mowbray hunt ball—the social peak and pinnacle of the English hunting world—were strictly limited to—four hundred.

The shade of the late Ward McAllister, who invented the phrase for the guidance of America's society leaders, must have been quite pleased.

It was a very gay affair, with the prince of Wales, the duke of York and Prince Henry as the hosts in chief; there were numerous large house parties in the neighborhood and the ball itself, which took place in the venerable Corn Exchange of Melton Mowbray, was a delightful kaleidoscope of color. The pink hunting coats of the men, faced with the blue of the Quorn, the yellow of the Cottesmore and the red of the Belvoir hunt, contrasting with black evening dress and the sparkling silver frocks of the women, made an inspiring scene.

Among the guests were the James Simpson Jrs., Lord and Lady Beatty with their son, Viscount Borodale; the Baroness Ravensdale, who had a large party at Sandy Lodge; Maj. and Alexandra Metcalfe, and a number of prominent New York and Philadelphia visitors. One London paper, commenting upon the number of Americans present, remarked that the "fifty friends" of the prince of Wales frequently appear to be "mostly Americans."

News of Mary Borden.

Mrs. E. L. Spears [Mary Borden, the novelist] has been very "seedy" ever since Christmas and is leaving this week for the south of France, to be gone until Easter. Algernon Blackwood, the novelist with such a strong bent for mysticism, will be her guest. She is taking her small son with her, but her daughter, Joyce, who is studying at the Slade School of Art, and the other girls who are at St. Paul's, will remain in England.

Mrs. Charles Dennistoun Burney, wife of Commander Burney, M. P., she who was Miss Gladys High of Chicago and is now, if you please, chairman of the women's advisory committee of the Conservative party, is in America as this is written. I doubt if she can stay very long, for her political duties are growing steadily heavier now that her chief, Mr. Baldwin, has set politics aboiling with the intimation that there may be a general election in the not too distant future.

Mrs. Burney's task would be, in that event, to "get out the feminine vote," for king, country and Mr. Baldwin. Commander Burney is the Conservative representative from Uxbridge.

Run on Scarves.

Black, white and red scarves have become almost an epidemic among us.

So much so, indeed, that the alumni of St. Paul's school have risen up in their wrath to protest against them, for black, white and red are the colors of St. Paul's school. Nobody else, it is argued, should wear them.

The explanation of the epidemic is a curious one. Black, white and red are, it seems, the colors of the monarchist party in Germany and the scarves were made to be worn by German monarchists. The movement fizzled out, whereupon several thousand dozen boxes of the scarves were exported to London. The bright colors, the low price and the recent cold snap, have done the rest.

English Musicians Aroused by Sir Thomas Beecham's Spanking

IT may be remembered that Sir Thomas Beecham, when he landed in New York, made disparaging remarks about musical conditions in England, said Philip Hale recently in the Boston Herald. Bitter works escaped the barrier of his teeth, to borrow the Homeric phrase. It was natural that English musicians should resent Sir Thomas' remarks.

At a conference of the Incorporated Society of Musicians in London last month, Dr. E. Markham Lee thus freed his mind: "It may be that we musicians in this country do not take Sir Thomas Beecham as seriously as the American public do, but I think it is a most painful thing that he should go over there and cry stinking fish. (Hear, hear.) I think it is a most unpardonable thing that he should say in America that we are the laziest people on earth and that our music is comatose." Dr. Lee then proposed a resolution to the effect that English musicians were not in a comatose condition but were very much alive.

* *

Sir Thomas told us when he was in Boston that London's orchestral men were of the first quality, but their pay for playing in symphony concerts was comparatively small, that few concerts of this nature were given in a season so it was not surprising that they sought work in film theaters and organized little companies of their own. Rehearsals of symphonic works for this and other reasons were necessarily few.

* *

Norman O'Neill, a composer of no mean order, had this to say recently about jazzing the classics. He began by remarking that the makers of popular dance tunes, frankly owning up to a lack of original ideas, took an existing air and jazzed it. He had heard Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me" jazzed out of hearth and home and turned into a commonplace tune by a still more commonplace composer. "I am no enemy of what is called ugliness when it is sincere, because then it often becomes attractive, but when an insane uproar is poured out like a foul smell by a jazz band, then it is offensive, as it is not made with any artistic intention. I wonder if some of our modern jazz merchants and composers realize that, in spite of saxophones, savisophones, and xylophones, their tunes might be as old as ancient Rome, and that their syncopations and harmonies do not make them new at all. But perhaps I do them an injustice, as they so frankly quote from the great masters occasionally."

Sick Stomach Teaches Her a Good Lesson

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy and a bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. I feel greatly relieved since taking your purely vegetable laxative."

To Regain a Healthy Girlish Complexion

If you would have a clear, fresh, girlish complexion, use ordinary mercolized wax as it produces natural skin beauty. The wax, procurable at any drug store, completely absorbs a sickly, aged, rough, coarse or blotched skin, revealing the healthy young skin underneath. Its work is done so gradually, day by day, that no inconvenience is caused. Mercolized wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines, use as face lotion 1 ounce powdered saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel.

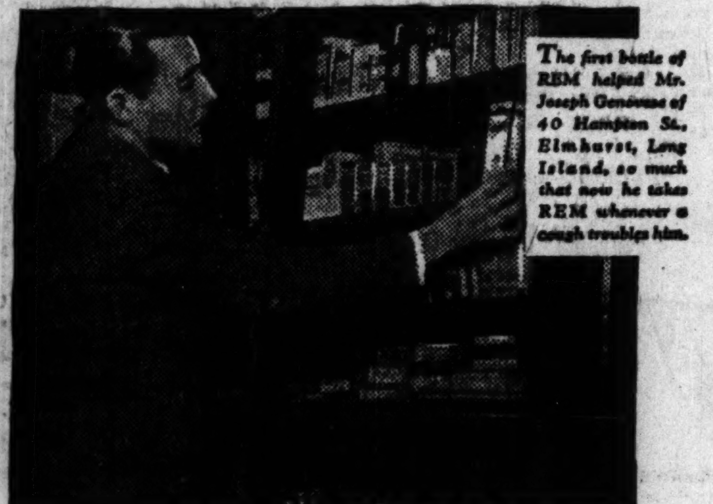
SCOTT'S EMULSION



The first bottle of REM helped Mr. Joseph Genovese of 40 Hampton St., Elmhurst, Long Island, so much that now he takes REM whenever a cough troubles him.

Druggists get coughs, too-- but this one learned how to get rid of his

"Several years ago," says Mr. Genovese, "I had a cough and decided to try REM. I got it at the Elmhurst Pharmacy on Baxter Ave., out in Elmhurst, L. I. The first bottle helped me so much that I was very well pleased with it. Ever since then, whenever I have a cough or feel that I am getting one, I take a little REM, and it's never failed to help me. I've had quicker results with REM than anything I've ever used for a cough."

All cough remedies are not alike—you'll realize that when you try REM. It clings to your throat, soothes the irritation, quiets the cough. REM is pleasant to take and perfectly harmless.

Insist on REM! Remember, its effectiveness is largely due to a special ingredient, not in ordinary cough syrups.

Bridal Couple Journey to Distant Timbuctoo

Activities Lessen; Date Books Show Many Blank Spaces

By Mildred Jaklon.

ALAS and alack! The composite social calendar has finally reached that state of blankness dreaded by those of us whose pens scribble of the doings of the town's smart folk. Except for the second of the three lectures being sponsored by the Lake Shore League of Women Voters tomorrow afternoon and the benefit card party at the residence of Mrs. Ralph C. Otis on Tuesday, date books for the week will remain barren of all but very small parties. The league's lecture by Kenneth Colegrove of Northwestern university is to be given at the residence of Mrs. Albert Evans of 233 East Walton place, and the subject is "The Work of Congress." The Chicago Lighthouse will receive the proceeds from the affair at Mrs. Otis'.

One of those intriguing maps with pertinent parts set with tiny flags or bright-headed pins would show that Chicago's social activities have not ceased but are being merged with those in various other parts of the globe, Florida, California, South Carolina, and various spots across the waters would indicate where the Windy City is represented by its fashionable denizens. In Florida and those enticing waters just beyond [where liquids more enticing to some than water may be consumed sans self-consciousness] are those who like the rather gay sort of a time.

Chicagoans in Palm Beach include Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers, the Franklin P. Smiths, Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mr. and Mrs. William Waller, who have places of their own; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klotz, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Chadwick, Mr. and Mrs. John F. L. Curtis, and the Orville Thompsons, all of whom head for the south annually.

At Aiken, S. C., is the set that takes its equestrianship seriously in the form of polo. The Austin H. Niblacks, the Benjamin Leslie Behrs, and the R. R. McCormicks are foremost among the polo set there.

In Arizona also the horse is the mainspring of interest. The Joseph T. Bowens spend most of the winter at their ranch at Castle Hot Springs, and the Chicago colony that spends most of its days in the saddle is large.

The California enthusiasts are all for the sunshine and peaceful existence, which they say can best be appreciated in the west. They are too numerous to mention, as are the countless citizens who have gone or who are going abroad.

MRS. H. PICKETT WITHERS and MISS LOUISE TYLER.

Mrs. H. Pickett Withers (Margaret Pirie) was last year's president of the Service club, and Miss Louise Tyler was chosen for the job this year at Monday's annual luncheon.

The Sherfesees Cross the Sahara on Honeymoon

By Mme. X.

THAT much discussed bridal couple, Mr. and Mrs. Forsyth Sherfesee, whose romantic marriage early in December was front page news for several days—than which in newspaper circles there is no greater honor—are now well on their way to Timbuctoo. The chances are that you don't know where Timbuctoo is. You've probably a vague idea as to its being somewhere in darkest Africa. Its main association in the minds of most of us is that it rhymes with "hymn book, too," and that it has to do with a classic ditty in which a lion or a tiger of Timbuctoo swallowed a missionary and his hymn book, too.

The Sherfesees sailed not long ago from Marseilles to Algiers, whence they are making their way, partly by automobile and partly on camel back, southward across that mighty waste of sand, the Sahara desert, to their destination. To go there was Mr. Sherfesee's idea. He suggested it as a refuge from a world that, as Wordsworth expressed it, "is too much with us. Early and late, spending and giving, we waste our days." Mrs. Sherfesee, who is one of the greatest natural travelers of our time, eagerly agreed with him that this distant country held out hopes for a complete change from the dining and wining which absorbs so much of the energy of civilized man today. So thither they are going.

By night they set up their tents on those limitless sands under those splendid stars. By day they face the sun, as their ships of the desert lope, with long, swaying strids, ever southward. One has to be a good sailor to travel mile after mile on camels. Many a mortal who can successfully sail the open seas succumbs to the lateral jerk to which a camel rider is subject by that large, splay footed quadruped.

* *

A Sojourn in Italy.

The Sherfesees were for a month or so at Rapallo, that lovely Italian resort a little south of Genoa and overlooking the Mediterranean. Late in December they motored across the mountains, passing through Pistoja and Lucca, to spend New Years with the John A. Carpenters at Florence. There they were also much entertained by their many other friends, for Florence is thick with Chicagoans or ex-Chicagoans. Before sailing from Marseilles for the wilds of Africa, the Sherfesees stopped over long enough at Mentone to visit Mrs. Sherfesee's brother, Adolph Borie, who has a villa there. He is now accompanying them to Timbuctoo. So it is a trio that will soon knock at the doors of the inhabitants of that remote region, if they have doors there.

How the swift advance of so-called civilization is shrinking this earth from its once impressive size into one of the smallest of the heavenly bodies! It is a much simpler matter to go to Timbuctoo, or to East Africa, or to the upper peaks of the Himalayas, nowadays, than it was a couple of generations ago to travel from New York to the Rocky mountains. It is no great mental stunt to conceive of the approaching time when the globe will become too crowded for comfort.

A Month of Holidays.

This, the shortest month of the twelve, has more holidays or semi-holidays than any other. There are three festivals and one fast day. Today is Lincoln's birthday, a day which should be writ high on our national calendar, for of all that this nation has produced in the way of great men, he is the greatest. He was born Feb. 12, 1809, near Hodgenville, Hardin county, Kentucky.

Next Tuesday is, among the young, one of the most popular festivals of our race, namely, St. Valentine's day. Long, long ago Feb. 14 was set apart for the commemoration of, not one, but two saints Valentine. Just how or why the same date should have developed into its present mode of observance, history does not say. But in some way the ancient Roman Lupercalian feast, which was dedicated to the great god Pan, became mixed up with the so-called birthday of these two highly respectable, but not romantically inclined saints. The date has to do with the advent of spring. In the countries in which arose the festival, spring comes earlier than it does hereabouts.

The third and fourth of February's four notable events come together this year, for Ash Wednesday falls on Feb. 22, which as we all know, is Washington's birthday. With Ash Wednesday comes in the forty-day season of fasting and prayer still important in many churches, though not so generally observed as it was one or two generations ago. The word comes from the old English word, "Lencten," meaning "spring." The "spring fast" dropped the latter word. In the Christian church this period of abstinence and prayer dates back to the third century A. D.

George Washington, whose natal day is celebrated as a national holiday, was born Feb. 22, 1732, at Bridges Creek, Westmoreland county, Virginia. What he meant to his country, to his time, and to all history is too well known to need any record here. It is, indeed, a date well worthy a national holiday.

On Shrove Tuesday.

On Shrove Tuesday, which falls on Feb. 21, and which once was a day given over to especial festivities but is now not so widely celebrated, the women in charge of the civic fund of the Women's City club have taken over the Irish Players, who begin an engagement at the Blackstone theater next week. Sean O'Casey's "The Plough and the Stars" will be presented. This was the favorite of the company's performances in New York, where they have had a long run lately.

To add to the receipts of the evening and to the flavor of the occasion, the women in charge are arranging to have a corps of young and lovely maidens selling Shrove Tuesday pancakes and also a delicacy called "spuds," which are tasty confections made of cocoanut and cinnamon and shaped and tinted to resemble Irish spuds, the native name for potatoes. Mrs. Hermon B. Butler is chairman of the event and Mrs. Louise Rogers and Mrs. James C. Weiss are in active charge of the affair.

Old Residents Move North.

The gradual but unmistakable northward trend of old residents on the lower north side of the city, that once fashionable region that used to reach from the Skinner house on the southwest corner of Ontario and Rush streets to the Potter Palmers' Norman towers on the Lake Shore drive, is marked by the recent removal of the establishments of two well known social leaders to the apartment building that stands on the corners of Astor, North State, and Schiller streets. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman have leased for a long term of years the southeast ground floor of these apartments, while Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann will be established next winter in the one on the same floor on the southwest corner of the structure, facing State street. This latter flat was occupied years ago by Dr. Arnold C. Klebs.

The Colemans have been so long associated with their attractive and hospitable home on Rush street that it will be hard for their many friends to think of them as being anywhere else. Mrs. Coleman's step-children gave the Rush street house to her twenty-five years ago. They were the grandchildren of one of Chicago's well known pioneers, the late Silas B. Cobb, and inherited quite a good deal of money from him.

Mrs. Coleman has been busy for several months decorating and arranging her new home, which promises to be even more delightful than her old one. The neighborhood is one of the most desirable residence districts in Chicago. Among her neighbors will be the Joseph T. Ryersons, the William McCormick Blairs, the Mitchell Follansbees, the Robert Dunhams, the Arthur Bissells, the Hale Holdens, the Ernest Grahams, the Howard Gillettes, the Potter Palmers, the R. R. McCormicks, Mrs. Joseph Bowen, Mrs. Jacob Baur, the William O. Goodmans, the James B. Wallers, the John Bordens, Edward H. Bennett, and Edward T. Blair.

Gradually Business (with a big B) is pushing residents out of a once delightful, friendly, and fashionable neighborhood. The only ones left of the large and influential colony that once inhabited that lower north side district are mainly members of the Chicago Medicis, the great McCormick clan. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hall McCormick still occupy their house on the corner of Erie and Cass streets.

A block to the east of them Mrs. Emmons Blaine continues to live, when here, in her well known and attractive abode on the corner of Rush and Erie streets. Backing up to the south of her is the spacious dwelling of the Hamilton McCormicks, now occupied by their youngest son, Alister McCormick, and his wife and two youngsters, while across the way from Mrs. Blaine the fine old brown stone mansion built by her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick, still stands alone in a half block of land, dominating as of old the entire territory. No one lives in it at the moment, but it is always ready for Harold McCormick when he comes here for his increasingly intermittent sojourns. Across to the west on Huron street and facing St. James' church is the large and fine home of Cyrus Hall McCormick. Next door to him, on the west, in the old Julian Rumsey house, the John H. Winterbothams now live, while to the east of the McCormicks are the young George Paepkes.

These households are all that is left of that once populous and popular neighborhood. Gone are the Henry W. Kings, the William G. McCormicks, the Dudley Wilkinsons, the Watson Blairs, the W. W. K. Nixons, the Charles B. Kings, the George Rumseys, the Cyrus Adamses, the Chester M. Dawes, the S. H. Kerfoots, Mrs. William Blair, and all the rest of that age and generation, men and women who lived as ardently and usefully as any who now take their places. Veritably, Chicago is acquiring a venerable and historic air.

New Building Proposed.

Apropos of which is the proposed new Historical Society building, which looms up as a coming feature of our native landscape. Charles B. Pike, the society's president, and the board of trustees who are planning to erect it in Lincoln park, are formulating plans which promise soon to house it in a handsome and modern structure. The society has some rare and valuable possessions, which cannot, for lack of space, be shown to the public in the present house on Dearborn avenue and Ontario street. Especially is it rich in Lincolniana.

One of its most precious treasures is the old plaid shawl which was such a well known part of Lincoln's attire whenever the weather was cold or inclement. He wore it around his shoulders like a large and enveloping scarf. When he visited his civil war generals, as he often did late at night, he was almost always wrapped up in this strange and protecting garment, out of which his pale, gaunt face and tall beaver hat emerged amid the encircling shadows.

This is only one of innumerable souvenirs of this stately and appealing personality. The bed he died on is another precious possession. Many other equally poignant and closely associated articles that will bring him to mind will be displayed in the new museum.

The Jack and Jill Theater.

For many months I have passed and gazed with curiosity at a gay little doorway on Rush street just north of Walton place that announces itself as the Jack and Jill theater. Whatever it appeared to be it was certainly something quite different from the old bootlegging establishment which once held sway there. Children came in and out of it and a nice looking young woman seemed always writing in a book at a table visible through the window. Then, out of a clear sky, young Mrs. Charles Barney Cory Jr. called me up and undertook to enlist my somewhat jaded sympathies in the Jack and Jillers.

At first I did not see it plainly. It looked like just one more enterprise to provide occupation for the unoccupied. Then I visited the place and found an enthusiast, Miss Marie Agnes Foley, engaged in creating an outlet for the imagination of youth, that flaming, untamed quality that either turns them into useful citizens or into young bandits. It is that quality which Captain and Mrs. Bradley at Allendale Farm understand so well and handle so successfully.

Romance is youth's bread of life. Feed it to them in wholesome quantities and the young thrive on it. Deny it them and they go forth in search of it in the guise of juvenile highwaymen. Eat of it in this form and they become poisoned and no longer are desirable citizens. So, such an enterprise as this little theater fills a need which only those who have made a study of the upspringing generation appreciate.

Miss Foley undertakes to train lads and lassies to act good plays in this little shrine of drama and to present them to their public. They flock to the place from all over the city and seem to delight in the opportunity to soak themselves in such rôles as are permitted to them. They must be of varying ages, to judge from the plays on their programs. For their more grown-up audiences and players they present Ibsen's "Doll House," "The Comedy of the Mirror," "The Willow Plate," "The Village School or Matsu, the Pine Tree." These are presented Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings. On Saturday and Sunday afternoons "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and such plays are given by and for the younger set.

* *

Seeking More Money.

What the Jack and Jill players are seeking is a better financial foundation and a larger acquaintance from the public. On the board of advisers are the Mesdames Botsford Young, F. M. Taber, Arthur Dixon, C. G. Christensen, W. Norman Graham, Carlton Washburn, Hollister Sturges, E. R. Fifield, and Miss Alice Gerstenberg. Mrs. Eric Gerstenberg is head of the membership committee and young Mrs. Cory is managing the publicity. The Parents and Teachers' association and various women's clubs and civic associations are becoming interested in the society.

A visit to the little theater as it is today shows a vibrating group of boys and girls so occupied with what they are doing, rehearsing, trying out rôles, discussing scenery, and so forth, that they pay absolutely no heed to casual visitors. That it means something vital to them is evident at a glance. The main floor of the modest structure stretches from the front door to the stage at the rear. Curiously ornate and twisted columns seem to support the ceiling. The place is clean, though the air is none too fresh. Many people have breathed it and there does not seem much ventilation. But this does not appear to dull the enthusiasm. There are plans for a fine and spacious theater. These were presented in last Sunday's W. G. N. But the enterprise needs a larger, firmer support than it now has to realize this. Those interested in the welfare of the young should look into the Jack and Jill theater.

Upton Close Lectures.

Apropos of matters theatrical was the luncheon given last Monday by the Chicago Drama league in the Stevens hotel ballroom, when Upton Close was guest of honor. Mrs. Howard L. Willert, president of the league, presided at the speaker's table, with Mr. Close at her right. After luncheon he gave a talk on Chinese plays and players. Both are radically different from our occidental idea of what these should be. It would, I think, be hard for one of us really to enjoy a Chinese performance, or for the Chinese to get any genuine pleasure out of our dramatic presentations. The basis of theirs is the utterly artificial and symbolic, while we try to render the actual and realistic.

About 400 people were present. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Silas Strawn, Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mrs. Henry Gilbert, Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee, Miss Mary Newberry, Miss Nellie Carpenter, Miss Emily Larned, Arthur Wheeler and Frederick Tuttle.

The Drama league has much achievement to its credit in the twenty-five years of its existence. Twelve years ago it established the late Miss Bertha Iles in her splendid work in the summer theater on the Municipal pier. Chicago suffered a great loss when she died last autumn. Under what auspices this enterprise will go on without her I don't know.

In that delightful book, "Up from Bloomsbury Square," George Arliss ascribes his success in his most celebrated rôle, Disraeli, in the play of that name to the Chicago Drama league. He opened here in that play many years ago. It was his first attempt at starring. For several weeks the play did not seem to get hold of the theater going public. With dismay Mr. Arliss saw himself returning to being merely support for such well known actresses as Mrs. Fiske and Henrietta Crosman. Then the Chicago Drama league discovered him and drew the attention of their members and those of the Chicago Woman's club to his performances. That started his success and for the [illegible] years he played that rôle and [illegible] alone to capacity houses.

The Drama league also founded [illegible] much needed institution, the Charlotte Cushman club on East [illegible] street, which furnishes shelter [illegible] pleasant surroundings for visiting actresses. Decidedly the league has functioned to the advantage of both [illegible] stage and the community.

Forty-five Clubs Will Co-operate to Show Garden Skill

By Kate Webber.

AN ART salon, featuring flower and garden pictures and outdoor decorative scenes, also a tea room will be additional star attractions at the Chicago Garden and Flower show to be held March 24 to April 1 at the Sherman hotel. Mrs. Frederick Fisher of Lake Bluff, president of the Garden Club of Illinois, will have as co-chairmen for the painting exhibit, Mrs. Johnston Bowman of Glencoe and Mrs. Edward Brion of Evanston. Mrs. James H. Burdette will head a committee of club members who will operate the tea room daily. Profits from this venture will be devoted to a series of lectures sponsored by the state organization.

Forty-five garden clubs will stage this tournament of gardening skill, which will include the following four distinct contests:

1. Miniature landscape designs in which model suburban homes and gardens suitable for lots 75x150 feet will be built in miniature, but in exact scale and detail and judged on the merits of the design and planting.

2. Shadow box arrangements of flowers in vases, bowls, or baskets, to be judged on artistic composition.

3. Table decorations for an informal economy luncheon, with the value of linen and service limited, to be judged on the artistic skill displayed in composition and color harmony.

4. Decorative arrangements of dormant or forced cuttings from shrubs, herbs, trees, etc., in bud and leaf, with flowers barred.

* *

Entries by Clubs.

Except for class four, entries will be by clubs, not by individuals; thus the combined floral skill of Lake Forest will be represented by one exhibit in each class, to compete for honors with the entries from Barrington, Wheaton, Glencoe, Beverly Hills, Flossmoor, and thirty-nine others. The clubs have more than 1,000 members, all of whom will contribute to the contest.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Frederick Fisher of Glencoe, president of the Garden Club of Illinois, which is a federation to which most of the garden clubs belong.

"This year will see twice as many garden clubs competing in the show as took part last year," said Mrs. Fisher. "New clubs are being organized constantly. We have a definite purpose, which is to arouse the public to a consciousness of ugliness in outdoor surroundings and to teach them how this ugliness can be changed into beauty. It is our dream to make the state we live in a lovely garden from north to south and east to west. The place to begin is in our own home grounds.

* *

Educational Benefits.

"Our most important work is to educate ourselves and others to recognize correct standards of beauty and methods of achieving it. The contests which have been planned for the Chicago garden and flower show will be highly educational, both to those who take part and those who view our work. The flower show is our greatest single opportunity to place before the public concrete examples of how beauty is attained. We shall do our best to make our exhibits a credit to Chicago."

Throughout the show garden talks will be given four times a day, under the direction of a garden club committee. Every lecture will be illustrated with stereoptican slides in color or by moving pictures.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE long time member and the committee chairman were talking about a donation the club had made to a proposed civic center.

"I've heard two of our members object because Mrs. Barney insisted on knowing all about the proposition before the vote was taken," said the committee chairman, "but I think she was right."

"We certainly should know about anything in which we put our money," agreed the long time member.

"Mrs. Freeby seemed to take the questioning as a personal matter because she had introduced the motion for the donation. She sputtered about it all the way from the assembly hall to the dressing room. I overheard her say that one would think it was her own money that Mrs. Barney was spending."

"She was right there," returned the long time member, "for Mrs. Barney would be just as careful about spending the club's money as she would about spending her own."

"If I had a really wild scheme to promote, Mrs. Freeby would be the first one I'd try to interest in it. Did you ever hear of the Sunshine league she encouraged the clubs to support several years ago?"

"I may have at the time, but I've forgotten what it was all about," answered the long time member.

"The league was formed with the end in view of getting more sunshine for the human race—more windows, more glass doors, more sun porches."

"Wasn't that the one that advocated having glass roofs for schools and factories?"

"Yes, and they actually collected money from a few clubs to promote legislation to that end," recalled the committee chairman.

"I remember that I thought at the time that some glass manufacturer must be behind the movement. What became of the league and the money?"

"It must have failed to get support, for it died as suddenly as it was born. I heard that some of the money was returned to the donors."

"When I think of it, I'm glad we have a woman like Mrs. Barney as finance chairman," voiced the long time member. "I'm quite sure that no Sunshine league could get past her scrutiny."

Question.

"If a woman is elected president of a club and resigns after serving a month because she has a chance to go to Europe for a year is she a past president of her club and entitled to the full honors of that position?

"ETTA M. P."

She was elected and served. If it was only for a month she is a past president and entitled to all the honors you give to your past presidents.

Question.

"In a club where both men and women belong how can the offices be divided equally between them?

"GENE P."

Reply.

Alternate—a man for president one year, and a woman the next year. Other offices the same. A similar club has two presidents—a man and a woman. They preside at alternate meetings.

Question.

"Do women's clubs have to pay taxes on their buildings? MRS. G."

Reply.

Buildings owned and used by clubs that are not for profit are usually tax free.

Palm Beach Season Will Be Lengthy One

By Nancy Randolph.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 11.—[Special Correspondence.]—There is every indication now that the season this year will continue far into March. Once upon a time the season proper began about the 15th of January and stopped abruptly after Washington's birthday.

But Palm Beach has become so popular that a great demand has come into being for a longer season. Not until after April does the weather become too hot to be comfortable, if indeed, it ever really does. The only drawback to Palm Beach as a year round residence is the plague of mosquitoes and bugs that arrive with the summer proper.

However, the season being in full swing at present, plans are made for parties that will be held well into March. Concerts are quite the thing, and many exhibitions of portraits are being held.

* *

Paradise for Artists.

This, naturally is the artist's paradise. The lighting is splendid all day long, and the subjects are all about. One notable artist in Palm Beach at present whose charming personality has got her many sittings is Mary McKinnon of Chicago. Already she has done a pastel of Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche, is doing one of Mrs. Stotesbury and has achieved a deserved social success. Her exhibition of portraits at the Everglades club was most successful. The patronesses included Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, Mrs. Alexander Revell, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Mrs. Howard Major, and Mrs. Sterling Postley.

The Breakers beach and promenade in the late morning continues to be the magnet that draws all society. It is, however, frightfully crowded. Nowhere else does so great a crowd of strollers and bathers gather, and for that reason, perhaps, many notables are choosing less congested spots to bathe.

Of course, the exceedingly exclusive Bath and Tennis club has its crowd that lingers all day long. Offering as it does a pool, tennis, and wide porticoes for luncheon, there is no reason for its members to go elsewhere. The youngest horde are ever to be seen there, sporting about in the waters of the pool under the eagle eyes of an instructor, while their elders sit and watch. Among these notables to be are: Christine Cromwell, daughter of the J. H. R. Cromwells; Gloria Van Riper, Mrs. Kenneth Van Riper's young one; Anthony J. Drexel Biddle III., who bids fair to rival father "Tony" and Grandfather Maj. Anthony as an athlete; Gloria Baker, Mrs. R. T. Baker's child, and many others.

* *

Luncheon Parties Popular.

Large luncheon parties are quite the thing. The guests arrive early, have a dip in the pool and then linger on after lunch, talking or playing bridge, or simply doing nothing, a state of existence that is most popular in Palm Beach.

This last week there were many such parties at the Bath and Tennis. Ella Herbert was the guest of Mrs. E. Clarence Jones, while Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, the erstwhile Irene Castle of terpsichorean fame, was with the John F. Jelke Jrs., as were Helen and Florence Mitchell. James H. R. Cromwell had with him the Frederick Barbours, while his stepfather, E. T. Stotesbury, brought his house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Saxham E. Drury. Others who have been at the Bath and Tennis this week are Dr. and Mrs. Alexander Hamilton Rice, who recently arrived on their yacht, Eleanor IV., and were the guests of Fifi Widener Holden and her husband, Milton Holden.

Then again, society is taking to some of the smaller beach clubs. The Sea Spray club, for instance, has become very popular. It has many of the noted theatrical celebrities among its members and they form a large section of true Palm Beach society. One day this week, being there for a beach luncheon as well as a dip, I saw Frazier Jelke, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Weston, and Mr. and Mrs. Milton Holden, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Frazee, George Gershwin, Irving Caesar, Mr. and Mrs. Sam H. Harris, Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld, who usually sticks to the Bath and Tennis, Katherine Von Heukelom, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Somers Roche.

Musical matters get much attention. The Society of Arts of Palm Beach, of which Edward T. Stotesbury is president, Paris Singer, vice president and the directors, John F. Harris, Harris Hammond, Anthony Kuser, John S. Pillsbury, and Henry Silgeman is sponsoring many recitals.

The first was that of the Cleveland Symphony orchestra, which was given in the Paramount theater, the decorations of which were done by Josef Urban. There were many notable folk present and the audience almost in its entirety attended the supper Mrs. Stotesbury gave in honor of the orchestra after the concert.

This took place, naturally, at El Mirasol, the foremost show place of Palm Beach. Supper was served from a long table down the center of the huge ballroom, spread with lace and lighted by many candles in tall sconces. Among those present on that occasion were Margaret Matzenauer, Mr. and Mrs. Henry E. Bemis, Mr. and Mrs. Howard C. Brokaw, Mrs. Irving Hall Chase, Alice Delamar, Major General and Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. George Dewitt, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Donohue, William Henry Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gair Macomber, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Phipps, Mr. and Mrs. Paris Singer, Mrs. Henry Rea, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Pillsbury, Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Yarnall, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Phipps, and the Right Honorable and Mrs. Rederick Edward Guest.

Another musical event is the recital at the Everglades club given by Bernard Olshansky, the Russian baritone. The patrons, since there is always a list of sponsors for events of this kind, included Mrs. Hugh Dillman, Mrs. Paris Singer, Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. Niles S. Babbitt, Mrs. Frederick M. Gould, Mrs. Henry Ellsworth Bemis, Mrs. Alexander H. Revell, Mrs. Anthony R. Kuser, Mrs. Frank G. Macomber, Mrs. A. Howes Torrey, Mrs. Kenneth Van Riper, Mrs. John R. Bryden, and Mrs. Irving Hall Chase.

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Child Training Conference Calls Out Many Parents

A SCORE of prominent educators and authorities on child training from all parts of the country will address the second biennial midwest conference and school for parents, to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the Palmer house under the auspices of the Chicago Association for Child Study and Parent Education.

Character development will be the central theme for the conference. Lectures and discussions will center around the question of the scientific upbuilding of character from infancy to adolescence. Speakers engaged for the three-day program will show the relation and importance of discipline and guidance, the effect of the emotional life of child and parent, the influence of ideals, of handicraft, recreation, and religion. Particular emphasis is to be placed on the question of religious education.

* *

Registrations Are Filed.

Parents from all parts of the middle west are making reservations for the school for parents, showing their appreciation of the need for the scientific attitude on the part of mothers and fathers, if they hope to provide their children with proper environment for character development. Speaking of the necessity for this attitude on the part of parents, Mrs. S. T. Lawton, chairman of the Chicago Association for Child Study, stated:

"The old fashioned parents made the mistake of assuming that morality could be imposed on the child from without. We can force external obedience, but a genuine character is always the outcome of what the child himself wishes at heart to be. While it is the function of all parents to provide the child with proper stimulus to be truthful, honest and virtuous, few parents are naturaly endowed with the ability to transmit their own ideas of morals to their children. What parents should do is prepare themselves by study and knowledge of types and forms of childhood to develop in their children a wish to make the best of themselves, of their social relations and of their talents. This is what we mean by preparation for character development."

Among the local organizations cooperating with the Chicago Association for Child Study in their school for parents are: Elizabeth McCormick Memorial fund, Mother's Aid of Chicago Lying-In hospital, Chicago Woman's Aid, Union League club, Joint Committee of Public School Affairs, University of Chicago, Chicago Church federation, Wieboldt foundation, City Club of Chicago, Chicago Woman's club, and Women's City club.

* *

Famous Educators Listed.

Among the speakers will be: Dr. Mark A. May, department of education, Yale university; Dr. E. D. Starbuck, director of Institute of Character Research, University of Iowa; Dr. Florence Mateer, clinical psychologist, Columbus, O.; Dr. Bernard Glueck, New York; Dr. Herman Adler, director Insttiute for Juvenile Research, Chicago; Dr. William Kilpatrick, Columbia university; Jane Addams; Dr. Eustace Hayden, University of Chicago; Dr. William Healy, Baker foundation, Boston; Dr. Harold Rugg, Lincoln School of Teachers' college, New York.

Mrs. S. T. Lawton is chairman of the Chicago Association for Child Study in charge of arrangements for the conference. Other officers of the association are Mrs. Harold B. Ickes, Mrs. Edward D. New Hair Style from New York

"I've so little time to myself," says Mildred Warshaw, lovely New York City girl who lives at 1353 42nd Street Brooklyn. "That's why it's been such a help to me to learn the new way so many of my girl-friends are doing their hair. Now I just put a few dashes of Danderine on my brush every time I use it. It makes my hair easy to dress and holds it in place. All I need is one shampoo a month, now. It stopped my dandruff, and my hair is always gleaming and silky, instead of looking dull and stringy like it did before I started using Danderine."

Danderine does more to bring out the natural color, the gleam and lustre of your hair, than any shampoo or treatment. It removes all the dust, grime and oily film from your hair—tones and refreshes your scalp—keeps dandruff away. All drug stores have the 35c bottles. Lovely hair and a healthy scalp for a few cents!

tion of water colors and drawings by a former Chicago girl who is now Mrs. Helen Walker Szukalska. She is a daughter of the late Dr. Samuel J. Walker, one of the noted physicians of his time and also even better known as one of the most sought after and popular members of Chicago's gay world. Genial, intelligent, delightful Sam Walker! We shall never see your like again. It used to be said that his being a physician really created illness, so happy were his friends, both men and women, to have an excuse, however flimsy, to call him in.

His daughter, Mrs. Stanislas Szukalska, early developed a decided talent for painting and drawing. In the course of her studies in this line she met a remarkable young sculptor and artist, Stanislas Szukalski. [You will perhaps note that her last name ends in A, while his ends in I. This preserves that difference in gender considered so important in Slavic terminations.] Szukalski was one of a large family in Poland. Seeking the family fortunes, his father chose him from the whole brood and brought him to this country. Selecting Chicago, they came here, friendless and without funds. Not long after their arrival, the father was run down in the city streets and killed.

The Fires of Genius.

Left alone, the lad, by means of that indestructible life force which seems inherent in many of our foreign population, in some fashion, not only managed to make a sufficient living to provide himself with food and shelter and clothes, but also to enable him to get at our Art institute that training which developed his remarkable talents as a sculptor. It is but another instance illustrating that well known saying: "Genius lights its own fires."

He and the attractive young Miss Walker met and fell in love with each other in the classic precincts of the Art institute which has sheltered many a romantic passion. Eventually, and after not a little and rather natural opposition on the part of her family, they married. They ultimately went to Paris, where their child was born. Mrs. Szukalska's health failed a year or so ago and she is now with her baby and her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Moncrieff, out in southern California, while her husband has, I hear, given up sculpture and is devoting himself to Polish politics.

They have bought a place either in Warsaw or just outside the Polish capital. If Mr. Szukalski is really an active factor in his national politics, it would seem to be a safer setting for his wife and offspring in the balmy regions that lie along our southwestern border than in that storm tossed land. Poles and peace both begin with the same letter, but that is about their only connection, especially if Pilsudksi adds a third P to the set.

Pin Returned to Owner.

Readers of the W. G. N. may have noted in its pages last week the notice of the loss by Mrs. Victor Elting of a handsome diamond and pearl pin. It was the wedding day gift to her of her first husband, the late Wirt Dexter Walker, and was an ornament she had cherished and worn for many years. The value of advertising in this widely read sheet was proven by the return of the pin the second day after its loss was proclaimed.

This is not an ad for the paper, but a news item which will interest many who know Mrs. Elting and who were friends of her first husband.

Members of New York's 700 women's clubs have been asked to fight cancer instead of running away from it.

Mrs. Jean Shassere of Chicago is probably the only steel saleswoman in the United States. She took a course in steel fabrication at Purdue university to prepare herself for the work and in a class of 85 she outranked 84 men when she was graduated.

Though she is only 22, Miss Valerie Block has been appointed assistant to the federal district attorney in New York City and is the youngest person in the country to hold the office of federal prosecutor.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Dressmaking shows vie with Engadine and the Riviera as attractions for the early February season. Both winter playgrounds continue to draw large numbers of Europeans and Americans. The impending Olympic games make St. Moritz the center of the throng which is participating in the ice skating, bob sled competitions and skiing. It is reported that even bath tubs are being requisitioned to accommodate the unusual crowds.

Among the recent arrivals in Paris from Engadine are Lady Riddlesdale, formerly Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who is here to meet her son, Vincent Astor, and her daughter, Princess Serge Obolenski.

Yachting Grows in Favor.

Nice, Cannes and Monte Carlo are rapidly filling, although the smart season does not start before late in February. Many yachts, however, are seen in Monte Carlo bay or Cannes, where the owners bring parties for a short turn of the casinos, golf and tennis, and then continue to cruise along the Spanish coast, Corsica, and even northern Africa. Unquestionably, yachting is growing in popularity each season.

The craft now along the Riviera include the duke of Westminster's Cutty's Ark, Solly Koel's Eileen, Ira Cowley's Happy Days and William Burton's Clever Girl.

Anthony Drexel, after attending the maharajah of Kapurthala's great fête in India to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his accession to the throne, is now in Egypt, where his boat, Sayonara, will bring him soon to the Riviera.

A New Singer.

After more than a year under such teachers as George Cutelli, Marya Fruen, and Camille Decreus, she has just appeared at the International Concert bureau in the Rue Jacob, under the auspices of Mme. Molie, well known French impresario, who encourages promising vocalists, instrumentalists, and composers.

Miss MacAffe is singing with success here. After spending several weeks in London, she will return to America on the Aquitania on March 14.

Find Solomon's Vast Treasure

By Clifton Harby Levy.

THAT one of the great treasure cities of King Solomon has been laid bare is the claim, just made public, of Prof. Alt of Leipzig. He asserts that the excavators digging in the ruins of ancient Mizpah, seven miles from Jerusalem, have reason to hope that here they have one of the repositories of the untold wealth of the most famous king who ever ruled in the holy land.

The Bible is most emphatic in its statement as to the wealth of Solomon, saying: "So King Solomon exceeded all the kings of the earth for riches. . . . And the king made silver to be in Jerusalem as stones." (I. Kings, x., 23-27.)

This is but the climax of the account of this monarch's enormous wealth, for it is specifically stated: "The weight of gold that came to Solomon in one year was six hundred three score and six talents of gold."

At that time coinage was unknown and gold was a commodity like wheat, yet the most precious of all commodities. One talent of gold was 100 ounces, and, as an ounce is the equivalent of $20, each talent was $2,000, and the 666 talents would be worth $1,332,000 today. That was the king's income in gold alone, the purchasing power of which must have been at least a hundred times what it is today, so that we would say Solomon's income was the equivalent of $100,000,000 in gold, besides all the other wealth that flowed into his coffers.

When the queen of Sheba came to visit Solomon she brought with her, according to scripture, "an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store, and precious stones." A royal present indeed! And then, too, the Bible states: "The navy also of Hiram [king of Tyre] brought gold from Ophir, and great plenty of almug trees and precious stones."

* *

Huge Store-Cities.

Jerusalem had become one of the great commercial centers of the ancient world, and King Solomon taxed all the traders who came to his capital, as we read: "He had of the merchantmen, and of the traffick of the spice merchants, and of all the kings of Arabia, and of the governors of the country." In a word, the flood of gold and other valuables which poured in from every side was beyond all computation, making Solomon the wealthiest monarch of his day.

But where was he to keep this enormous wealth, which was far more than he could spend, notwithstanding his great building operations, his extensive harem of 700 wives and 300 concubines? It was necessary for Solomon to built great store cities in which he kept not only the vast quantity of gold and silver which was constantly accumulating but also the spices—held in high esteem and commanding high prices at that time—the wheat, the barley and the cloth of cunning weave and varied color which was brought to him in enormous quantities.

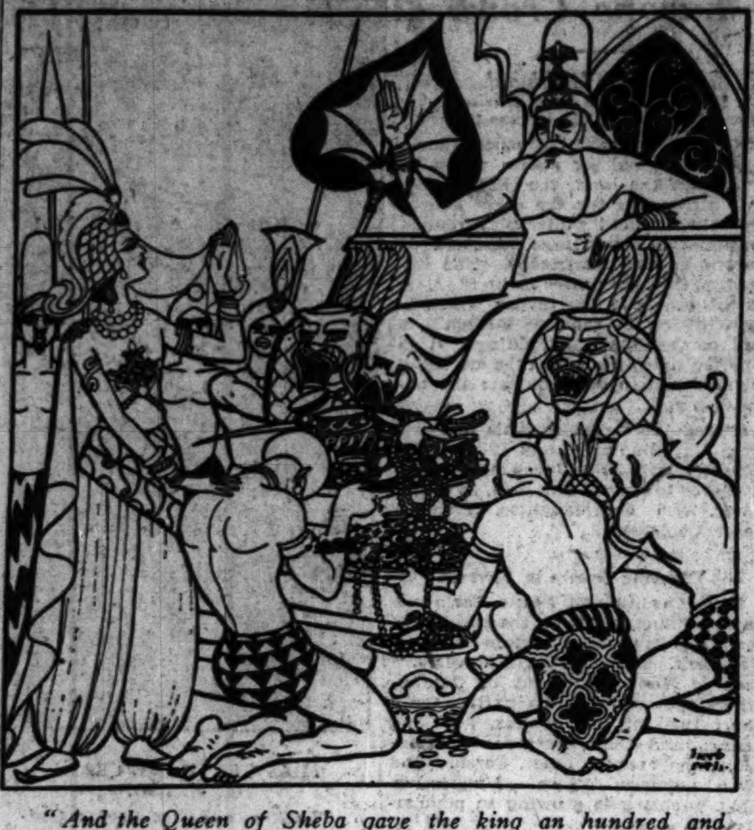
Prof. Alt believes that one of the most important of these store cities was the ancient Mizpah, which is now being explored by an American expedition headed by Prof. William F. Bade, formerly of the University of California.

Dr. Bade reports several notable discoveries, especially a mighty wall from 16 to 20 feet in thickness, with a sloping revetment extending 20 feet. While the remains of the wall now are only 25 feet high, Dr. Bade calculates that it was at least 20 feet higher. Walls like these were necessary to protect the priceless treasures of King Solomon, and there is no telling what may be revealed to the eager eyes of the excavators as they dig down to the very depths of this mighty structure.

Here was the place in which Solomon stored much of his wealth, and here, too, probably, when Jerusalem was about to fall before the attack of the Babylonians under Nebuchadnezzar, many of the sacred treasures of the temple at Jerusalem may well have been transferred through underground passages which led toward Mizpah, only seven miles away.

It was the nearest stronghold to which these treasures could have been taken, and as its walls were so thick and it had been one of Solomon's treasure cities, what more natural than that its storehouses should have been called into requisition when the time of stress and danger arrived?

MIGHTIEST MONARCH OF HIS TIME



"And the Queen of Sheba gave the king an hundred and twenty talents of gold, and of spices very great store." Some of the gold may be uncovered by excavations now under way.

Nor should it be forgotten that Mizpah became the seat of government after the destruction of Jerusalem, and that here Gedaliah tried to keep the people under control until he finally fell a victim to his enemies.

* *

Ivory and Gold.

WE can learn from the Bible much about the way in which Solomon spent some of the great wealth which was gathered month by month and year by year. In one place it is said that he made "two hundred targets of beaten gold; six hundred shekels of gold weight to one target. And he made three hundred shields of beaten gold; three pounds of gold went to one shield."

When it came to furnishing his palace King Solomon did not spare the precious metal, "for he made a great throne of ivory and overlaid with the purest gold. The throne had six steps and there were stays on either side of the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the stays. And twelve lions stood there on the one side and on the other upon the six steps: there was not the like made in any kingdom. And all King Solomon's drinking vessels were of gold and all the vessels of the House of the Forest of Lebanon (his palace) were of pure gold; none were of silver: it was nothing accounted of in 70,000 burden bearers and 80,000 hewers in the days of Solomon," says scripture.

Solomon had formed a commercial partnership with Hiram, King of Tyre, who aided him in building the temple at Jerusalem and his own palace, and Solomon sent a navy to sea with the navy of Hiram: "Once in three years came the navy of Tharshish (Solomon's), bringing gold and silver, ivory and apes and peacocks."

Then, too, in another passage, we are told that every one came from all parts of the earth to learn of Solomon's wisdom, and that when they came to Jerusalem "they brought every man his present, vessels of silver and gold, and garments, and armor, and spices, horses, and mules, a rate year by year." That is, all were eager to gain the good will of Solomon through these gifts, which were sent to him as annual contributions.

Solomon was one of the great builders of ancient times, constructing the gorgeous temple of Jerusalem and his own palace in the same city. He spent thirteen years on the construction of that palace and seven years in building the temple. Hiram sent the cedar and fir trees from Lebanon and Solomon paid him with 20,000 measures of wheat and 20 measures of pure oil each year. Solomon levied thirty thousand Israelites each year, sending them in groups, 10,000 at a time, to work in the mountains of Lebanon cutting down and preparing the timbers for these buildings.

Besides these, Solomon had "hewers in the mountains." Hiram sent down master builders and masons, so that the expense of paying and supporting the army of workmen ran into tremendous figures over a series of years. All the food and wages had to be provided by Solomon and this was done apparently without any great effort, demonstrating the extent of the royal income.

When at last these buildings were finished and paid for, the income continued to flow in and Solomon expended large sums in assembling a huge number of horses, for which he had 40,000 stalls. He imported 1,400 war chariots from Egypt and had 12,000 cavalrymen in his vast army.

His 700 Princesses.

King Solomon stood at the head of no mean empire, for his father, King David, had extended the territory and influence of Israel as far as the Euphrates river, receiving tribute from all the small kingdoms near and far. As David had been the empire builder, Solomon was the organizer, and it taxed his wisdom and resources to the utmost to retain control of this vast domain.

One method adopted by Solomon to cement the nations to himself was to take a princess from every royal family and place her in his own harem, so in this way he soon numbered 700 wives, "all princesses," according to the Bible.

The actual territory of Canaan was comparatively small, being only about 120 miles from north to south and 80 miles wide at the broadest part, yet its control was extended over thousands of square miles of territory and many widely differing races.

The wisdom of Solomon must have been as great as its repute or he could not have accomplished all that he did during the forty years of his rule. And the treasures which he amassed were necessary for the support of his numerous officials, his tax gatherers, his armies of occupation, and all the grandeur of a court which had to inspire every visitor with respect because of its magnificence.

If the American expedition at Mizpah has found one of Solomon's treasure houses it has brought to the light of day a most interesting memorial of thirty centuries ago and may be able to prove how great the power of Solomon actually was when he stood as the greatest monarch of his day on account of his wisdom and boundless wealth.

Other important discoveries are being made at Mizpah, according to the latest dispatches, for an ancient Semitic temple has been found, with the remains of a still older one under it. Last year a strangely impressive service was held in this sacred area. Jews, Christians, and Moslems climbed up the hill on which the temple had been built, scaled the cyclopean wall of the city, and assembled on the ground where no service had been held for at least twenty centuries.

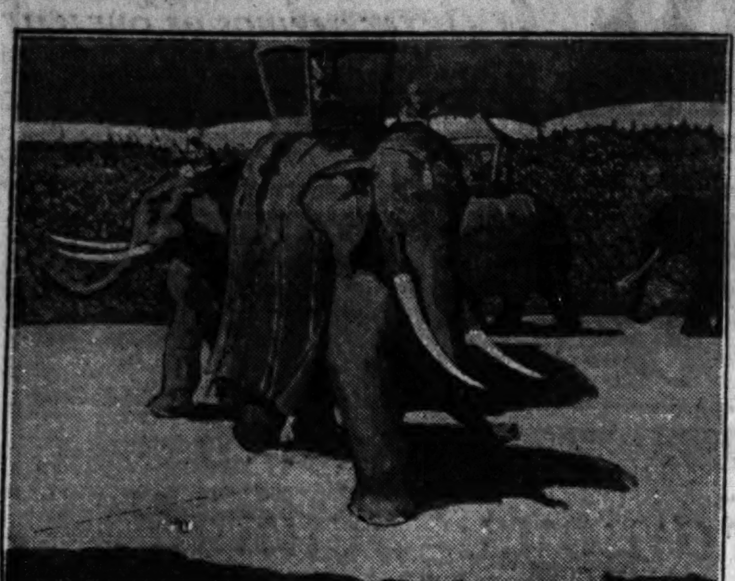
Chicago Canvases at Institute

Jury of Laymen Responsible for Excellent Show

By Eleanor Jewett.



"HIS FIRST CIRCUS," by Marques Reitzel, awarded the Edward B. Butler Purchase prize of $200 for an oil painting to be presented to the public schools of Chicago through the Public School Art society. Mr. Reitzel is a young painter, but one who has already made his mark. He is represented in this exhibition, the Chicago Artists, at the Art institute, by two other canvases, each in its way striking. The exhibition will run through March 20.

LAST Thursday in the east wing galleries of the Art institute there opened one of the most eagerly anticipated exhibitions of the winter. It is an annual exhibit, this of artists of Chicago and vicinity, but every year excitement grows as the time draws near for its appearance to be repeated. Perhaps the interest this year was the more intense because the jury which selected the paintings to be hung consisted entirely of laymen. No single professional artist was allowed even within earshot of the conference.

It must be admitted at once that the jury has made a success with their selections. The exhibition this year is better than ever before. It is representative of the older artists and of the younger; it is balanced in subject of canvas and size of canvas and treatment of canvas. There is no monotony. Enough modernism has been permitted entrance to set off the better the predominating conservative elements. Prizes have been awarded wisely. Pictures have been arranged with exquisite forethought. The walls are not too crowded. There is no surfeit of the merely pretty and there is stunning, striking, breathtaking painting in abundance.

* *

Laurels for Paul Trebilcock.

In such an exhibition, where the average of work offered is exceptionally high, it is not easy to choose the most distinguished, yet, were that choice to be required, it seems to me as though to Paul Trebilcock would go the honors. Basing a decision upon the group of portraits with which he is represented here, one feels tempted to prophesy and to call him the foremost portrait painter of his time, dating that time some thirty years ahead, for today Mr. Trebilcock is young and much too busy and in earnest making his future fame to bother himself with the question of best or second best.

Another of the younger men whose work is distinctive and possesses unusual qualities is Marques Reitzel. And we find, too, Adolph Heinze, Charles Killgore, Frederic M. Grant, whose place is now practically established as one of our ablest decorative painters; Othmar Hoffler, a new name to this exhibit and represented here by a spiritual interpretation of Joan of Arc; Eleanor Duke, with charming black and whites; Anna Lynch, with paintings and miniatures; Pauline Palmer, Kate A. Townsend, Frank C. Peyraud, Maurice Greenberg—the list is long. This paragraph by no means completes it. Another Sunday will have to see it continued.

* *

Prize Awards.

Meanwhile there are the prize awards, which were first announced Wednesday night at the annual dinner given at the Art institute for the artists. The prizes were given as follows: The Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal, carrying with it either for purchase or as a gift, $750, for a painting or a piece of sculpture executed by a resident of Cook county, to Paul Trebilcock for "Portrait of a Painter"; the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $500 to J. Theodore Johnson for "Portrait"; the Fine Arts Building purchase prize of $500 was divided between Kate A. Townsend for "The Silver Pitcher" and Mary H. Buehr for "Flower Arrangement." These two paintings will probably go to the Chicago Public School Art society and be hung in the public schools.

"The Lineman" by Ivan Le Lorraine Albright was given the John C. Shaffer prize of $500. "Lacquer" by Frederic V. Poole was awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Brower prize of $300. The William Randolph Hearst prize of $300 went to Rudolph F. Ingerle for "Swapp'n Grounds." The Edward B. Butler purchase prize of $200 was given to "His First Circus" by Marques E. Reitzel. This painting will be hung in one of Chicago's public schools.

The Mrs. Julius Rosenwald purchase prize of $200, for an oil painting or paintings to be presented to the public schools of Chicago through the Public School Art society, went to an adorable canvas by Mrs. Vernon T. Kirkbride — "The Cut-Outs." Mrs. Kirkbride is better known to us as an etcher than as a painter in oils, but this canvas is utterly charming.

"Suzanne" by J. Theodore Johnson won the Joseph N. Eisendrath prize of $200. The Harry A. Frank prize of $150 for a figure composition in oil, went to Francis Chapin for "Study—Nude." The Municipal Art league prize of $100 for portraiture was given to "Self Portrait" by Oskar Gross. The Mrs. John C. Shaffer prize of $100 for an ideal conception in sculpture went to "Madonna" by Oskar J. W. Hansen. Francis Chapin won a second prize with his "Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth," which was given the Englewood Woman's club prize of $100.

The Marshall Fuller Holmes prize of $100 to a resident Chicago artist, for excellence in color and composition, was won by W. Vlad Rousseff with his "Sketch for Mural." The Rogers Park Woman's club prize of $100 for the best painting by a woman who has not previously received a prize in the Art institute went to Lucile Kaltenbach for "Life on the Beach, No. 3."

The Chicago Woman's Aid prize of $100 to a Chicago woman who is a student and who has not previously received this prize was given to Leonore Smith Jerrems for "Lunaria." A. McD. Vincent won the Julia Knapp memorial prize of $100 with "Back Steps." The Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 was awarded to "Yggdrassil," by Walter Sargent. The Robert Rice Jenkins prize of $50 was given to Davenport Griffin for "The Prodigal's Brother." The Mrs. William O. Thompson prize of $100 was awarded to "Torn Stocking," by Will Haenel.

Two Exhibitions.

There opened at the Arts club last Friday an exhibition of sculpture by Allan Clark, of water colors and drawings by Helen Walker Szukalska—and of modern American paintings lent by the Daniel gallery of New York.

At the Chicago galleries there is current an exhibit of paintings by Ada Walter Shulz, by Nellie A. Knopf, and by Florence White Williams. The exhibition opened Wednesday and will run through Feb. 29. The three painters are linked by the fact that each is a woman and there all relationship stops. Their work is as different the one from the other as is humanly possible.

Mrs. Shulz paints of the country delights and pastoral playmates of Brown county, Ind. One or two landscapes are on the wall and one or two paintings of a cabin. The rest deal entirely with children. The children are with each other, or, as in the charming "A Mother's Lap," permit a parent's presence, but, principally, they are with pets. The pets are ducklings, goslings, a tame and much spoiled turkey, a white rooster and a snowy poodle. The pictures are friendly and very human. They are simple encounters with a simple life, lovingly understood and lovingly passed on to us for our enjoyment.

* *

An Artist with Vision.

In the paintings by Florence White Williams there is delightful variety. A few charming illustrations for a children's story and a few charming water colors break the edge of the introduction. Later there are landscapes and figure paintings and a number of brilliant water scenes. A tendency towards romancing runs through the pictures. A hum of poetry welds them together. They are balanced on a thread of enchanted vision.

Whether it is the blue and white flurry of water and birds in "Gulls," or the gay, vivid coloring in "Boat-Time in Boothbay"; or the wide reaches of "Fourmasters"; the peace and content of "In the Ogden Dunes," or the placid sufficiency of the "A New England Hillside"; whatever the picture, through it and beyond it and over it and under it you are conscious of the spiritual pulse of the artist beating. The vision of something beyond fact is a personal factor in Miss Williams' painting.

* *

In Direct Contrast.

Diametrically opposed in essence are the paintings of Miss Knopf which are also hung in the gallery where Miss Williams' pictures are shown. Miss Knopf impresses one as painting straight from the shoulder. Her work is vivid and robust. There is too much already here, her paintings seem to say, to permit imagination to intrude. There are rocks and mountains and places, worth seeing—seen—discovered—pinned into place now with the help of my palette. The world is here to be painted and I am here to paint. And she does it, paints the world, a magnificent job, magnificently done.

There is a thrill in this straightforward painting. It is as refreshing as a cold shower for petulant nerves. The realities are proportioned for you. Values are equalized. You and the universe are brought together firmly, sensibly, and the justice of nature, undiluted, is made manifest. Not that this lesson is unpleasantly enforced. On the contrary, one of the most striking canvases seen this year anywhere is "On Passamaquoddy Bay," a plain rendering of salt water and a wooden pier, high up, as though on stilts, with a marvelous dark shadowing of undercurrent sucking in the protecting fling of the ancient piles.

"On Saint Mary Lake" is beautiful and her dignified rendering of mountains, gigantic masses of pink and red rock towering hugely upwards, possesses a fascination that does not need fantasy to help it. Whatever else might be added, one statement is exact—Miss Knopf forces conviction through her development of blunt planes.

* *

News of Shows.

The Palette and Chisel club is enjoying a current show of work by members—not a particularly extensive exhibit, but one with some pleasant features, among them the paintings of John Spelman, James Topping, Karl Ouren, J. Jeffrey Grant, and Edward T. Grigware. The Italian woven pieces in the smaller gallery are a resonant color note.

A remarkable group of paintings by prominent Chicago artists has been gathered by William A. Stewart and, with the approval of Henry C. Gordon, hung in the college room, Maillard's, in the Straus building. The exhibit is delightful. No false nor discordant note is struck. The eye passes easily from one lovely bit of painting to another. You find represented Pauline Palmer, J. Allen St. John, Stark Davis, Marshall D. Smith, Frederic Grant, Joseph Birren, Kate Townsend, Irving Manoir, Marie Cameron, and Grace M. Haskins. There are others, too—in all, a comprehensive show and one that is a credit to Chicago painters.

The Field Museum of Natural History has just gotten out a stunning book in honor of the late Carl Akeley, whose fame as an explorer, a sculptor, and a taxidermist, is great. Most of the realistic wild animal groups in the Field museum are due to his genius. The book contains a brief survey of his life and then plate after plate of illustrations of his work. It is a publication which should be in every school and one which children at home would enjoy as well. The price is, I understand, nominal. It is one of the most satisfactory compilations of its kind I have ever seen. The pictures are excellent.

At the Carson-Pirie-Scott galleries is current the annual "Fifty Prints of the Year" exhibit. The American Institute of Graphic Arts of New York sponsors the assemblying of these etchings. This year Bertha E. Jaques, secretary of the Chicago Society of Etchers, chose the twenty-five prints representing the conservative groups, and Rockwell Kent selected the twenty-five prints for the modern group.

The Chicago No Jury Society of Artists announces its sixth annual exhibition to be held in the Marshall Field galleries from Feb. 27 to March 10. Entries close Feb. 12.

"The Wild Duck," by Ibsen, is the play current at the Goodman theater.

At the O'Brien galleries an exhibition of Dutch landscapes by Charles P. Gruppe opened Wednesday.

THE MAN BACK OF THE INSTITUTION

AFTER a motor ride or hike on a bracing winter Sunday, what better climax is there than a festive dinner at the Terrace Garden, with perfect dance music, and a brilliant vaudeville program?

6 Delicious Courses, $1.50; 5 to 9 P. M.

"Waddy" Wadsworth's celebrated 15-piece orchestra plays throughout the dinner and entertainment. There is also a complete variety program daily at luncheon, dinner, and after-theatre supper, with tantalizing dance selections between the acts.

Rates, $2.50 Up, at Chicago's Most Central Hotel

This famous restaurant and the historic Boston Oyster House have made Clark and Madison the liveliest "24-hour" intersection in Chicago. It is so central—nearest in the city to offices, theatres, stores and railroads—that the hotel subrentals pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests in reduced rates.

1944 Rooms with Bath

All rooms are outside, with bath, running ice water, bed-head lamp, telephone, and Servidor. Every floor has its housekeeper, and all guests enjoy garage privileges.

Every Day an Outdoor Day in "The Sunshine City"

In the past 17 years St. Petersburg has had only 89 sunless days—an average of less than six a year. The average winter temperature is 65 degrees. Trees and grass are always green and flowers bloom all winter. . . . Warm, sunny winter weather makes every day an outdoor day in "The Sunshine City." And there's something to do on every sunny day—golf, tennis, boating, bathing, fishing, roque, lawn bowling, shuffleboard, horseshoes and the like. Varied entertainment to suit all tastes. 100 splendid hotels, 300 apartment houses, many furnished homes for rent. Moderate living costs. Plan now to come. For booklet address B. S. The South Wind is in the Pine Trees in "The Land of the Sky"

UP on the mile-high mountains the South Wind is singing in the pine trees. The mild Southern Winter is blending into Spring. A sapphire interlude of sun-flooded days. Air like wine, calling you out of doors to a thousand thrillingly new things to do.

Colonel Bogy is waiting for you on four velvety green Donald Ross golf courses. Tennis on championship courts, trap-shoot, motor over a thousand miles of matchless highways, atop the world. Explore new trails afoot or on a sturdy little saddle horse through scenes unrivalled in Eastern America.

Smart and interesting social life that reaches its gayest tempo during the early Spring season. Luxurious hotels and inns unsurpassed in America or on the continent for their cuisine and service—steeped in the traditions of Southern hospitality since 1830.

Asheville, a metropolitan city in the heart of the Land of the Sky, is scarcely more than a night's sleep by through Pullman via Southern Railway. Or, if you prefer, there is a paved highway from the doors of your garage that leads through a charming countryside to the porte-cochere of your favorite Asheville hotel.

99 Prizes to Be Given for Best Interiors Seen

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell Heads Committee in Charge.

By Margaret Stevers.

CHICAGOANS take pride in their homes! This stands proved by the enthusiastic response which greeted last week's opening announcement of THE TRIBUNE's Home Harmonious Contest, with $6,000 in prizes for the ninety-nine residents of Chicago and suburbs whose homes are judged the most attractive and comfortable in their interior arrangements.

Universal commendation has greeted the salient feature of the contest—that all homes would be judged on the basis of how well the homemaker had wrought with the means available, rather than on the basis of absolute beauty alone.

This one feature has stirred the imagination of many with whom we are in touch.

Touches Their Pride.

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers says: "They feel it rests the contest upon the fairest and most interesting basis imaginable, the taste and ingenuity displayed in achieving the best home life possible, with ordinary means and under every day living conditions. It touches every woman's pride in her ability to do well with whatever income she has available, and they are keenly interested in matching skill with their friends. I am confident the contest will be a stimulus to richer home life throughout the community."

Others, both in professional circles and among those entering the contest, voiced the same view.

Many of the contestants expressed high enthusiasm and are looking forward eagerly to having the judges view their handiwork in creating charming home surroundings.

Mrs. E. S. writes: "Please come and see what a 65 year old lady has done to make an old home snug and cheerful with $130 a month and my hands."

Here is a home created in a hotel: "I am mailing the enclosed coupon at once in the hope that you may find it convenient to visit my home, which I constructed from a series of regular hotel rooms into a semblance of a bungalow, with a walnut library and regular dining room and kitchen."

"MRS. R. B."

Built 70 Years Ago.

Here is an entry that promises to be interesting: "Our house was built in 1858 and was furnished before the war and is quite unusual in its housing so many uncommon antiques. My father came here in 1840—hence the relics of an early age. B. W."

Mrs. W. submits her small house: "Our home of six rooms is a bit unusual as to arrangement and design and has an unusual as well as attractive living room for a small house. It was designed entirely by my husband and me. Would like very much to have it considered in your contest."

Mrs. P. sends in her entry: "We are a large family of eleven persons and live in a humble home, but would like very much to have you visit and see how such a large family lives on a modest income."

Meanwhile entries have come in from all quarters of the city and suburbs and from communities of almost every range of property value, the most exclusive as well as districts of extremely modest homes. Likewise the entries include large and small apartments, houses and bungalows of all sizes.

As the contest swings into its second week today, the focus of interest among early entries is the question of judging. The committee in general charge of the contest is districting the city and suburbs, and organizing district groups of judges to visit all homes entered in the contest. The groups will meet for luncheon this week, at which time the rules will be explained in detail, together with the

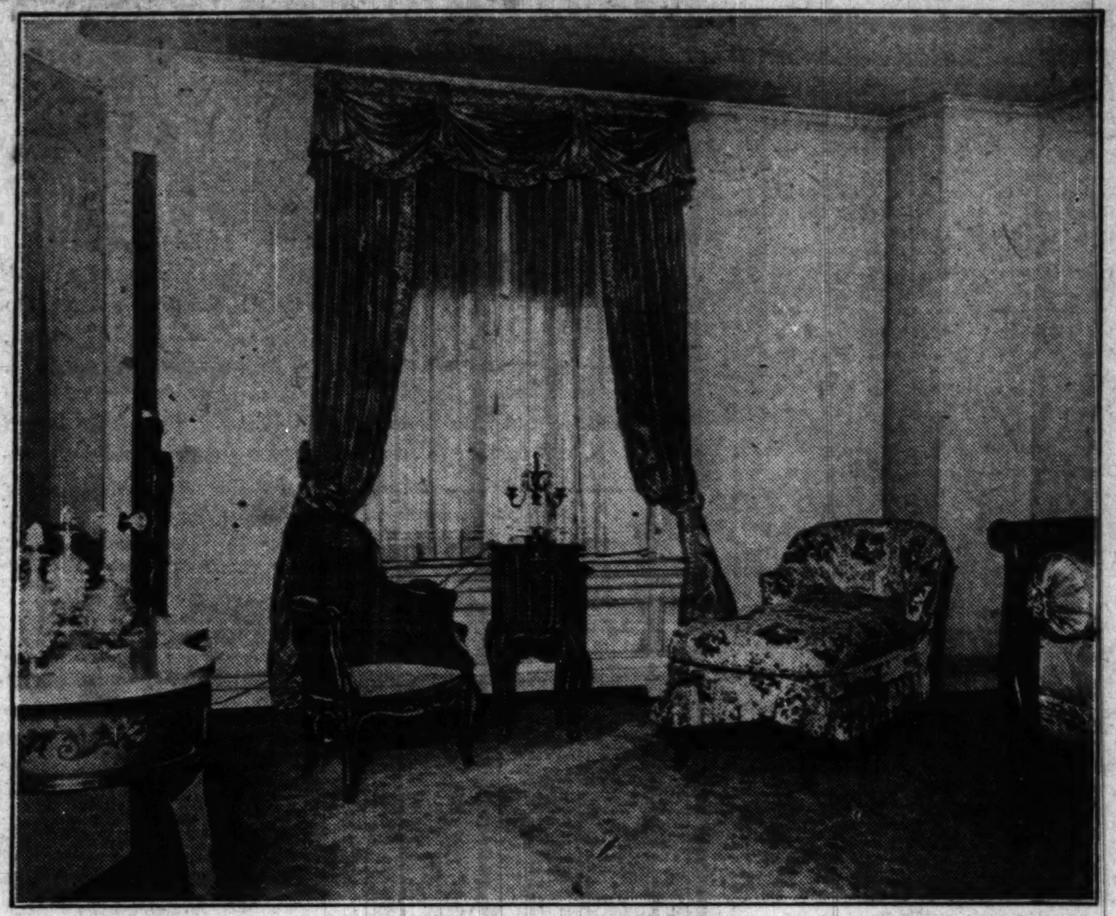
BEDROOM WITH CANVASED WALLS



THE master bedroom of this apartment at 3800 Sheridan road has canvased walls of soft ivory, an excellent background for the color combination of soft rose and blue in draperies and chair covers. The couch bed, a corner of which shows in the picture, has bolsters at each end and a blue brocade hanging against the wall.

The Race of Kings

Mother and Charlie Move Their Restaurant to Busier Spot

The first chapter of this unusual story of success told how Mrs. Mary King, left a widow, began, by serving midnight lunches to Chicago newspaper men, businesses that were to amass millions; how she laid the foundations for the institutions later started and run by her children, Fannie May, Julia King, "Charlie" King, and Caroline Williams.

By Marion Reagan.

FOR a whole year preceding the world's fair there was a bustle of preparation in Chicago—a preparation that was much more than merely material. It was a kind of cultural primping up. Everybody wanted to be ready when the distinguished guests from all over the world should arrive, to show off the town to the best possible advantage. Women especially were taking to the cultural phase of it. They joined clubs, formed new clubs, wrote papers on such subjects as "The Renaissance," "The Floreentine Painters," "The Fall of Carthage," "Shakespeare."

In commerce men were priming themselves for the swollen stream of business the fair was expected to bring. Every one predicted it was to be a flood tide of fortune, and he would have been a sleepy business man indeed who did not make some effort to ride in on the wave of it.

* *

The Kings Move Their Business.

Charlie King and his mother had moved their little restaurant at 119 Fifth avenue to Calhoun place. They had had two different locations in Calhoun place, and while on general principles Charlie contended it was bad business to move too often, still on the eve of the fair he could not resist the temptation "to get out on the street," as he put it. For while the alley way between Madison and Washington streets was dignified by the name of Calhoun place, it was more familiarly known as "Newsboys' alley," and was, after all, just an alley.

It was an alley, to be sure, with as much distinction, as much personality, and as rich a history as any thoroughfare in Chicago, but from a business point of view there was no gainsaying the fact that a location on a main street would be more desirable. With the new cultural tendency abroad in the town a restaurant boasting of the patronage of literary men would unquestionably be successful.

And so, in the spring of '93, "King's" was moved back to the west side of Fifth avenue, just across the street from the original location. It was right in the center of newspaper

She Clings to Her Good Nature— and Collects $50 Courtesy Prize

Kindly Shopkeeper Realizes on Her Politeness

By the Politeness Reporter.

Mrs. Mulvena Schmidt, 1634 Clybourn avenue, who is awarded $50 for being courteous.

INVADING the north side via a Halsted street surface car, I overheard a woman, standing beside me on the rear platform, expressing a wish that one of the windows might be lowered for ventilation purposes. She seemed to be working herself up to quite a pitch. The thought struck me that, possibly among the bystanders, the politeness reporter might be listening and watching.

Then I realized that I was the only person aboard endowed with the powers of that mysterious individual, and the most I felt inclined to do for the woman in distress was suggest that the windows encasing the platform might not be of the lowering kind. She insisted that they could be manipulated, but I remained inactive. My conscience was soothed by the fact that in giving her succor I might bring a draft upon some one else who was sensitive to sudden changes in the atmosphere.

I couldn't present the card to myself, anyhow. In order for the little white piece of pasteboard to have any worth I would have to give it away. The card wanted to get off at North avenue and I am completely a victim of its whims.

It was a raw morning and I was a total stranger in the locality. I had not stood on the corner long before a pedestrian, rushing to catch a car, had the unpleasant experience of having his hat blown off. He rushed across the street after it and a passerby restored the dust covered fedora. It was not an unusual act of courtesy, for "hard indeed must a man be made by the toil and traffic of gain and trade" who will not thus react when occasion requires.

"Next time don't hurry so fast," grumbled the Good Samaritan, offsetting his courteous deed with the dispensing of advice.

Pressing his hat more firmly on his head, the man who had missed his car looked at me oddly when I called attention to the lecture he had just received.

"Well, it wasn't bad advice," he smiled grimly.

But I could see that, aside from feeling cheap over what had happened to his hat, he felt the sting of the mild rebuke.

Interest and Curiosity.

I walked north on Halsted street for half a block with a man who told me he was "in the government employ." I wanted to know how much further north I would have to go to get to another business center and he explained at some length that, while he did not know what business I was in, I would find South Halsted much more congested with the marts of trade. He was courteous in that he displayed, rather than curiosity, interest in my dilemma. There is a vast difference between the two. Without extracting the card from my pocket, the gentleman did cause me to return south as far as Clybourn avenue, on which thoroughfare, with no one to guide me, I turned northwest. It was thus that I chanced to come into the presence of Mrs. Mulvena Schmidt.

I began to like the neighborhood upon chatting with Mrs. Schmidt on topics which she allowed me to broach and concerning which she made tactful and good humored comments. She runs a little delicatessen store with a living room in the rear. We didn't talk so much about fish and cheese as we did about the fact that probably fifty years from now neither of us would be having a visit on Clybourn avenue.

Mrs. Schmidt laughed at life even when a bunch of kids came in and kept her trotting from one counter to another as they held long debate over a penny purchase. Finally a youngster, who could not have been more than five years old, came in and said: "Please, Mrs. Schmidt, my mamma says for you to give me two nickels for a dime and thank you."

"With both please and thank you," she laughed, "how could I refuse?"

She stepped into the living room and, turning on the radio, filled the little delicatessen with a flood of cheerful music.

"Well, I must be going," I said, finally.

"Yah," laughed Mrs. Schmidt.

Among the Germans.

I went a long way. I went back to Halsted street and as far north as Garfield avenue. I was in a German neighborhood, I was informed, but with the explanation that it wasn't so exclusively German as it used to be.

Carl Boecker, who makes his own cigars on North Halsted street, was a close rival to Mrs. Schmidt in the magic card's affections. Carl was busy with his ledgers when I entered and I caught him in the middle of adding a column.

He told me of a music master who led an orchestra he loved to go and hear.

"He's this kind," said Carl, "who nods his head when they play good and then they play all the better. Not this——"

"Jazz," I interrupted.

"No, not that," Carl frowned. "I mean—what is it they play? It busts my ears."

"Saxophone," I suggested.

That was it. Then Carl told me of the masquerade that was going to be given by the "Saengerbund Freiheit" at Turner hall.

Just off Center street I met the man with the key store. A customer came in, handed over his skates, had them sharpened in a thrice, paid the bill, and walked out again without saying a word.

"Trouble with too many men," philosophized the maker of keys and sharpener of skates, "is that as soon as they get married they quit going skating and all that sort of thing—think they have to become old men."

That Jelly Tart.

I dropped in at a bakery up that way on Halsted street, just as the two kids came home from school.

"My girl," said the women back of the counter, "gets along fine in everything but arithmetic. It just seems the teacher can't get her to understand the examples. But in history and geography she's fine."

She placed a tray of jelly tarts on the counter. I told her I thought her daughter would pick up the arithmetic as she went along, and that I would take one of the tarts.

So she put the tart in a paper sack and I went down the street again, and I met three young girls emerging from the Columbia Printing company's plant. I asked them where I could go and eat some German cooking and they made a trio of the response. Each of them corrected the other a bit and I gathered that the place was the third door from the corner, rather than the second, a trifling error on the part of one of my informants, but they had wished to guide me aright. Here were politeness and pulchritude as well. Still, it was a short-lived incident. They were in a hurry for their own lunch.

In at the German restaurant I was satisfied that the man, who sat down opposite me didn't want to talk to me at all, which shows how poor a student I was of physiognomy. When, finally, I broached the subject of the weather, his face lit up and he quite agreed with me that the groundhog story was purely a superstition.

"To show what nonsense it is," he smiled, "why, I've been up at Fox lake when the sun was shining on one side of it and I could look across and see it raining on the other. The groundhog story was for people when they were provincial and never traveled about. This whole world ain't any bigger than a fly in the scheme of things."

Then he talked about many matters, disagreeing with none of my own views. It was the manner in which his face lit up, however, that pleased the card in my pocket. Kindly words and tact are really not enough to lend the glow that goes with ultra politeness. The face must be illumined as well. I say these things in passing, not as an authority, but simply because they have occurred to me in my quests.

Retracing Footsteps.

The man even offered to let me have his piece of apple cake, inasmuch as I had finished mine. Yet I did not give him the magic card. The card seemed to want to go back to Clybourn avenue, and in a cigar store at 1572 the proprietor was of such courteous manner that I thought for a minute he must have seen the card shining through my coat.

"Too bad," I said, as he came in from a rear room, "that you can't make a sale for all your trouble."

"Big sale, little sale, or no sale," he boomed, "you just come in any time you want to, even if it's just to say hello."

Yet somehow I couldn't forget Mrs. Schmidt. I felt the jury had been out long enough and I wanted to put her to a final test. I still had the tart in its sack, and the jelly on it was beginning to ooze through. So I thought I would go down and see Mrs. Schmidt, and if she would furnish me a fresh sack for a delicacy I had purchased elsewhere it would settle the argument for the day.

It didn't look so good when I saw Mr. Schmidt was now back of the counter. Maybe he would be grumpy. I went inside and I asked for Mrs. Schmidt. Her husband called her from the living room, where she was washing dishes after the noon meal. She came, drying her hands on a towel, and I told her my predicament with the jelly tart. Her laugh lost none of its ring as she went around the counter to get me a sack.

Her Glorious Day.

"I'm sorry I wasn't here at dinner time," I said to Mrs. Schmidt, "because the soup smells good."

"Ach, you wouldn't have cared for it," she chuckled. "It was made out of rutabagas, but if you still want a taste——"

"No, I don't want a taste," I told her, "but worth far more to this little card in my pocket is your courtesy and good cheer. The little card is not interested in material needs. All it cares for is the sort of thing that costs scarcely nothing at all, but means so much."

"What a day in my life," she beamed, taking a deep breath as she studied the card. "I thought it was not even a penny you was going to spend. Even the sun has come out in the street. So much money, not even for a sardine, but just for my being——" She wrote down the word for me at my request. "Just for my being 'freuntlech.'"

Betty Nuthall of Tennis Fame Has a Musical Family

LONDON.—(AP)—Betty Nuthall is a pianist as well as a championship tennis player, and her three sisters and two brothers also are piano players.

The Nuthalls frequently give recitals. Betty specializes on Chopin. Her brother, Jim, aged 15, is a dance music fan. Sister Molly, aged 13, and Thelma, aged 10, incline to serious compositions. John Nuthall is also rather jazzy in his musical taste.

Patricia, aged 7, the baby of the family, is busy playing "Chopsticks," and is more interested in Betty's film acting and tennis playing than in her execution of Chopin's masterpieces.

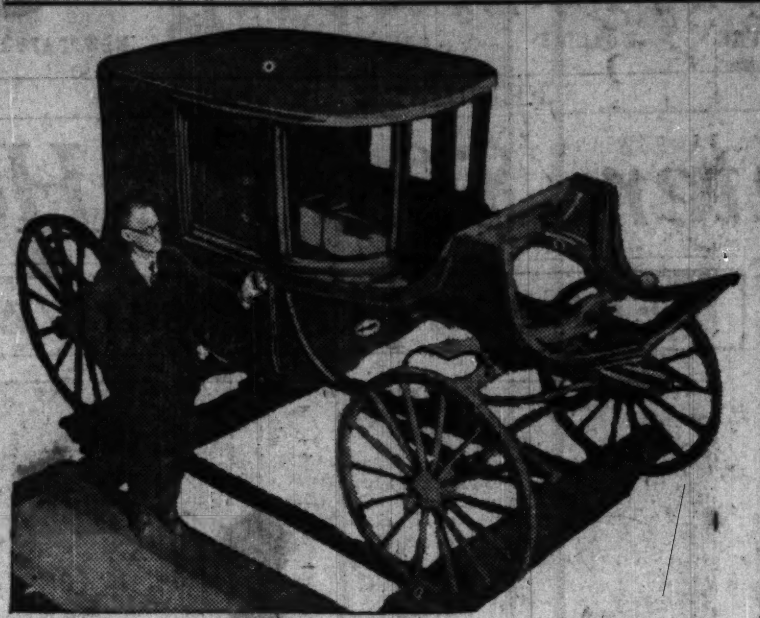
THEY KNEW LINCOLN



JAMES H. SCHEEL, 305 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, has come to the Chicago Historical society museum to stand beside the Lincoln carriage. When he was a boy of 14, playing tag on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington, the carriage, in which Mrs. Lincoln was driving at the time, struck Scheel as he plunged, unwittingly, in front of the wheels. The vehicle halted and Scheel was carried to his home. Mrs. Lincoln and Tad visited him while he was laid up with his injuries, and later the President found him a job under Secretary of War Stanton, which he held until the close of the war. THE RIVER IN WINTER

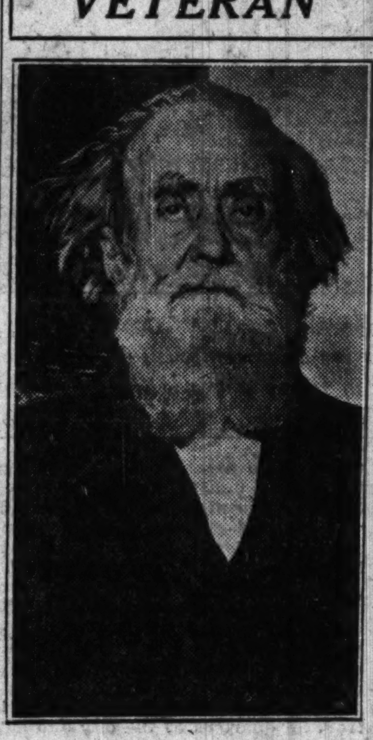
VETERAN



It's a stirring tale that Col. Andrew Jackson Greenfield is able to recall, for, as commander of the 1st cavalry, 22d Pennsylvania division, Col. Greenfield captured the southern cavalry regiment commanded by Gen. Ashby, at Columbia Furnace, Va., during the civil war. The colonel, now 92 years old, lives at 3420 Fulton street. He lost the sword—surrendered by Ashby—at the time of the Johnstown flood, but the memory connected with it remains.

A White Elephant Sale.

Years and years ago, before the war, the first White Elephant sale was held in an old stone residence on Michigan avenue. There the rich, who had so much of everything that they could give away bits of beauty of which they had grown tired, or which no longer fitted into their scheme of things, and the poor, who never had enough of anything to fit together to make a scheme of things, met over the counters. Things and things! Such lovely things! There will never be another such assemblage of beautiful treasures placed within reach of those who love beauty but cannot always pay its price.

And such bargains! I had bought bookends of lovely wood, obviously an import, the design was so foreign, for a quarter; a lovely old runner of hand woven linen, cross-stiched, for 50 cents; a small tray of sandalwood, hand carved, for a quarter; a wall hanging for a dollar—when suddenly my eyes fell upon a framed Japanese print. And a duck of a print it was, too! But $10! But an inner hunch told me that if I would wait around until the end of the day and it had not been sold it would be mine for a dollar.

And I did, and it was! J. S.

Where There's a Will.

I wanted a black lace hat, which cost $7 while I had but $4. One noon I went to one of the department stores to try on hats, thinking I could copy one at less cost.

By good fortune the clerk who attended me had an interest in her work, and was so nice to me in bringing hats to try on that I did not have the heart to say, as I had intended, "I'll call again," but confessed to her that I didn't have enough money. She did not seem horrified, but brought the lace trimmed shapes, brought the flowers and ribbon of black velvet and arranged them just like the trimmed hats.

Then she said, "Now, as you have bought the materials here, we'll trim the hat free of charge.' The hat, trimmings and all, came to just $4.

I was grateful to the clerk, who helped a 16 year old girl to have a lovely new hat. J. H.

Books "Thrown In."

I was pleased enough with my bargain when I purchased a charming old mahogany secretary, but it turned out to be even better than I expected. The old man from whom I bought it mentioned that he had a few books and would throw them in with the purchase. Being already crowded for book room, I felt reluctant to accept what would probably be a lot of old trash, but rather than hurt the old gentleman's feelings by refusing I told him to send them along.

To my great surprise I found them to be a splendid lot, among them being a lovely old set of Dickens, beautifully bound, printed by Harper & Brothers in 1872, with over 100 exquisite engravings. I consider this alone worth what I paid for the desk. C. F. P.

A One Cent Sale.

They say you can't get anything for nothing, but I did once—or rather for almost nothing, anyway. In fact, when I first spied the "1c" sign above the counter of sample neckwear, my first impulse was to rush to an optician. Recovering from the shock, however, I managed to squirm through the crowd and reached the heaps of cuffs and collars which were attached separately on stiff paper.

One-half collar, marked "imported" struck my fancy so I started a thirty minute search—but not in vain. I finally discovered the complete set, paid three whole cents to the saleswoman and called it a bargain! E. H.

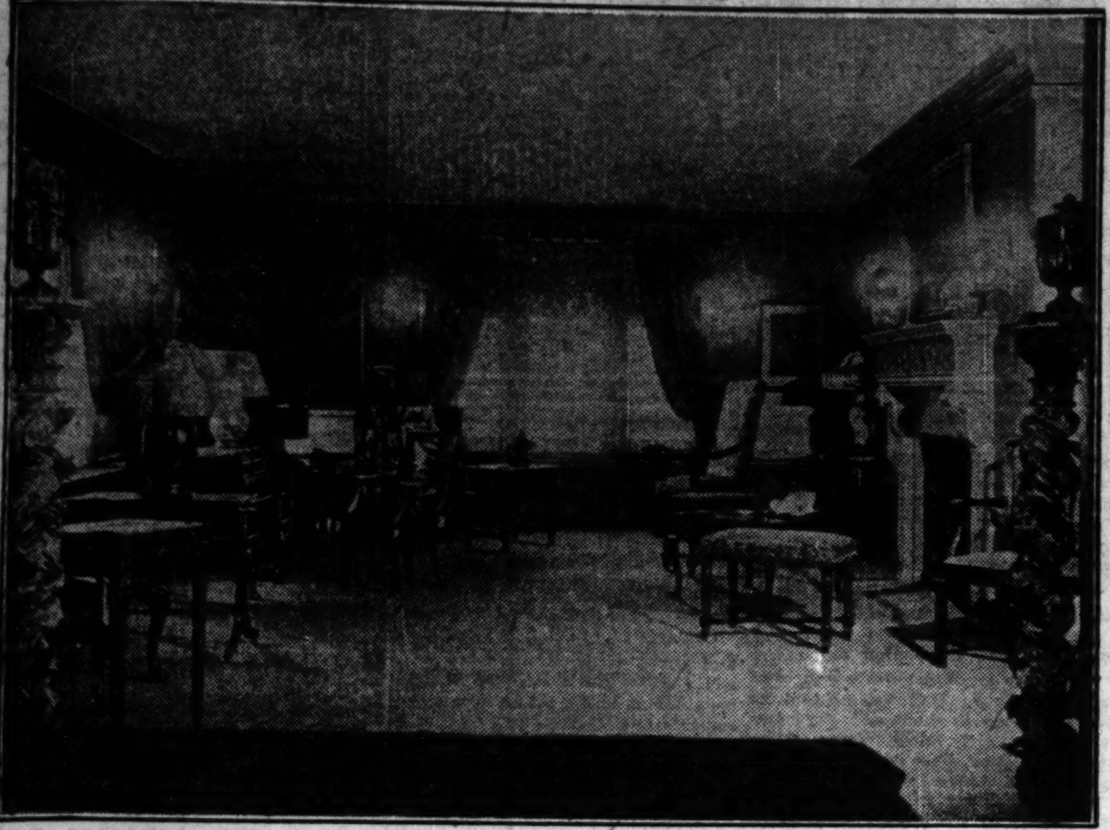
Making the Home Harmonious — Camera Studies of Well-Arranged Apartments in Various Sections

CHARACTER IN A LIVING ROOM



SEVERAL types of furniture are combined to give a harmonious effect to the living room at 3800 Sheridan road. Gold colored walls, gold and blue hangings, and a deep gold carpet add warmth to the dignity of the handsome pieces of furniture. The lamp shades, in tones of green, rose, and soft blue, provide color contrast.

RED AND BEIGE IN LIVING ROOM

method of rating all homes entered. The list of judges will be announced soon.

The Committee Personnel.

The points to be observed in judging are being worked out now by members of the general committee in charge of the contest. The committee is as follows:

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers.

Mrs. Constant Church Hopkins, chairman of the American Home department of the Illinois Federation of Woman's clubs.

Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives league.

Andre Rebori, well known architect.

Dudley Crafts Watson, extension lecturer for the Art Institute.

Holmes Onderdonk, manager of The Tribune's building department.

Announcement will be made next Sunday concerning the time when judging will commence. Ample notice will be given of each intended visit.

Your Own Taste?

Prominent among the questions asked last week was whether contestants living in hotels could enter the contest. The test here is whether the home represents the taste of the contestant, and thus represents her skill in homemaking. Quarters rented furnished are not eligible.

Another question asked is whether it will be possible to enter now and have time in which to carry through plans for redecorating before the home is judged. This question need cause no worry to any one. The rules provide that homes will be judged on the skill displayed with the means available; and if the regular spring cleaning and redecorating has not been done, due allowance will be made for that. The judges know that no house can get through a winter without wear and tear.

Contestants who are able to do their spring cleaning and redecorating now will have time in which to do so before the judges visit them, but those who find it inconvenient at present will be under no handicap.

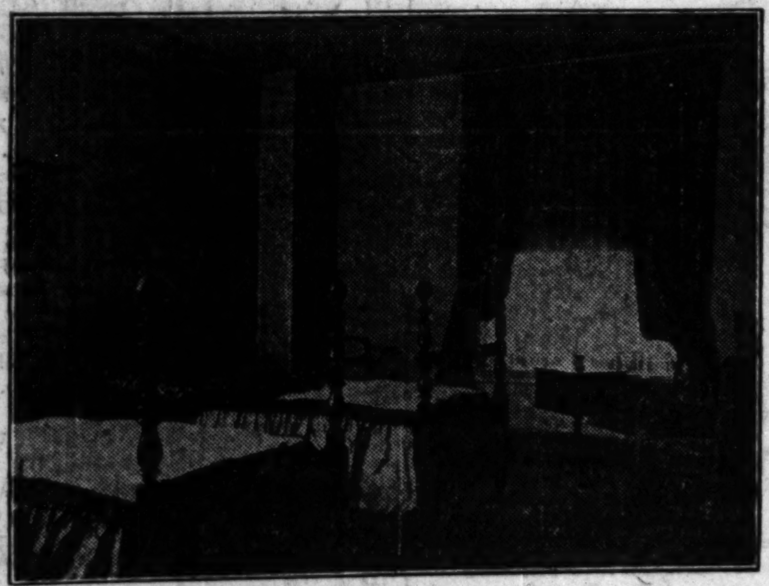
Do It Now!

So, all that is necessary for you to enter the contest is to put your name and address and telephone number on one of the coupons and mail it in to the Home Harmonious Contest, Chicago Tribune, Chicago. Aside from that, the only further requirement is that you receive a visit from the judges, at an appointed time.

The rules insure every one an equal chance. Thep rizes will go to those who do best with the means available, whether ample or modest. It is just a question of how skillful and ingenious a homemaker you are; and surely you are willing to match your efforts against those of your friends.

So, fill out the coupon now and mail it to The Tribune Harmonious Contest today.

A CHARMING GUEST ROOM



THE soft tones of the maple furniture in the guest room at 3800 Sheridan road are charmingly set off by the hangings of bright glazed chintz, which material is repeated in the pillow covers over the taffeta spreads. A dressing table and highboy are important pieces which do not show in the picture.

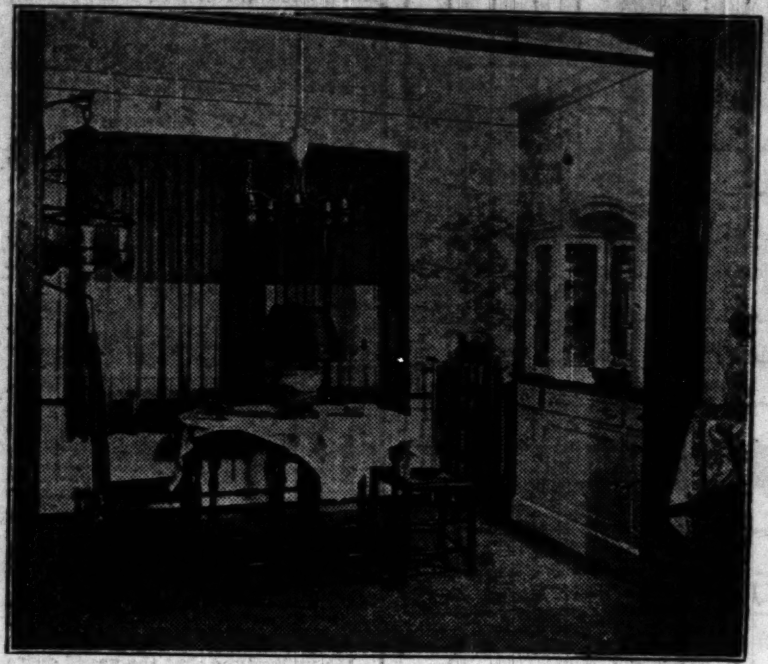
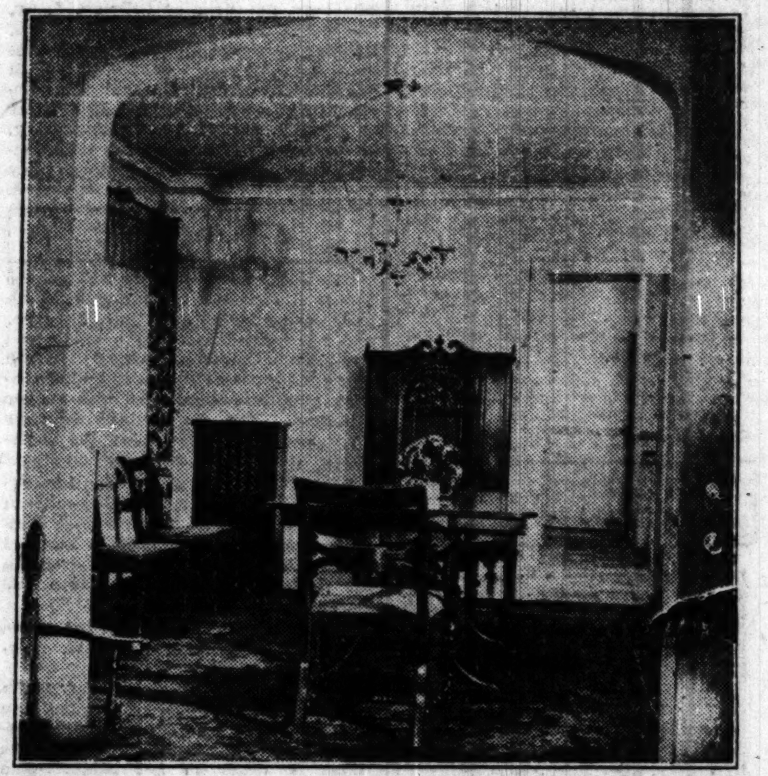
FOR SMALL DINING ROOM



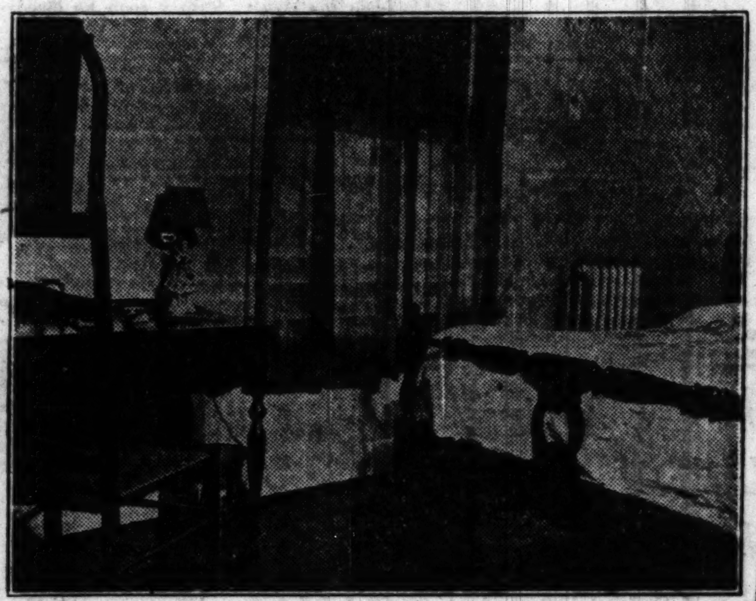
THE problem of the small dining room is solved with room to spare by the use of a gateleg table and simple bottomed chairs in this Palmer square home. The scenic paper and blue woodwork add to the spaciousness of this small room.

CHEERFUL DINING ROOM



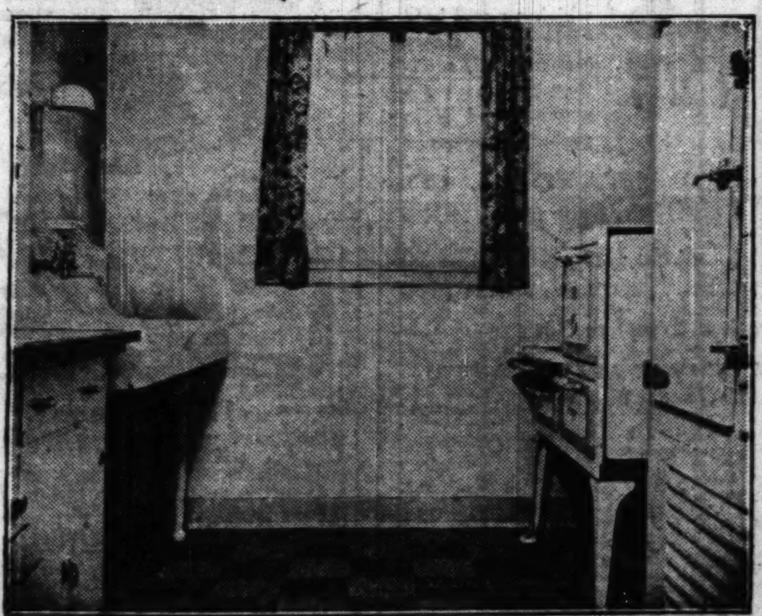
BOTH dignity and cheeriness are apparent in this dining room of the south side apartment. A Chinese rug sponsors the color combination of blue and green, which finds added expression in the hand blocked linen draperies over net glass curtains and in the sprigged chair sets. A floral picture against one wall adds to the whole. The furniture is walnut.

COLONIAL BEDROOM



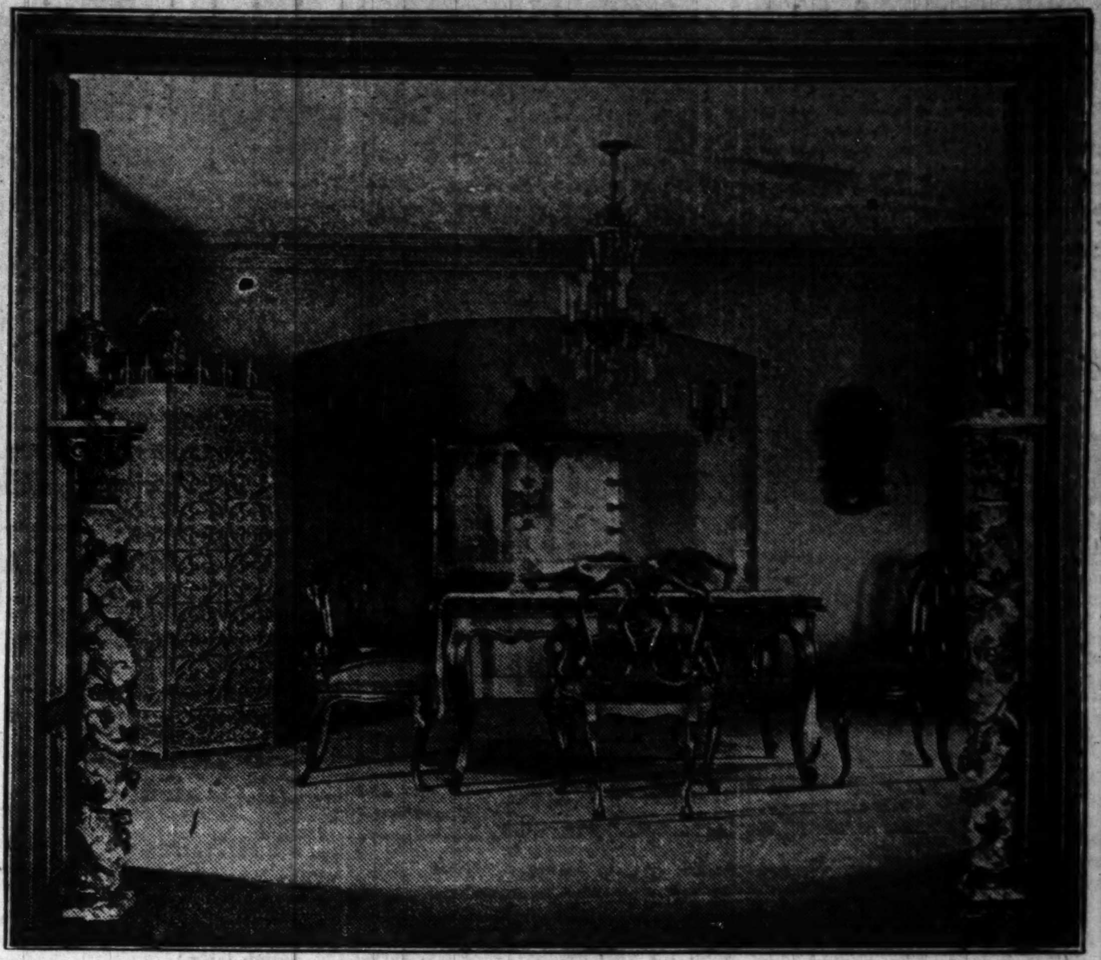
THE severity necessary to colonial furniture makes for a pleasant, if not frilly, bedroom in this Palmer square apartment. The candlewick spread, hooked rugs, a walnut chest of drawers, and a ladder-back chair combine in harmonious effect. The curtains are blue gauze.

IN A SPOTLESS KITCHEN



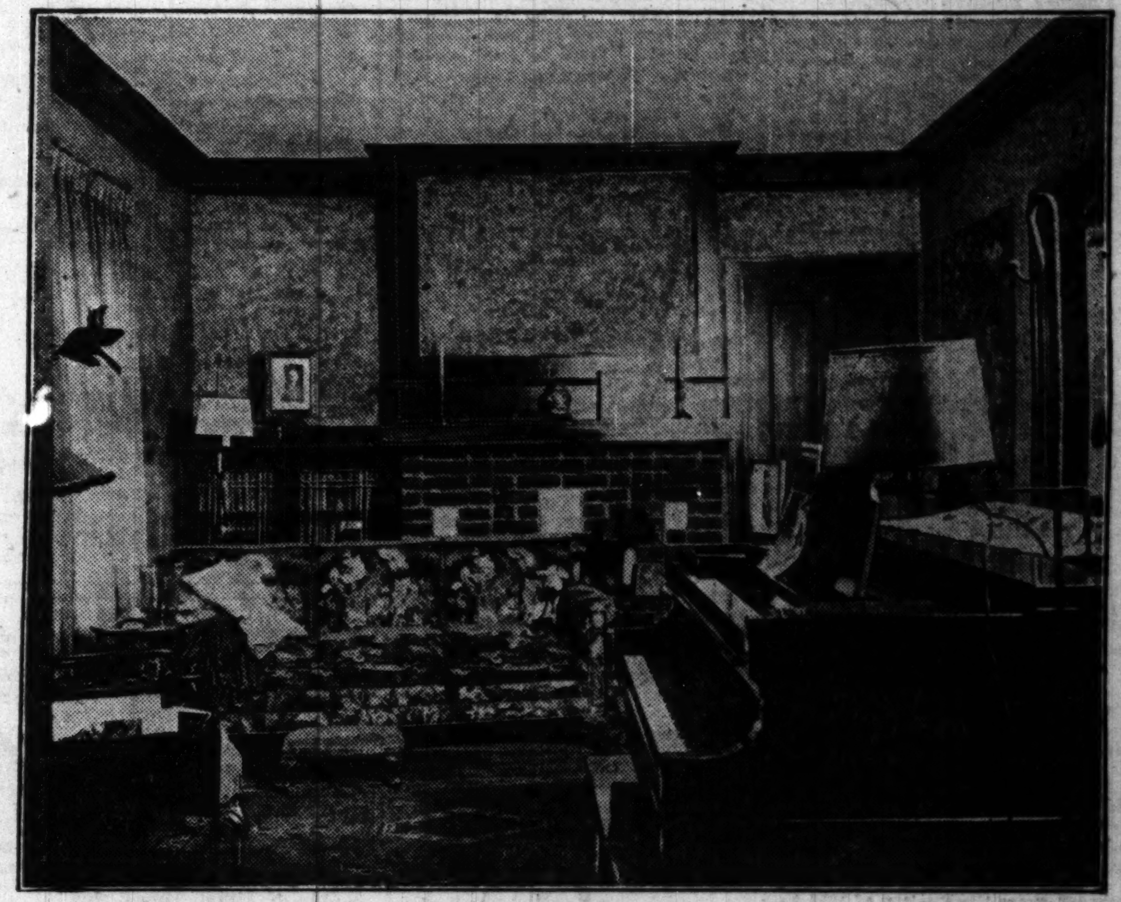
ONE would necessarily start the day off right after toast and bacon in this spotless kitchen out on Jeffery avenue. The floor is squares of cork in two shades of green, the woodwork and walls of the same tone, and the simple curtain of gay cretonne. The tools of the housewife's trade are all of white enamel.

DARING DINING ROOM COLORS



BLACK, green, red, and gold are daringly yet effectively combined in the dining room of this north side model apartment. The piece is a black and gold Chinese cabinet, set into a niche and topped by a figurine of terra cotta. The red note is introduced in the chair seats and the background of the wrought iron screen. Green walls and carpet complete the whole. The pedestals, which are between the dining and living rooms, are topped by black urns.

PLEASING LIVING ROOM EFFECT



GOLD silk gauze filters the light in pleasant effect in this living room at 3143 Palmer square. Comfort and livableness are reflected in the roomy couch done in glazed chintz, the piano close by, and in the placement of the attractive wrought iron lamps.

Modernist's Etching Mixed with Those of Insane; Public Fooled

PARIS.—(AP)—A modernist etching, palmed off on the public among a lot of queer drawings by inmates of insane asylums, has stirred up a tempest, much as it was intended to do.

"The Bad Physicians," by the Belgian artist, James Ensor, was published by one newspaper, along with many strange art works by the insane, which works recently were collected and exhibited by Dr. Marie, head of one of the principal asylums.

The public apparently accepted the bit of modern art as an asylum product, or at least said nothing. Friends of Ensor, however, raised a fuss and denounced the joke.

Humorous critics repeatedly had suggested there was a strong similarity between some of the new art cults and the untrained "expressions" of the insane, but the modernists saw no humor in the situation.

YESTERDAY afternoon Charley Red Eagle, who never lost a bet in his life, wagered ten dollars with several friends that he could stay under water for fifteen minutes without coming to the surface for air. Charley won the bet! The money was paid to his widow immediately.

LOST—A dime, somewhere between Dawson City and the stretch of timber sixty miles south of here. The date on the coin was 1899, and my initials are scratched on both sides. There is a small nick on one side, and the edges are rather worn. A most liberal reward if returned to my cabin.

We understand that the grand opera season is now going full blast down in the states. It seems that the more beautiful an opera singer's voice is, the homelier her mug gets. If we ever married a grand opera soprano, it would be with the understanding that if she ever quit singing for even a moment we would most certainly sock her with an ax.

Timothy O'Brien, who is a part owner in the firm of O'Brien, Levy, Rosenthal, Goldberg & Co., fur buyers, asks us to announce that their little place of business will be closed all day on St. Patrick's day. This decision was reached by the firm after an all night discussion. Messrs. Levy, Rosenthal and Goldberg are being attended by Dr. Brown, who says they are doing as well as can be expected.

A SHORT STORY

Hiram Hayseed lived on a farm. He was well educated, having read every mail order catalogue in existence, and his home contained a radio and all them gosh-durned things! He had heard a lot about the hard boiled citizens of Chicago, but he was rather skeptical. Yup, he doubted whether the town was as tough as the newspaper items made it appear.

"Gol darn it, I'll go an' see for myself!" says he, so he boarded a train one afternoon and breezed into Chicago about 9 p. m. Hiram stepped out of the depot, walked over to the curb and signaled a pirate gas wagon.

"Take me to the corner of State an' Madison streets," says Mr. Hayseed.

Now the depot was only six blocks from the above named spot, but the taxi bandit passed through North Chicago twice and South Chicago three times in order to get there. The bad news amounted to $18.75. Our hero crawled out of the burglar bus and walked around for a while looking at all the bright lights. He decided that he was hungry so he trotted into a night club and ordered a mess of ham and eggs. The bill was $8 plus a two buck cover charge. He handed the waiter ten berries. The waiter thanked him, but slipped him a dirty look. It cost Hiram four bits to get his hat back from Miss Golddigger in the check room. Then he went out and mingled with the crowds on the street. Pretty soon he discovered that he had lost his watch.

"By golly, I'm gettin' real careless," says he to himself, so he walked around looking for it on the sidewalk, but he didn't find it.

Just then a nice looking girl stumbled against him.

"O, excuse me," says she, "but I just couldn't help stumbling because I feel terribly weak. I ain't had nothin' to eat since this morning."

"Well, by cracky, nobody can ever say that Hiram Hayseed refused to feed a maiden in distress!" says our hero. The girl knew where there was a nice quiet place on a side street, so they went there. She sure ordered a queer meal for a famished mama! She squawked for a pair of pretzels and a gin highball. Then she ordered a highball without the pretzels, after which she ordered a pack of cigarets and two more highballs. The bill amounted to sixteen dollars. Then the poor girl discovered that she didn't have carfare home, so she borrowed ten bucks off Mr. Hayseed and left him, after promising to mail him the money. After she had went, Hiram felt for his diamond tie pin. It wasn't there, so he knew he must have left it home.

Well, our hero walked up and down the side streets for the next two or three hours, looking for adventure. He met a nice gentleman who sold him a fifty dollar diamond ring for fifteen bucks. The gentleman needed the money, but there wasn't any pawnshops open at that hour, so he let Mr. Hayseed have the gem. The gentleman wiped a couple of tears from his eyes and made Hiram promise to sell it back to him some day for fifty dollars.

By this time dawn was beginning to break, so Mr. Hayseed decided to go home. He climbed into another goofy looking taxi and went to the depot. The cab bill amounted to eleven berries.

"Aw, I knew it was the bunk!" grinned Hiram to himself. "This town is tame! Hell, I've been running around alone all night an' I didn't see even one robber!"

Ever since Mr. Volstead tried to improve on a well known book by inventing The Eleventh Commandment (Thou shalt not use alcohol except for rubbing purposes) the Yukon Kid has been able to make a fair living by bringing Laughing Sirup into our town from Canada on his dog sled. Yukon says he wishes Mr. Volstead would spring another one to the effect that "Thou shalt not flirt with Lady Nicotine." You can get lots more cigarets on a sled than bottles.

There are sixty seconds in a minute, and three children are born in this world every sixty seconds. Therefore we think Barnum was wrong when he remarked that there is a sucker born every minute. Where did he get the idea that the other two children are fed with a spoon?

We hereby continue our practice of asking our readers a few questions in order to let them test their intelligence. Here they are, fellows:

1. What famous man is responsible for the following quotation: "You can fool some people all of the time; you can fool all the people some of the time; but you can't fool a horsefly."
2. How many of our Popular Song Writers who rave about "dear old Dixie" have ever been south of Peoria, Illinois, and what was his name?
3. Name a foreign country (just south of the United States) which is probably wondering what the hell William Randolph Hearst is talking about.

* *

We have just uncovered some dirt on a gentleman named Rip Van Winkle. You know the story—he went up into the mountains and met a flock of little midgets. The midgets had a big keg of beer and they was playing Nine Pins. Rip Van Winkle didn't come home until twenty years afterwards and he claimed he had been asleep all that time. It's the bunk. We have gone into the matter thoroughly and have discovered that these midgets were a lost tribe of Scotchmen. Rip hadn't been asleep at all. He had just stuck around waiting for some one to offer him a drink.

The MacPherson family are now celebrating Christmas. This delay is due to the fact that they made a bum guess. They guessed that somebody would throw away a Christmas tree before this.

NOTICE: I have just discovered that there are 23 kids in my family instead of 22, and I don't think this extra one belongs to us, although I wouldn't swear to it. Will the other Eskimo families in this town please count their brats and see if one is missing? I thank you.

Old-time Leper's Colony of Paris to Be Re-established

PARIS.—(AP)—A leper colony, abolished centuries ago, is to be re-established in Paris.

At the old Hospital Saint Louis, built under Henry IV. in 1607, a wing will be fitted up for the unfortunates. Some authorities say leprosy is on the increase and the city has taken the situation so seriously as to appropriate a million francs for the new leper home.

"Unclean, unclean," the biblical warning of the lepers as they wandered about, had its equivalent in France in the sort of wood rattle which the lepers, obliged to wear a distinguishing costume, shook as they walked to enable people to get out of their way and keep at a safe distance.

For centuries there was a leper colony at the present prison Sant Lazare, 800 years old, not far from the downtown district of Paris. It was abolished when the place became a monastery 400 years ago.

HER SECRET.

Wife—Have you any secrets you keep from me, dearest?

Husband—None, darling.

Wife—Then I am determined I will have none from you, either.

Husband—You have secrets, then?

Wife—Only one, and I am determined to make a clean breast of it.

Husband [hoarsely]—Go on!

Wife—For several days I have had a severe longing for a new dress, with hat to match.

That fetched him.—London Opinion.

"The Race of Kings" Moves Cafe into a Busier Street

Mother and Charlie Start Long Pull to Success.

row. Just a door south, on the famous alley, was the old Globe, then owned by Mike McDonald, the famous gambler. Across the alley to the south was the Mall. Across the street were the Dispatch, Joe Dunlop's evening paper, and the Record and Daily News. Half a block to the north, on the corner of Washington and Fifth avenue, was the Times, then owned by Mayor Carter Harrison, the elder, and a half a block to the east, on Washington street, was John W. Scott's paper, the Herald. Two prosperous German papers, the Staats Zeitung, owned by Washington Hessing, and the Freie Presse, was also in the immediate neighborhood.

* *

Mother King's Famous Friends.

The new "King's" was much more pretentious than anything the mother and son had yet attempted. It was Charlie's restaurant as a matter of fact. Mother King was getting along in years and willingly passed up the business responsibility to her son, but she never failed to come in the evening and sit with her fancy work beside the cash box, talking with the people as they came and went.

She had been reluctant to leave the old place in "Newsboy's alley." It had come to have a sentimental attachment for her. There she had made some of the most prized friendships of her life, had made the acquaintance of men prominent not only in the local literary scene, but whose names were to become world famous. Eugene Field came regularly, and frequently left his check beside the cash box with a note "Till pay day." Men like Samuel J. Medill, Victor Lawson, Charles Dana, James W. Scott she came to know well. James Whitcomb Riley had been a visitor, and so had the dashing Richard Harding Davis.

Bill Nye she knew and talked to often. Many a local society leader might have envied her that, for they had tried to lionize Nye when he came out in 1890, first, because he was one of the foremost humorists of the day, and second because he came of a "fine old family down east."

This is the way Nye spoke of his ancestors. "Family? Well, I guess! I traced our people back to the European police courts and even beyond that, discovering at last in France our coat of alms; but I lost it from the line where it was airing last summer."

* *

The Whitechapel Club.

It was natural that notables should drift into King's, even though it was a modest bit of a place, for the alley got to be a kind of rendezvous of the nifties of the nineties. Just down a short distance from the restaurant, for instance, was the Whitechapel club. There was scarcely a famous person who came this way between 1889 and 1895 who was not a guest of the Whitechapelers. The club was one of the most interesting ever formed in the middle west. It had a motley membership made up of cab drivers, poets, undertakers, actors, lawyers, physicians and newspaper men. It is said that the only question raised of a man submitted for membership was "Is he a good fellow and will he loosen up?"

Most of the Whitechapelers who patronized King's in the alley continued their patronage after the restaurant was moved to Fifth avenue, but with the larger quarters, the more diversified trade, the place naturally lost some of its character.

* *

Back to the Old King's.

However, after midnight, when the papers have gone to press, King's is still the same old King's. Let's pretend we're young bloods about town in 1895. We've been to a show—McVicker's, probably, and we wander down Madison to Wells. We'll go into King's, have a look 'round and eat something. There are two rooms opened into one with a large entrance door in the center. On one side are tables only; on the other, tables and a horseshoe lunch counter. We'll take the lunch counter side because that's where the reporters come.

That good looking man with the flashing smile who bows to us as we go in with the manner of a grand duke is Charlie King. His eyes dancing, merry, and he says something to us that makes us feel a little merry, too. "Anybody with a manner like that should be a politician," you say. A plump, black haired woman smiles at us over a rose bordered centerpiece she is making.

"No, thanks, Charlie, we'll just take a table clear in the back of the room," we say.

There is a congenial sound of tinkling of glasses, of clanking silver and a strongly pleasing odor of frying ham and of strong coffee. The linen is shining white; the silver still looks new—of course, the restaurant is only two years old.

* *

George Ade.

Plenty of people come in whom we don't recognize, but they are all probably important enough. Charlie talks to them as if they were sultans, and he—well, as if he were Mahomet's high priest. But here comes some one we know. A tall, lanky youth, wearing a low crowned Weber and Fields hat, a solemn expression on his face. He comes down and sits near us, deposits the hat on a clothes tree nearby, and studies the carte du jour with the gravity of a man about to make a momentous personal decision. That is George Ade, a night police reporter.

They will all be coming in now soon—all the night police reporters. "Night police reporters?" you query. "They must be hard boiled gentlemen." Well, let's see. Ade, of course, is one. So is the man just behind him—Arthur Sears Henning. And the dapper, urbane fellow with the correct clothes following was a night police reporter once, too. He is Percy Hammond. With Hammond, and somewhat contrasting with him, is a tall, gaunt figure of a man. His tie is a little askew. His clothes hang on him with the carelessness bespeaking one who cares little about such amenities as fashionable dress. He is more concerned with the vital things of life, such as good wining and dining. His name is Dick Little—yes, R. H. L. now.

The tables are beginning to fill up. There are so many around us we can't identify them all, but even with a hasty glance we can pick out the rest of the night police reporters. There are Charley Erbstein, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, Barney Mullaney, and just beyond them Brand Whitlock, James O'Donnell Bennett. The tall, thin man with the ink stained hands is John T. McCutcheon. The kindly looking fellow writing on the back of the menu card is Finley Peter Dunne. Too bad we can't read what is written there, because it is probably some side splitting yarn of his well known character, Mr. Dooley.

The clock hands fly along. The air is getting heavy with tobacco smoke. We wink at our waitress. She is remarkably responsive to the wink and she is a pretty little thing, too. (Most of the waitresses in King's are pretty.) We get our bill and go out.

Mother King smiles at us with a warm friendliness as we go and Charlie is hurrying to ask us if everything was quite all right. Remarkable man—Charlie.

* *

Charlie's Memory.

The night air outside hits our nostrils with a refreshing coolness. We walk along and talk about the Kings—especially of Charlie. He has a reputation of being a mixer, and no wonder! Anybody, however cold, would thaw before his simple, expansive personality. He is always gay, seems to have no problems at all of his own, or at least never mentions them, and talks to you about yours as if he had a direct personal concern in you. He never forgets a face, and once he has learned your name never forgets that, either. Maybe it is a petty little vanity in us to feel flattered when some one remembers us after only a fleeting acquaintance, but, petty or not, there are few of us who don't respond to it.

There is no question that the food at King's was good and the price was moderate. Many dined there who knew the intricate culinary perfection of Paris and compared the "chicken meuniere" of King's favorably with its counterpart in the old Parisian restaurants. But still the food and the price were not all. It was the genial friendliness of Charlie, greeting you at the door, that made you want to go back. Certainly it made the women want to go back. His laughing eyes caused many a feminine heart to flutter, and it was forever tantalizing to know he was a bachelor.

But he was a man's man, too. Men were constantly entreating him to come to banquets and parties "to liven things up." If there was an awkward lull in a conversation, Charlie would come to the rescue with a joke that would break the spell.

In January of 1901 he came down with typhoid pneumonia, and on the 25th he was dead. Few men have been more lamented. Streams of friends and acquaintances came to the funeral. Lots of complimentary things were said. Probably the most flattering was, "He was never known to be anything but pleasant."

The next installment of "The Race of Kings" will appear in next Sunday's Metropolitan section.

A LA MODE.

George Lawler was bemoaning the passing of the old time waiter who could take an order, give quiet, courteous, attentive service and not expect you to buy him the place before you left.

"It's different nowadays. Just recently I asked for steak, iced tea and pie and the waiter returned with pie and hot tea.

"Where's my steak?" I demanded, "and why did you bring me hot tea when I asked for cold?"

"Keep your shirt on," was the gruff reply. "The tea will be cold by the time you get your steak.'"—Los Angeles Times.

MRS. JOHN ALDEN CARPENTER.

DAUGHTER of generations of Chicagoans and born to wealth, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter has spent her energies in movements for the development of the city's artistic side. Her skill as an interior decorator has been called upon on many occasions and she has gladly lent her talent, especially to programs with charity making demands. The Arts club and the Scribblers' club have found her always active in their cause. It was her skill that was responsible for the interior decoration of the Auditorium. In fact, Chicago is well sprinkled with her handiwork.

Rosa Raisa to Sing on Radio Tomorrow Night

Will Be Guest Soloist in Family Party.

Rosa Raisa, prima donna of the Chicago Opera company, who will be the guest soloist tomorrow night in the family party program broadcast from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, brings to the radio audience one of the superbly artistic bits of salvage saved from the Russian maelstrom—a glorious, dramatic soprano voice. Born of wealthy Jewish parents in Ballystock, Poland, in 1893, Rosa Raisa passed through the tortures of Jewish persecution as her father's fortune became depleted, and finally escaped, after bitter hardships, to Naples, where she arrived as a young girl with nothing but a loaf of stale bread, a bundle of ragged clothing—and a voice.

Today she is one of the foremost sopranos of the concert and opera stage and occupies a distinctive position in the field of modern ingenue singers because of her type—that of a soprano of the old "grand style," like Nordica and Patti. But two decades of work and struggle lie behind her.

In Naples she abandoned the study of dentistry, which she had started with a cousin in Poland as her father's fortune waned, and fought her way to recognition as a singer under Madame Marchisio. After singing in Milan, Rome, and other Italian cities, she appeared at Covent Garden, London, and was instantly successful. Her voice attracted the attention of the great Campanini and it was he who first brought her to the United States.

The family program tomorrow night will have only two parts instead of three, as heretofore. The first part will include a symphony orchestra with Roderic Graham as conductor and Madame Raisa as soloist. The second part will feature a concert band under the leadership of Patrick Conway, with Madame Raisa in one group of two numbers. The entire program will be devoted to popular classics, ballads, and light opera numbers, and, in addition to W-G-N, will be broadcast over twenty-nine other stations from the studios of the National Broadcasting company.

Mountaineers of India to Get Jazz Music Via Radio

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, Feb. 11.—Jazz music is to penetrate the hidden tracts of the Indian hills. A Bombay merchant has donated ten complete sets which are to be installed in the forests of Central India, seven among the Bhil tribes in the Salpura range, and three among the Khonds of the central provinces.

One set, equipped with a loud speaker, will be installed in the courtyard of the temple of Vindhya, where the mountain goddess of the Bhils is worshipped. The effect of latest jazz tunes coming through the ether, upon the dances performed before the shrine of the goddess, is being watched with considerable interest.

In the case of the Khonds, the donor has recognized their war like qualities in specifying that not jazz, but the soothing melodies of India be broadcast to them, so as not to excite their already overwrought temperaments.

COUNTERPHASE RADIO
"Results have been truly remarkable" writes

IN CHARGE OF FIELD WORK

NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.

December 27, 1927

Bremer-Tully Manufacturing Company,
520 South Canal St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

The latitude and altitude of New Orleans create atmospheric conditions that make radio reception of a satisfactory nature very difficult. We tried out the highly advertised receiving sets that are considered standards of excellence but the reception was so unsatifactory that we discontinued our efforts. I had about given up the idea of owning a radio entirely when I met an electrical engineer in Cleveland and he was so insistent that I could get good results from a Bremer-Tully set under any conditions that I decided to give one of your receivers a trial.

I recently purchased your 8-13 Receiver and your new B-T Speaker. The results have been truly remarkable. Under anything like favorable atmospheric conditions we can bring in any of the big stations in the country. The super-stations come in so loud that it is necessary to cut down the volume considerably. The mechanic who installed the set said that we might expect an AC hum but it has failed to materialize. Your direct socket unit has performed perfectly.

Just a word about the dial. It is a revelation to my friends when we set the dial on the published wave length of a station, turn on the juice and there it is. We do not know of any other receiver that will do this.

Sincerely yours,

C. D. Corey

Radio to Become Great Factor in Moving Trains

Engineer and Conductor on Freights Can Talk.

American railroads plan to go rapidly forward in the next five years in establishing radio communication for handling freight trains, R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association, has informed the federal radio commission.

Experiments in communication between the locomotive and caboose of a freight train and between the office and switch engine in a big railroad yard have indicated radio service is reliable and economical, Mr. Aishton told the commission.

The greater efficiency and safer handling of freight trains must necessarily result in a saving of time and consequent reduction in the handling cost of the nation's freight and the improvement of this service, he said.

Most Desirable Waves.

The devolpment of train radio communication, using low power tranmitters, has proceeded in the short wave band of 109 to 130 meters, G. T. Stanton, chairman of the radio committee of the railway association, said. Experiments have indicated that these wave lengths are the most desirable for train service, he added.

"This is due to the fact that the antenna is limited in length by conditions governing its mounting on the locomotive or caboose," Mr. Stanton said.

"The efficiency is very low, due to the high absorption of radiated energy by the steel mass of the locomotive and the steel parts of the caboose. Wave lengths substantially above this band would require antenna of such length as to be impossible of mounting upon railroad rolling stock, or would require loading to such an extent that the already inefficient radiation would be reduced."

Would Avoid Interference.

Any substantial increase in the wave length also would place this service near the lower limits of the broadcast band and might cause some interference with broadcast receivers near the railroad right of way, Mr. Stanton asserted.

Attempts have been made to determine whether or not interference with broadcast programs can be caused by the train sets. A test was made recently at Richmond, Va., when an impromptu program was broadcast by the train transmitter for one hour.

Frequent announcements were made that this program was from the train, and all persons hearing the program were requested to report reception. Mr. Stanton says not a single report was received. Only one case of interference was reported, and upon investigation the set was found to be a regenerative receiver made in 1922. The voice from the train was faintly heard as the train passed within 300 feet.

Radio aids materially in the elimination of train delays occasioned by lack of communication and reduces the time consumed in performing switching operations, recalling flagmen and starting trains, Mr. Stanton declares. It also provides a means of notifying the engineman in cases of emergency to stop the train.

The Detector Tube Is the Heart of a Radio Receiver

Like the human heart, the radio tube detector is the life valve of a receiver.

A popular belief that a detector merely "detects waves emitted from a broadcasting station" is only partly correct. It not only detects, but rectifies, making up its most important duty.

Rectification is essential, because a transmitter sends out a current whose speed of vibration or frequency is too high for the ear to pick up. This frequency is lowered by the detector.

To perform its part efficiently the tube has three elements, a filament, a grid, and a plate.

When the A battery heats the filament negative electrons are thrown off. The plate or collectors, which is positively charged by the B battery, collects these negative impulses, following the electrical law that opposites attract.

The grid, which is a mesh of fine wire inserted between the filament and the plate, is the governor or regulator. The current reaching the detector is alternating at a high speed, having both negative and positive phases. It is the duty of the grid to let only the negative half pass to the positive plate.

The action of the grid is something like that of an automatic interrupter, opening and closing he plate circuit thousands of times a second. It is this relay action which prepares the music and voice for the ear of the listener.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

DOGGONE those lectures that the announcers read off between orchestra offerings! You know:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is station WASP, and tonight we are presenting Josef Meyerboomboom's famous Concerto in B still. Of all of Meyerboomboom's works—when he did work—this work is acclaimed as his greatest.

"Tonight, as the concert opens, you will hear a prolonged sizzling by the clarinets, which depicts the friars in the act of frying. The story, of course, is familiar to you all—the tale of the timid little match girl who early falls in love with a Norwegian. The Norwegian is in reality a rathskellar, but no one suspects it at first.

"The violins surge upward then in a mighty wave, followed by the clatter of hoofbeats on the kettle drums. The scene, you know, is now the roller skating rink, and Alfred, the wigmaker, enters from the left, making faces at the Confederate soldiers. Here you will notice the woodwinds and oboes panting furiously and two gentlemen in the balcony coughing.

"After the first movement of this delightful concerto comes the second movement, which is a kind of flank movement. The cornets and trombones are heard blaring in an ecstasy of melody, which represents the whimsical scene on the fire escape. Little Bethyl, the flaxen haired child, has stolen three hot cross buns and is hiding from the band of Republicans who have pursued her ever since their convention in Los Angeles. There comes a lone wail of a tender flute, which you can take to mean anything you darned please, and then a perfect crescendo and alli-oopo of majestic music closing the second movement.

"After the intermission the 'cellos and the concertinas are discerned heralding the approach of the Corn Borer, in a frenzy of martial harmony. The Corn Borer strides into the scene, but plants himself in the wrong seat, and the peasants laugh loud and long. The latter is illustrated by the quaking of the saxophones and zithers. Finally the old witch turns out to be a golden lamp post in disguise, and the real daughter of the new king—so there is feasting and merry making throughout the land—and the concerto ends in an avalanche of heavenly music played slightly pistachio. I thank you. Don't forget to send for our free booklet on bicycle riding. The music will now start."

WELL, SIR, if everybody else is going to write a song about going home back home to Rhode Island and Mammy, then we're going to write a song, too. It seems to us that Idaho is a state that has been plumb neglected. Let's tune up our lyres and smack the string for Idaho. Hey-hey!

"I gotta gal lives 'way out west
An' of all my cookies she's the best.
In her little old sunbonnet
With the yellow ribbon on it,
She lives 'way out on' the Idaho farm
With a flock o' freckles on her arm.
Mammy—Mammy!
And that is why I say:

CHORUS:

O, you should see my Idaho Ida hoe.
She's my Ida and I'm her Joe.
She looks so sweet the birds sing tweet
When Ida hoes Idaho's biggest beet.
I wanna go back to Ida and stay forevermore,
Where the fields of cotton grow 'round the cabin door.
I'll be so happy
When Ida shows that Ida knows—
I wanna see my Idaho Ida hoe!"
(Dum-deedle-ump-dum—dum-dum!)

WHILE THE radio is now going into the matter of education full blast it would be a good thing if this new miracle could pep up the old methods of teaching. We suggest a course in the dynamic salesmanship system of teaching Latin, for instance. Here's one day's lecture by the dynamic professor of the radio:

"Well, here we are again, boys and girls. Wonderful day, isn't it? I've got a great little proposition in Latin today that I'm sure you're going to fall in love with.

"You're looking charming today, miss—I mean this little lady down here in the first row. In fact, you all look wonderful! Health is wealth, they say, and we must all be on our toes every minute of the day. Up and at 'em all the time!

"Tackle your lessons and throw 'em for a loss! Slip 'em an uppercut and a solar plexus, and show 'em you're the master! Go after 'em with rod and gun and whip 'em to a frazzle! Sink or swim, do or die, and never give up the ship!

Worry is only imaginary—nothing daunts the man who tries—go at your task with a will—and an apple a day keeps the doctor away!

"Now, take this proposition. It says on page 4 of our Latin text that 'Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres.' Now, if you'll just set your minds hard on that, you can knock it for a goal!

"Come on—let's go—call your football signals—and hit the line! It's a Latin line, and an easy one! Sic 'em! Let's have some pep! Who's got it?

"Come now, let's snap it up! Faster! Faster! Think fast! Let's go!

"What's the matter? Try again. Keep your mind intent on that line from Cæsar! Come on, now; gotta have some pep! Don't give up! Step on the gas!

"Hasn't anybody got it yet? Remember our mottoes! Now, dive in and smack that line for a ten yard loss! Keep saying to yourself, 'Every day in every way!' Think hard! Now, let's try again. Say to yourself that you're going to put this over, and nothing can stop you! One, two, three—go!

"It's a rare and beautiful language—Latin is. Nothing like it this side of Italy. It's a tongue that has come down through the ages. As easy as all get out! It's just begging you to learn it! Come now—what am I bid on this line from Cæsar? Who's going to be the lucky one? Whoever gets the line first, you know, receives a fine, big shining mark of 100! Let's go! Don't give up the ship! Fight, fight, fight."

From Bananas to Bach, Trend of Radio Music

Climbs from Syncopation to the Classics.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 11.—From "Yes We Have No Bananas" to Bach's "Air on the G String." From "red-hot" syncopation to the dignity of the classics.

That, according to Victor Saudek, conductor of the Little Symphony orchestra at station KDKA, has been the evolution of musical taste among radio listeners since broadcasting became an established institution a little more than seven years ago. And there is no one, perhaps, whose opinion on such matters is entitled to more respect than is Mr. Saudek's, for he, as head of the first orchestra ever organized exclusively for radio broadcasting, has been presenting concerts over the air nightly for more than five years.

Early Fans Demanded Jazz.

When dinner concerts by the Little Symphony first became a regular feature, Saudek says he and his fellow musicians became the target for a volley of caustic correspondence. "If you want anybody to listen to you, lay off the high-brow junk," a typical letter said. "Give us something peppy, like 'Red Hot Mamma,'" said another.

After a few months, however, a majority of the fans asked for folk songs. The Stephen C. Foster melodies and love ballads were requested more frequently than any other. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," was one of the favorites. Another was "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Light opera, notably Victor Herbert's works, next came into favor with the listeners. Saudek began to receive hundreds of letters requesting selections from "The Red Mill," "Sari," "The Chocolate Soldier," and the entire list of Gilbert and Sullivan works.

Standard Music.

It was about three years ago when an overwhelming sentiment in favor of "standard" music made itself manifest. For a period of many months selections such as "The Overture to Poet and Peasant" and "The Overture to William Tell" lead in popularity.

For the last year or more Saudek's programs have been made up almost exclusively of so-called semi-classical and classical music, and he says there is no doubt that this is the type of music his listeners now want. Every mail, he says, brings letters begging him not to cheapen his programs—a distinct contrast to the general attitude of five years ago. The most frequent requests are for the various classical serenades, minuets, intermezzi and ballets, and also for classic bits from the popular symphonies of Haydn, Schubert, and Mozart.

Modern Airs Unpopular.

"The elevation of public taste within five years has been astounding," Mr. Saudek says, "but the radio audience is not yet prepared for the highest musical literature, such as complete symphonies by Beethoven and Brahms. Nor is the public yet ready to hear modern music, from the pens of such composers as Ravel, Stravinsky, Honegger, Milhaud, Di Falla, Schoenberg and Bela Bartok. It is sad but true that if we were to feature such works our audiences would be decimated in short order."

Rocky Mountain Towns Arrange Own Programs

Denver, Colo., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—An unusual method of determining what kind of music its listeners want has been adopted by KOA here. It allows the listeners to arrange a complete program once each week.

Each program is arranged by listeners in some town in the Rocky mountain region, assisted by its local paper. Listeners send the paper names of selections they want played or sung, the paper sends in the names of selections for which the demand is greatest, and staff artists at KOA present the program.

In many instances leading musicians come from the town sponsoring the program to take part in the broadcasting. Approximately 30 such programs have been broadcast by KOA. The idea has proven so popular that there is now a long waiting list of towns throughout the region that have asked to arrange a program.

JAMES G. STANLEY.

MRS. C. E. TRAVER.

TWO bridge stars from the west—Mrs. C. E. Traver of Salt Lake City and James G. Stanley of Denver—met Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead in the radio game broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N.

Mr. Stanley was the south player and dealer. His cards—spades, 4; hearts, A, 4, 2; diamonds, A, 7, 5, 3; clubs, 10, 9, 6, 4, 3—did not permit him to bid. Although he held two quick tricks, he had no medium by which he could convey that information to his partner. Had his five card suit been headed by one of his aces, a bid would have been justified; but a four card suit headed by an ace and without another honor is too weak to bid with any such hand as his. As Mr. Work explained, in commenting on the bidding of this hand, four card suits rarely are bid unless the hand contains the three top honors [ace, king, queen] or two of them plus a side trick; and, except with an occasional freak hand, three suits should be stopped to warrant a no trump.

Mr. Work, west, of course bid one heart on: Spades, 9, 7, 5; hearts, K, Q, J, 10, 8; diamonds, 8, 6, 4; clubs, A, K.

RAISES HER PARTNER

Mr. Whitehead, north, made a defensive bid of one spade on: Spades, K, J, 10, 8, 6, 2; hearts, 6; diamonds, K, Q, 9, 2; clubs, 7, 5.

Mrs. Traver's holdings of: Spades, A, Q, 3; hearts, 9, 7, 5, 3; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, Q, J, 8, 2, enabled her to raise her partner's hearts to two. Mr. Whitehead's spade bid made her ace-queen of spades almost surely good for two tricks; she also had four trumps, assistance in clubs, and only a doubleton in diamonds. It requires more strength to raise from one to two than from two to three, but Mrs. Traver had ample for even the more exacting raise.

Mr. Stanley and Mr. Work passed, as did Mr. Whitehead, also. His defensive spade bid had been made with minimum strength, and having received no encouragement from his partner, he could not go on. Mr. Work, therefore, became the declarer, with his contract two hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, north, led the king of diamonds. Mrs. Traver spread her hand for the dummy, and Mr. Work played from it the 10 of diamonds. Mr. Stanley, south, after some very clever thinking, played the ace of diamonds, taking his partner's trick. Mr. Stanley counting two probable tricks in diamonds and a sure trick with the ace of trumps, realized that but one trick more was needed to save game. He saw that he could obtain that trick by ruffing a spade, provided, as was probable, that declarer had another diamond. Mr. Stanley therefore overtook the first diamond trick in order to lead his singleton spade, well knowing that his partner would understand the play. Mr. Work played the 4 of diamonds.

LEADS SINGLETON

Mr. Stanley immediately led his singleton 4 of spades; Mr. Work played the 5; Mr. Whitehead the king, and dummy won with the ace.

Dummy led the 3 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the ace; Mr. Work played the 10, retaining the 8 spot so that Dummy's 9 could be used as an entry if occasion required; Mr. Whitehead played the 6.

Mr. Stanley led the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the queen; dummy the jack.

Mr. Whitehead, just as Mr. Stanley had foreseen, caught the import of Mr. Stanley's overtake of the first lead of diamonds, followed by his lead of a spade up to the major tenace in dummy. This play fairly shrieked the fact that Mr. Stanley's spade was a singleton. Therefore Mr. Whitehead did as he was expected to do, by leading the jack of spades. He played the jack in order to force dummy's queen and establish his own 10, and at the same time give Mr. Stanley the requested chance to ruff and save the game. Dummy covered with the queen of spades; Mr. Stanley trumped with the 2 of hearts; Mr. Work was forced to follow suit with the 7 of spades.

MAKES THREE HEARTS

Mr. Stanley then led the 4 of clubs: Mr. Work played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 5; dummy the 2.

Mr. Work proceeded to get the last outstanding trump. He led the king of hearts; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 2 of spades; dummy played the 5 of hearts; Mr. Stanley the 4 of hearts.

Mr. Work then led the king of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; dummy the 8; Mr. Stanley the 3.

Mr. Work next led the 8 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead followed suit with the 2; dummy trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the 5 of diamonds.

Dummy led the good queen of clubs, permitting Mr. Work to discard the 9 of spades. Mr. Stanley, south, played the 6 of clubs and Mr. Whitehead, north, discarded the 6 of spades.

Mr. Work then spread his hand, displaying three trumps for the three last tricks, which the opponents conceded as winners.

Mr. Work, therefore, made three odd at hearts, scoring 24 points in the trick score, and 80 points in the honor score for four honors in one hand.

Even the most expert players are helpless against a distribution like that shown in this hand, when the opponents are on the alert to seize the opportunity for a defensive play like that made by Mr. Stanley.

Why don't we boost it harder?

AFTER a few days' experience with the new Atwater Kent A. C. set, radio listeners say to us:

"You didn't tell us half when you said this was a good set. It's more than good. It's a wonder! Why don't you boost it harder?"

We do boost it. The trouble is that words cannot tell the whole story. A few evenings in your home—that's the way to find out—from the Atwater Kent 37 itself.

It is so small you can place it anywhere. The cord that brings the power from a lamp socket of the house lighting system (at a cost of only a fraction of a cent an hour) is more than ten feet long—giving you your choice of position. The unusual design and the soft glowing beauty of the satin finish please everybody.

Now for listening!

With a tiny gold switch you snap on the power. With the FULL-VISION Dial you summon the programs. It's magic—this FULL-VISION Dial. You see it all at a glance. You jump from station to station in a split second. It's like hitting the bull's-eye with every shot!

And the tone! When you realize that the re-creative genius of this set does full justice to the voices of the artists and the music of their instruments, you will marvel how such perfection can be attained.

Raise the lid!

For your answer—raise the lid and make a closer examination than you had time for in your first eagerness to see what the set would do.

You will see how the space-saving compactness of the set has been accomplished—how the cabinet is so constructed that it completely shields the electrical assembly inside—how the power supply is doubly shielded—how every visible part is beautifully made and finished. You will know it to be a fact when we tell you that the parts you don't see—even the tiniest of them—have received equal attention. You will know that all this counts in the performance of the Atwater Kent 37—in your lasting satisfaction.

How they talk about it!

Lasting satisfaction! You must have it. That is why we match every working part of every receiver—why we put every receiver through 222 tests or inspections—why many parts are tested for accuracy to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch—why every tenth employee in the whole 15-acre Atwater Kent factory is an inspector or tester.

That is why so many people—veterans of radio and novices—have bought this new self-contained A. C. set—why many are buying two sets for different parts of their homes—why they're telling their friends about it and the astonishingly low price made possible by big-scale production—why, almost overnight, the Atwater Kent 37 has become the most popular radio in the world.

Try it. You'll see!

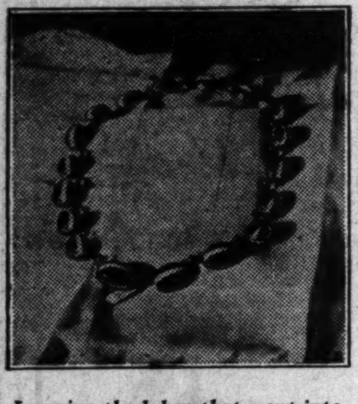
Antique Jewelry Is a Modern Fad

Smart Woman of Today Wears Her Grandmother's Gems

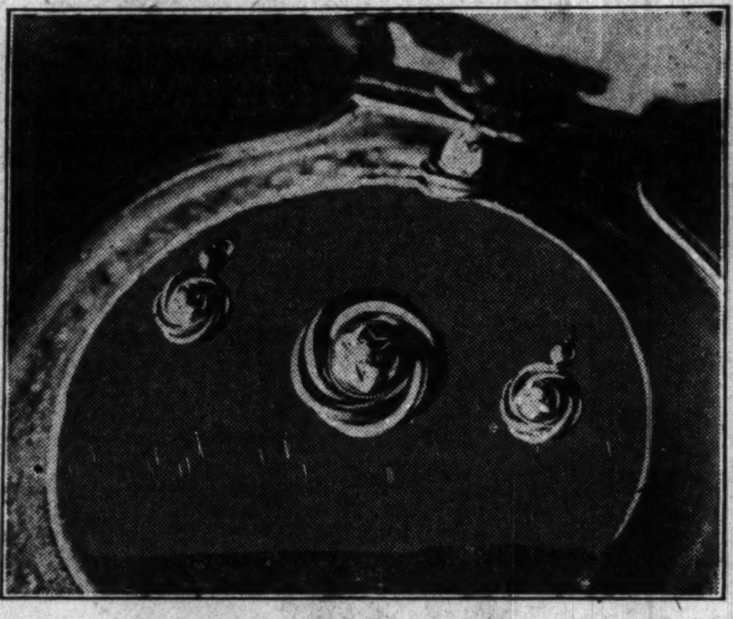
A set of old garnets! What a treasure for wear with the white chiffon evennig frock. Earrings, pin, and necklace are all the same color, each stone beautifully matched, and well under $200 for them all. They are more than a hundred years old.

A rope of coral for the neck, with tassels of coral, too. Two bracelets and a pair of earrings. All are made of the finest beads and are a delightful watermelon color. They look as though they might have been stolen from a pirate.

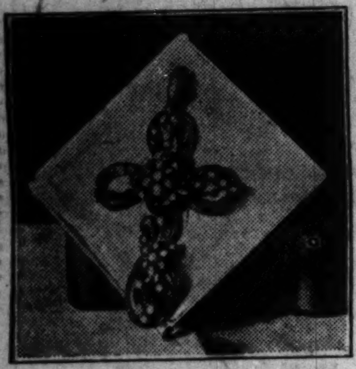
The red planet—Mars, in garnets as beautiful in color as rubies, because the pendant was made in the days when they backed stones to make them more brilliant. It can be worn as a pin or a pendant.



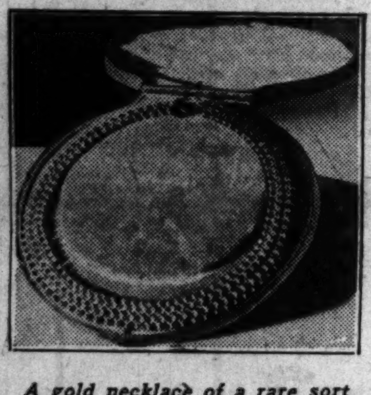
Imagine the labor that went into the making of this chain of old agates. Each piece is exactly like the other, black with white stripes, and polished beautifully. A stunning accompaniment to the black and white costume.



The craze for antique jewelry makes this Empire set of gold with blue enameled stars and pearl centers a real find. The large piece is a brooch, the two small ones are earrings, and the medium sized one is a pendant, but could be used as a clasp for pearls.

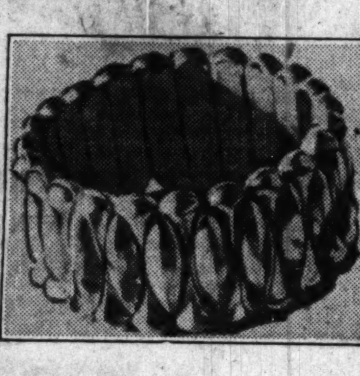


Among Victorian treasures this cross has a high place. It is of beautiful design in gold set with turquoises, which are now the latest desire of every woman's heart since Paris has acclaimed them.



A gold necklace of a rare sort because the workmanship is practically obsolete. Each link is made separately and then put together by hand. It is not heavy and is old gold in color and metal.

This beautiful old brooch is like a flower, it is so delicately worked. It looks like some of the gold work on early Italian altar vessels. In the center are some amethysts of an especially lovely pale color.



A heavy gold bracelet of fine workmanship. It was made about eighty years ago. It is somewhat flexible and the design looks as if it might have been inspired by some of the goldsmiths of the middle ages.

Wanted to Make Them Right.

Last year at the January sales I bought a pair of shoes at one of Chicago's prominent stores. Not being particularly in need of them at the time, I put them away until about the next July. After wearing them a few times I found they were rather uncomfortable, so I took them back to the store to see whether they could be made easier to wear. After looking well at the shoes, the head of the repair department told the store manager nothing could be done to make them more comfortable for me, as they were evidently made on the wrong last to suit my feet.

Much to my surprise the manager called a salesman and told him to fit me with any pair of shoes I wanted. I finally chose another pair of the same value as those I returned, and with no extra expense and with all courtesy, these were forwarded to me.

Needless to say, I shall always go to this same store whenever I need new shoes. M. F.

Showed Understanding.

One day my sister offered to treat me to a soda, so we went into a shop near a movie theater. After the waitress had taken our order, sister discovered she had left her coin purse in her other handbag at home, so she rushed over to the fountain and told the proprietor she would have to cancel the order, giving the reason.

To her astonishment he smilingly said, "You may have your soda and pay me the next time you come to a show."

It was the first time she had been in the shop and I had been there but once, but as he had saved us from a most embarrassing moment we decided that such courtesy deserved more of our trade. A. M. G.

Generosity Appreciated.

We had been trading at a combined grocery and meat market. When my sister fell ill it was necessary for us to buy a marrow bone every day to make soup for her. The owner of this store said he could not sell us the bone only, but it was necessary for us to take the meat also.

As we had no use for the meat, we tried a different butcher and he was kind enough to let us have the bone without the meat. More than that, he saved us one every day and gave it to us for nothing.

Needless to say, we now give him our entire meat trade. M. C. H.

CHICAGO BACHELORS

ROBERT H. ALLERTON.

HOW Robert H. Allerton has managed to remain single is one of those things that can't be explained. Perhaps the imposing sum of his eligible qualities has made the girls too anxious. Besides being affable and charming, characteristics which make him a most desirable dinner guest, he belongs to all the most exclusive clubs in town, including the Casino, the University, Saddle and Cycle, Racquet, and the Arts club, and is one of the city's most important patrons of the arts. He is a trustee of the Art institute, and recently the Agnes W. Allerton galleries for textiles and decorative arts, given to the institute in memory of his stepmother, were opened. You can't go very far in the institute without encountering some of the many gifts he has made. He has also made numerous trips abroad to select works of art for the institute. And that's to say nothing of his stunning estate at Monticello, Ill., where he has entertained large and highly enjoyable house parties. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Man's Waist Line Moves Up; Plaits Decreed by Tailors

LONDON.—(AP)—Man's waist line has gone up a notch. The idea is to give the tailors more opportunity to display their art at plaiting.

All the London tailors are now pleating trousers, especially for the younger bloods.

Every perfectly good pair of trousers should have plaits round the waist band, aver the tailors, as the pleats tend to give a good "hang" to the trousers and an appearance of fullness which is so much desired.

As to the question of the high waist line, the Savile row tailors point out that if the jacket has three buttons the use of the center button only will enhance this effect. As a consequence the center button alone of the younger generation is buttoned, while the others are free.

Trousers remain about the same length at the bottom, being generally turned up, with a width of eighteen to nineteen inches.

A FINANCIAL WIZARD.

99 Prizes to Be Given for Best Interiors Seen

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell Heads Committee in Charge.

By Margaret Stevers.

CHICAGOANS take pride in their homes! This stands proved by the enthusiastic response which greeted last week's opening announcement of THE TRIBUNE'S Home Harmonious Contest, with $6,000 in prizes for the ninety-nine residents of Chicago and suburbs whose homes are judged the most attractive and comfortable in their interior arrangements.

Universal commendation has greeted the salient feature of the contest—that all homes would be judged on the basis of how well the homemaker had wrought with the means available, rather than on the basis of absolute beauty alone.

This one feature has stirred the imagination of many with whom we are in touch.

Touches Their Pride.

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers says: "They feel it rests the contest upon the fairest and most interesting basis imaginable, the taste and ingenuity displayed in achieving the best home life possible, with ordinary means and under every day living conditions. It touches every woman's pride in her ability to do well with whatever income she has available, and they are keenly interested in matching skill with their friends. I am confident the contest will be a stimulus to richer home life throughout the community."

Others, both in professional circles and among those entering the contest, voiced the same view

Many of the contestants expressed high enthusiasm and are looking forward eagerly to having the judges view their handiwork in creating charming home surroundings.

Mrs. E. S. writes: "Please come and see what a 65 year old lady has done to make an old home snug and cheerful with $130 a month and my hands."

Here is a home created in a hotel: "I am mailing the enclosed coupon at once in the hope that you may find it convenient to visit my home, which I constructed from a series of regular hotel rooms into a semblance of a bungalow, with a walnut library and regular dining room and kitchen."

"MRS. R. B."

Built 70 Years Ago.

Here is an entry that promises to be interesting: "Our house was built in 1858 and was furnished before the war and is quite unusual in its housing so many uncommon antiques. My father came here in 1840—hence the relics of an early age. B. W."

Mrs. W. submits her small house: "Our home of six rooms is a bit unusual as to arrangement and design and has an unusual as well as attractive living room for a small house. It was designed entirely by my husband and me. Would like very much to have it considered in your contest."

Mrs. P. sends in her entry: "We are a large family of eleven persons and live in a humble home, but would like very much to have you visit and see how such a large family lives on a modest income."

Meanwhile entries have come in from all quarters of the city and suburbs and from communities of almost every range of property value, the most exclusive as well as districts of extremely modest homes. Likewise the entries include large and small apartments, houses and bungalows of all sizes.

As the contest swings into its second week today, the focus of interest among early entries is the question of judging. The committee in general charge of the contest is districting the city and suburbs, and organizing district groups of judges to visit all homes entered in the contest. The groups will meet for luncheon this week, at which time the rules will be explained in detail, together with the

THE master bedroom of this apartment at 3800 Sheridan road has canvased walls of soft ivory, an excellent background for the color combination of soft rose and blue in draperies and chair covers. The couch bed, a corner of which shows in the picture, has bolsters at each end and a blue brocade hanging against the wall.

The Race of Kings

Mother and Charlie Move Their Restaurant to Busier Spot

The first chapter of this unusual story of success told how Mrs. Mary King, left a widow, began, by serving midnight lunches to Chicago newspaper men, businesses that were to amass millions; how she laid the foundations for the institutions later started and run by her children, Fannie May, Julia King, "Charlie" King, and Caroline Williams.

By Marion Reagan.

FOR a whole year preceding the world's fair there was a bustle of preparation in Chicago—a preparation that was much more than merely material. It was a kind of cultural primping up. Everybody wanted to be ready when the distinguished guests from all over the world should arrive, to show off the town to the best possible advantage. Women especially were taking to the cultural phase of it. They joined clubs, formed new clubs, wrote papers on such subjects as "The Renaissance," "The Floreentine Painters," "The Fall of Carthage," "Shakespeare."

In commerce men were priming themselves for the swollen stream of business the fair was expected to bring. Every one predicted it was to be a flood tide of fortune, and he would have been a sleepy business man indeed who did not make some effort to ride in on the wave of it.

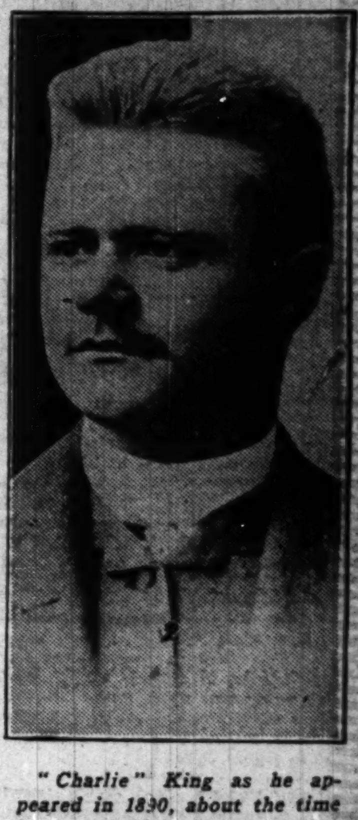
* *

The Kings Move Their Business.

Charlie King and his mother had moved their little restaurant at 119 Fifth avenue to Calhoun place. They had had two different locations in Calhoun place, and while on general principles Charlie contended it was bad business to move too often, still on the eve of the fair he could not resist the temptation "to get out on the street," as he put it. For while the alley way between Madison and Washington streets was dignified by the name of Calhoun place, it was more familiarly known as "Newsboys' alley," and was, after all, just an alley.

It was an alley, to be sure, with as much distinction, as much personality, and as rich a history as any thoroughside of Fifth avenue, just across the fare in Chicago, but from a business point of view there was no gainsaying the fact that a location on a main street would be more desirable. With the new cultural tendency abroad in the town a restaurant boasting of the patronage of literary men would unquestionably be successful.

And so, in the spring of '93, "King's" was moved back to the west street from the original location. It was right in the center of newspaper



"Charlie" King as he appeared in 1830, about the time he was shaping the career that was to make him a famous restaurateur.

FAMOUS WOMEN of CHICAGO

MRS. JOHN ALDEN CARPENTER.

DAUGHTER of generations of Chicagoans and born to wealth, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter has spent her energies in movements for the development of the city's artistic side. Her skill as an interior decorator has been called upon on many occasions and she has gladly lent her talent, especially to programs with charity making demands. The Arts club and the Scribblers' club have found her always active in their cause. It was her skill that was responsible for the interior decoration of the Auditorium. In fact, Chicago is well sprinkled with her handiwork.

Shoppers' Service Tales

Write us a brief note telling what kindly deed in store or shop won your patronage. The Tribune will pay $2 for every story published. Address Shoppers' Service Contest, Chicago Tribune.

Wanted to Make Them Right.

Last year at the January sales I bought a pair of shoes at one of Chicago's prominent stores. Not being particularly in need of them at the time, I put them away until about the next July. After wearing them a few times I found they were rather uncomfortable, so I took them back to the store to see whether they could be made easier to wear. After looking well at the shoes, the head of the repair department told the store manager nothing could be done to make them more comfortable for me, as they were evidently made on the wrong last to suit my feet.

Much to my surprise the manager called a salesman and told him to fit me with any pair of shoes I wanted. I finally chose another pair of the same value as those I returned, and with no extra expense and with all courtesy, these were forwarded to me.

Needless to say, I shall always go to this same store whenever I need new shoes. M. F.

A Kindly Helper.

We were strangers in Chicago and were buying a baby's crib at one of the loop stores. We were paying more than we really wanted to for it.

Just as my husband was handing the clerk the money the head of the department came up, telling us that if we wished she would have the slip dated two days later and send the crib C. O. D., as on that day there would be a sale, enabling us to get it $5 cheaper.

Needless to say, we shop there whenever we can. A. D. H.

Man's Waist Line Moves Up; Plaits Decreed by Tailors

LONDON.—(AP)—Man's waist line has gone up a notch. The idea is to give the tailors more opportunity to display their art at plaiting.

All the London tailors are now pleating trousers, especially for the younger bloods.

Every perfectly good pair of trousers should have plaits round the waist band, aver the tailors, as the pleats tend to give a good "hang" to the trousers and an appearance of fullness which is so much desired.

As to the question of the high waist line, the Savile row tailors point out that if the jacket has three buttons the use of the center button only will enhance this effect. As a consequence the center button alone of the younger generation is buttoned.

Trousers remain about the same length at the bottom, being generally turned up, with a width of eighteen to nineteen inches.

—How much can be accomplished in twenty-four hours of well planned time.

—How much we spend for wants and how little we need for necessities.

—How few do their own thinking and how everybody does his own talking.

—How easy it is to get an education if a youth has enough "want to."

—How hard it is to get into trouble with a friendly man.

—How many people work hard for money to waste.

It Is as Important——To be true to your conscience as to be true to your friend.

—To be honest with yourself as to be honest with other people.

—To grow a soul as to grow a [illegible]

—To make a success of your life as to make a success of your business.

—To save your own children as it is to reform the rest of the world.

Success Does Not Depend—

—Upon chance circumstances but upon yourself, trained and equipped.

—Upon good luck, but upon a right attitude toward work.

—Upon friends, unless it be the friendship of a good conscience.

—Upon something done, but upon something we become.

—Upon the territory we have, but the way we work it.

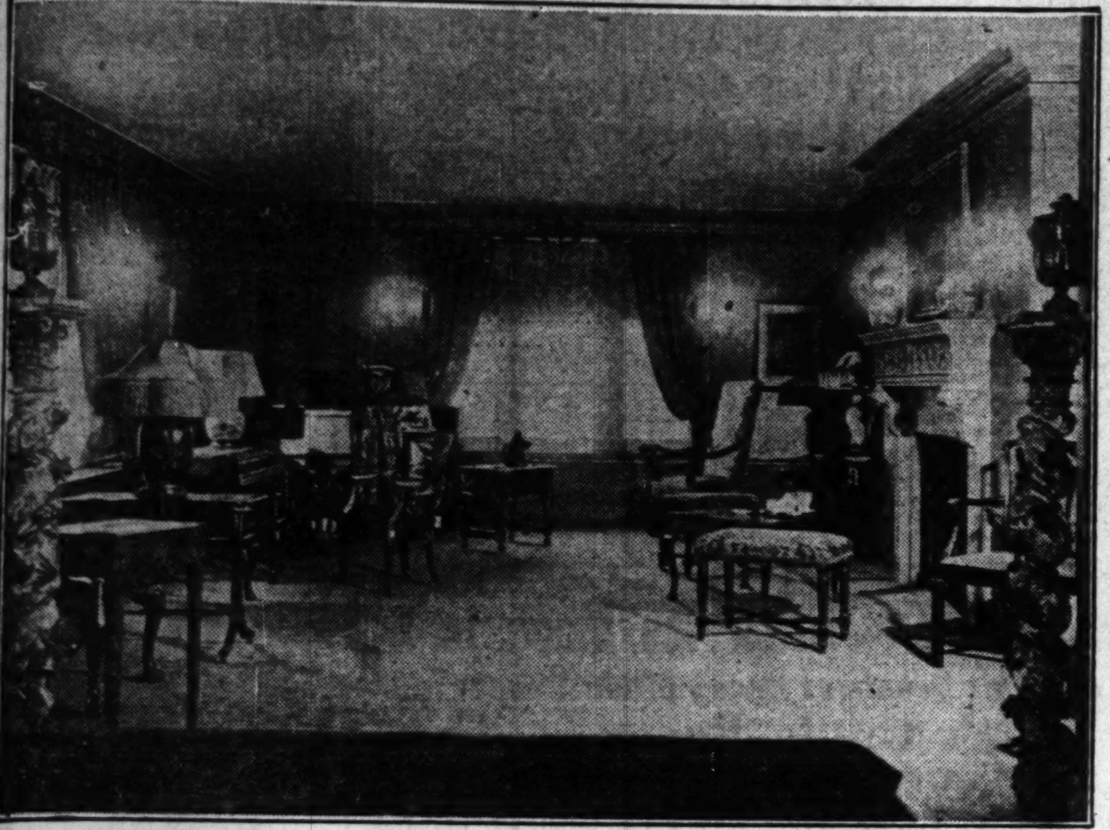
Making the Home Harmonious — Camera Studies of Well-Arranged Apartments in Various Sections

CHARACTER IN A LIVING ROOM



SEVERAL types of furniture are combined to give a harmonious effect to the living room at 3800 Sheridan road. Gold colored walls, gold and blue hangings, and a deep gold carpet add warmth to the dignity of the handsome pieces of furniture. The lamp shades, in tones of green, rose, and soft blue, provide color contrast.

RED AND BEIGE IN LIVING ROOM

method of rating all homes entered. The list of judges will be announced soon.

The Committee Personnel.

The points to be observed in judging are being worked out now by members of the general committee in charge of the contest. The committee is as follows:

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers.

Mrs. Constant Church Hopkins, chairman of the American Home department of the Illinois Federation of Woman's clubs.

Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives league.

Miss Lucy Silke, art director of the Chicago elementary and junior high schools.

Andre Rebori, well known architect.

Dudley Crafts Watson, extension lecturer for the Art Institute.

Holmes Onderdonk, manager of THE TRIBUNE's building department.

Announcement will be made next Sunday concerning the time when judging will commence. Ample notice will be given of each intended visit.

Your Own Taste?

Prominent among the questions asked last week was whether contestants living in hotels could enter the contest. The test here is whether the home represents the taste of the contestant, and thus represents her skill in homemaking. Quarters rented furnished are not eligible.

Another question asked is whether it will be possible to enter now and have time in which to carry through plans for redecorating before the home is judged. This question need cause no worry to any one. The rules provide that homes will be judged on the skill displayed with the means available; and if the regular spring cleaning and redecorating has not been done, the allowance will be made for that. The judges know that no house can go through a winter without wear and tear.

Contestants who are able to do their spring cleaning and redecorating now will have time in which to do so before the judges visit them, but those who find it inconvenient at present will be under no handicap.

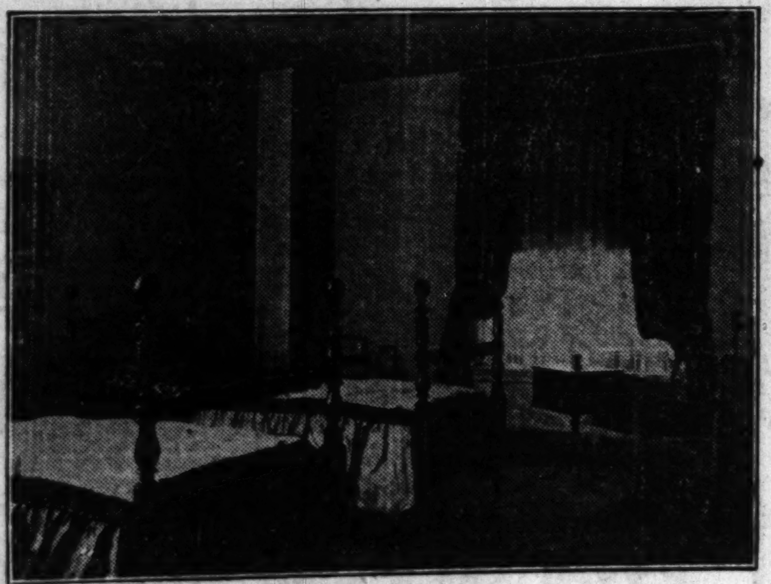
Do It Now!

So, all that is necessary for you to enter the contest is to put your name and address and telephone number on one of the coupons and mail it in to the Home Harmonious Contest, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Aside from that, the only further requirement is that you receive a visit from the judges, at an appointed time.

The rules insure every one an equal chance. Thep rizes will go to those who do best with the means available, whether ample or modest. It is just a question of how skillful and ingenious a homemaker you are; and surely you are willing to match your efforts against those of your friends.

So, fill out the coupon now and mail it to THE TRIBUNE Harmonious Contest today.

A CHARMING GUEST ROOM



THE soft tones of the maple furniture in the guest room at 3800 Sheridan road are charmingly set off by the hangings of bright glazed chintz, which material is repeated in the pillow covers over the taffeta spreads. A dressing table and highboy are important pieces which do not show in the picture.

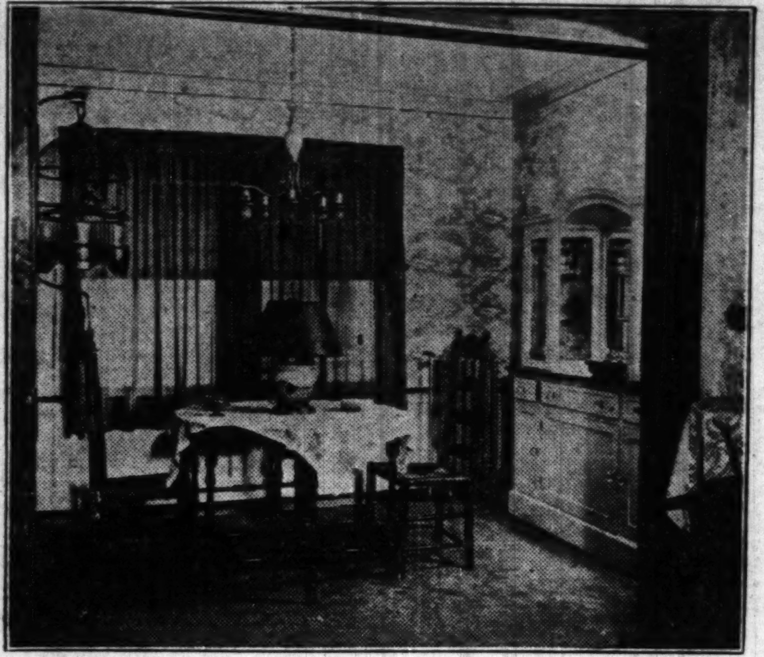
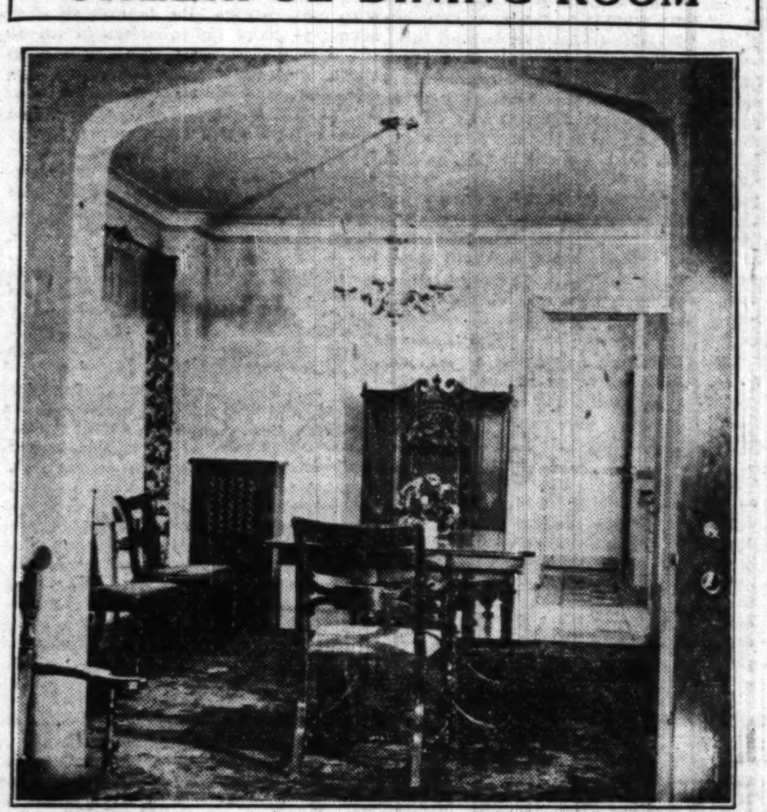
FOR SMALL DINING ROOM



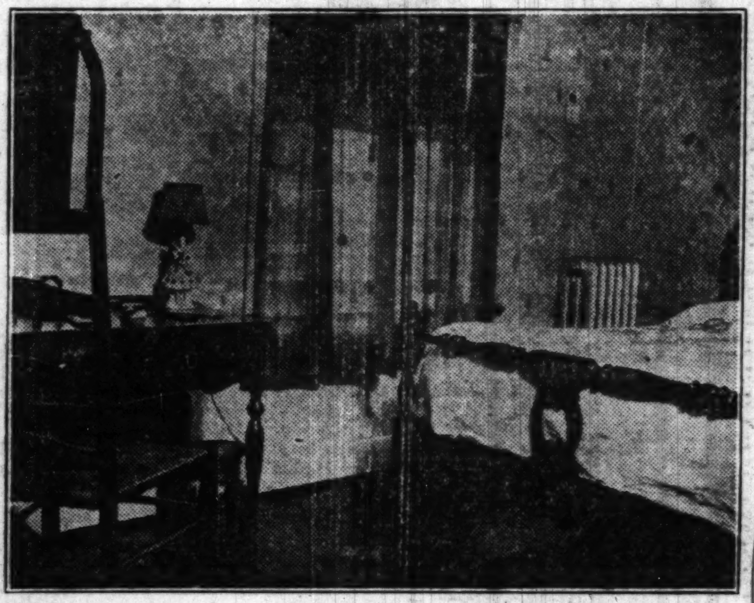
THE problem of the small dining room is solved with room to spare by the use of a gateleg table and simple bottomed chairs in this Palmer square home. The scenic paper and blue woodwork add to the spaciousness of this small room.

CHEERFUL DINING ROOM



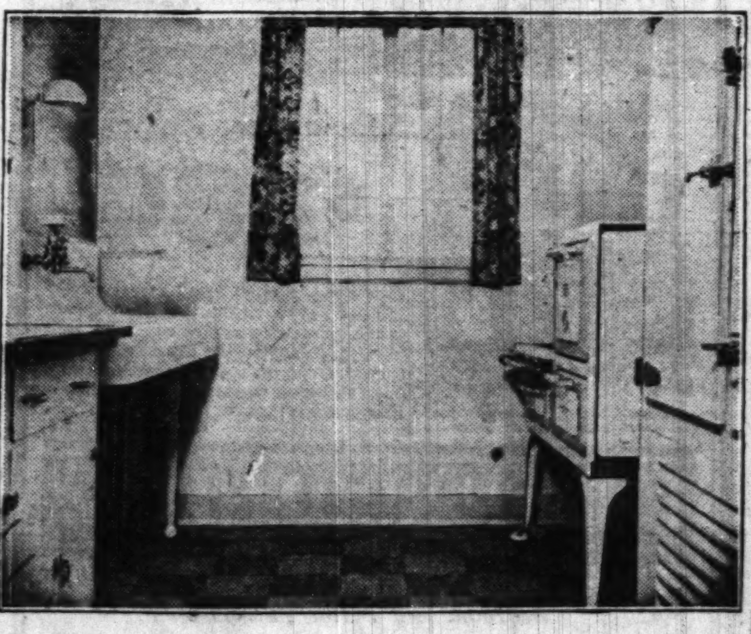
BOTH dignity and cheeriness are apparent in this dining room of the south side apartment. A Chinese rug sponsors the color combination of blue and green, which finds added expression in the hand blocked linen draperies over net glass curtains and in the sprigged chair sets. A floral picture against one wall adds to the whole. The furniture is walnut.

COLONIAL BEDROOM



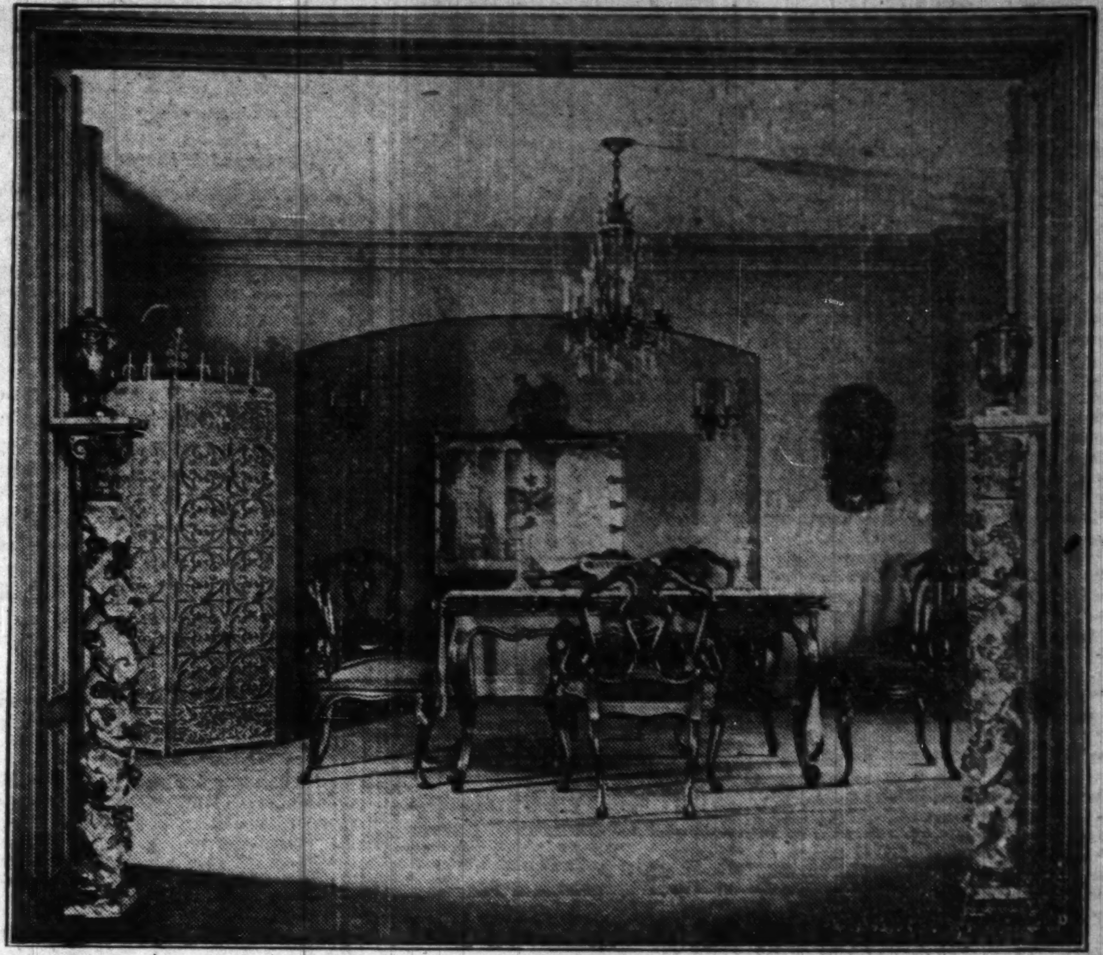
THE severity necessary to colonial furniture makes for a pleasant, if not frilly, bedroom in this Palmer square apartment. The candlewick spread, hooked rugs, a walnut chest of drawers, and a ladder-back chair combine in harmonious effect. The curtains are blue gauze.

IN A SPOTLESS KITCHEN



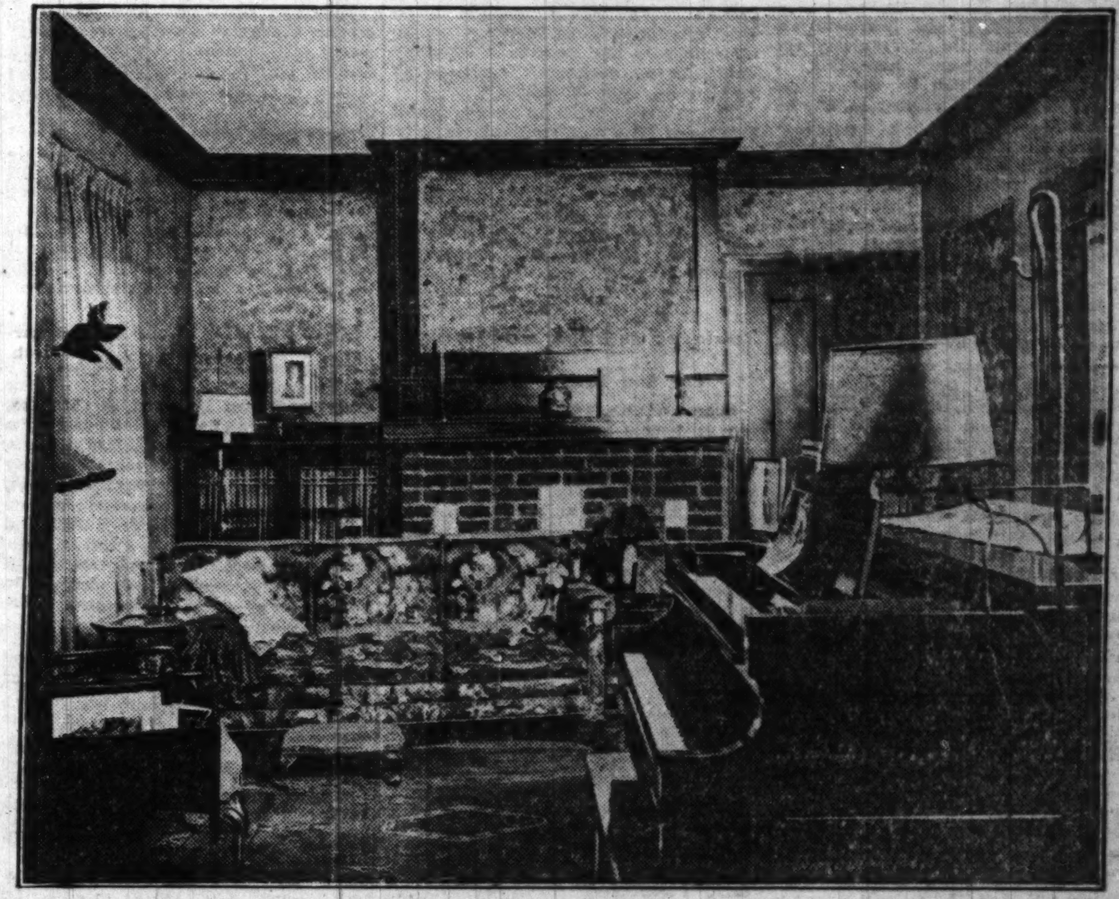
ONE would necessarily start the day off right after toast and bacon in this spotless kitchen out on Jeffery avenue. The floor is squares of cork in two shades of green, the woodwork and walls of the same tone, and the simple curtain of gay cretonne. The tools of the housewife's trade are all of white enamel.

DARING DINING ROOM COLORS



BLACK, green, red, and gold are daringly yet effectively combined in the dining room of this north side model apartment. The piece is a black and gold Chinese cabinet, set into a niche and topped by a figurine of terra cotta. The red note is introduced in the chair seats and the background of the wrought iron screen. Green walls and carpet complete the whole. The pedestals, which are between the dining and living rooms, are topped by black urns.

PLEASING LIVING ROOM EFFECT



GOLD silk gauze filters the light in pleasant effect in this living room at 3143 Palmer square. Comfort and livableness are reflected in the roomy couch done in glazed chintz, the piano close by, and in the placement of the attractive wrought iron lamps.

Historic Parisian Houses Now Give Way to Progress

PARIS.—(AP)—Historic old houses in narrow little streets 700 years old are being torn down, to the joy of sanitary experts and the despair of lovers of old Paris.

Light, virtue and cleanliness never flourished in the dark houses with cracked walls, crazily leaning fronts, and dungeon-like cellars. In these narrowest streets of the old city, however, were born the early systems of street lighting, sweeping, policing, garbage collecting and the national opera.

The Rue de la Reynie was named for an ancient chief of police who ordered the bourgeois of the district to maintain, light at nightfall, extinguish at dawn, candle lanterns at specified intervals.

De la Reynie also organized day and night patrols of "archers," who traveled in squads because swords often flashed in those days. The Rue de Venise, close by, was the quarter of the usurers. In the Rue Brise-Miche, famous because of an old bakery there that once supplied a nearby monastery, there are the hooks to attach a chain that barred the street on occasions in the days of Louis XI.

Penitentiary Grads Form a Fraternity

BERLIN.—(AP)—Germany, the land of the countless "vereine" and societies, has added another to its list.

The latest organization is the "Society of Former Inmates of the Penitentiary of Celle," in the province of Hanover. Its members wear a special badge so that they may recognize each other in case they did not have a chance to become acquainted in Celle.

The chairman of this society, who has given himself the old and respected name of "Ben Akiba," did not hold his position long. About a fortnight after he had taken over the presidency he was grabbed by the secret service of Dortmund, in the act of opening a safe without keys.

Women's Reducing Hits Sugar Trade

MANCHESTER, England.—(AP)—Woman's "craze for slimness" has greatly reduced figures in the chocolate and confectionery branches of the sugar industry, says the annual report of the Manchester chamber of commerce. Imports of refined sugar and sugar candy at Manchester dropped nearly 300,000 tons in 1927 as compared with 1926, the report declares.

Half of German Tax Goes to Pay for War

BERLIN.—(AP)—More than half of Germany's revenue for 1928 is appropriated for expenditure resulting from the world war, which ended ten years ago.

War pensions and allowances account for 33.6 per cent, and reparations payments absorb 23 per cent, a total 56.6 per cent.

And this is likely to last for another generation.

Mailman Pauses in Rain and Collects $50 Prize

He'd Been on Lookout for Politeness Reporter

John J. Smith, 1207 West Madison street, who gets $50 for being courteous.

By the Politeness Reporter.

"I AM pleased to have met you," John Smith told me, politely, after I had given him the magic card.

It was John's politeness, however, before he had any idea who I was, that put the magic card into his possession at the end of the day's quest along West Madison street.

It was a foggy day. West Madison street was a-glitter with electric signs, and there was many an interesting window to attract one's attention, but, among the faces of hurrying pedestrians and loitering laborer and energetic shopkeeper, I saw none that was familiar.

There was a display of soap on sale in a drug store window. By some method, to me unknown, the suds and bubbles were caused to effervesce from a pan and mount to a distance of several feet. The foaming bubbles towered and tumbled and glistened in rainbow colors.

"Wonderful!" I ejaculated.

"Ain't nothin' wonderful about it," disparaged a voice beside me. I turned to note that the words were accompanied by the wabble of a cigaret. "Any soap'll make suds. Only kind of soap to use, if you have to use any, is the kind that'll bring the blood close to the skin."

Everything's Damp.

The fellow's tone not only dampened my enthusiasm but the look he gave me left me with an inferiority complex.

It was the same way at the window where shoes were on sale for $2.98 a pair.

"They're surely cheap," I commented.

The fellow who took up the challenge was not the proprietor of the store. He was another passerby, and dressed for meeting the weather.

"Nothin' the matter with 'em,'" insisted the stranger. "I've got a pair myself. Only trouble I ever have with shoes is they wear off on the heel inside. D'ja ever have that happen?"

And in front of the taxidermist—"the taxidermist for his majesty the American sportsman," according to the sign—I referred to the stuffed "eagle" loking as natural as life on its perch.

"Stuffed eagle?" someone beside me derided. "It's a hawk. I've seen lots of 'em flying around out in the country."

My journey thus far had progressed to no great distance from Halsted street. The barber college interested me. By standing at the curb—which, in this instance, comprised what might be termed the campus—I could see the students at work. One of them, snatching a moment from class, came to stand in the doorway. Possibly, had we belonged to the same fraternity, he would have proved sociable. Still, the magic card cannot be influenced by such things.

The Hypnotic Orator.

Who was going to get the magic card this day? I wanted it to follow its own whims. It was not long before it led me inside an auction place. A man with an oratorical voice, that rose and fell in hypnotic cadences, stood behind the showcase at an elevation that gave him somewhat of an advantage over the group in which I found myself. At the counter he had an array of jewelry, in the midst of which he placed a diamond ring, price marked at $200.

"If I was to offer you this lot of jewelry for $10, would you take it?" he interrogated.

He put the question to several bystanders and finally he put it to me. I felt sheepish, as one will in being pointed out in a crowd.

"I'm asking you," he pressed, with his finger still pointing in my direction. "I am not saying I'd sell it for $10 but if you had $10 would you give it to me for the lot? You can certainly answer me one way or the other."

I thought of the magic card that would be worth $50 to some one else after it had left my pocket but that was worthless to me.

"I—I haven't the $10," I stammered finally.

"That's all I wanted to know," said the man. "You don't need to be ashamed to confess it. You've got lots of company."

I felt better after his last remark. It sort of offset the sting of his earlier words.

That Rice Pudding.

I had rice pudding for lunch at a place in the neighborhood, but after the third spoonful I decided it didn't taste just right. I was rather reluctant about criticizing the cook, for I realized that perhaps my appetite was at fault. So I mentioned my misgivings, merely in passing, to the youth who was clattering up dishes.

"Well, I'll tell you, boss," he suggested, "they'll trade it for something else."

I took the dessert over to the waiter and, much to my surprise, he immediately called a conference of not only the cook but the second cook. I really began to feel quite important, for my complaint had been no mere whim to test the card.

"Gentlemen," I said, "the pudding may be all right, but the proof of the pudding, as said to in the eating thereof——"

"The pudding goes out," agreed the cook. "There's only a little of it left in the pan, anyhow," and he called the the waiter to serve me afresh.

Returning to my table in that mood which can only come to one who has been shown great deference, not only by a cook but by a second cook, a waiter, and a bus boy as well, I commented to the man next to me about the threatening aspect of the weather. "Looks as if it was going to rain," I said.

"Looks as if," he grunted, "it already did."

True, it had. My hat was dripping from my having lingered overlong in front of the window displays without realizing that the fog had slowly turned to rain.

Ask the Mailmain.

I couldn't mind the weather, however. It was necessary that I allow the little card in my pocket to fulfill its mission. So back into West Madison street we went again. We crossed Peoria street and Sangamon street. I talked with the proprietor of a place whose windows were plastered with sale signs about a type of sweater that he didn't carry in stock. He said he knew what I had in mind but he didn't have it. He also said that if I thought spring could not be far behind, because it happpened to be raining, I was sadly mistaken.

"There will," he said, "be plenty of winter yet."

It was near the 1200 block that I saw a mail carrier coming across the street in the rain. When he neared, I asked him the location of a furniture store which, I suddenly decided, I was seeking.

The name of the institution, just born in my brain, was, naturally, not familiar to the man in the gray uniform. He was interested, however, in helping me out if possible. I confessed to him that I probably had the wrong name and, without prying into my affairs, he said it made a difference, of course, if one were setting up housekeeping and needing a complete outfit, or just seeking a few pieces of furniture.

The rain was dripping heavily about this time. The mail man was so courteous I had a strong feeling that the card had made its decision, but I was suddenly at a loss on how to proceed.

"You're in a hurry," I said.

"No. Just got through with my route," he asured me. "Just going over to turn in my sack. Furniture problem's on my mind, the same as it is on yours, in a way. I'm planning . . . well, in a month or two on getting married."

The Sun Breaks Through.

Suddenly, West Madison street and the cold rain seemed to vanish. I caught a vision of a rose covered bungalow beneath sunlit skies. Yet, though he might be thinking of his coming happiness he had not crowded out interest in a total stranger's happiness, too.

Close beside us, seeking shelter in a doorway, two old fellows were chatting together: "Have ya seen Slim lately? . . . Nope, don't think he come back this winter. . . . Didn't look quite so spry as he used to when he was in here a year ago. . . . There was a smart one—Slim. He knowed everything. Once——"

The two cronies moved on down the street.

"This your regular route?" I asked, turning again to the mail man.

"Both sides of Madison from Aberdeen to Peoria."

"Then you take this trip every day," I ventured. "You've been very courteous to me, coming along here for the first time. I've got a little card in my pocket that'll buy you a wedding present."

The good natured face of John J. Smith gradually took on a wider smile than ever as he studied the card.

"And I was so sure that if I ever met the Politeness Reporter I'd know him," he reflected. "The other day when I was courteous to somebody I said, just kidding to the collector who was with me, 'Maybe it's the Politeness Reporter.' But you—honest, ain't you interested in furniture?"

"Just incidentally," I told him. "But knowing the magic card as I do, I am sure that, under the circumstances, along with seeking you out from a courteous standpoint, it wishes to extend congratulations, too."

Hotel in Germany Installs a Shop to Please Americans

BERLIN.—(AP)—Yielding to the demands of American patrons, a leading Berlin hotel has taken the initiative of installing a shop on the ground floor. For the first time in Germany, American travelers, now can buy shirts, socks, shoes, medicines, lipsticks, face powder, jewelry, and other necessaries without moving out of the hotel.

As a writer recently pointed out, American travelers speak with the greatest enthusiasm of the cleanliness, comfort, and service in the standard German hotels, but complain that they must send elsewhere in case they need articles of dress or adornment.

The installation of a shop has caused wide comment in the Berlin press. That it is a paying proposition is admitted by the hotel management. A staff of six sales clerks finds plenty to do, and pages stand ready to hurry on bicycles to the department store of which the shop is a branch, to fetch articles not in stock.

MARRIED HE WAS.

The burglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, but his shoes were not padded and they made some noise.

He had just reached the door of the bed room when he heard some one moving in bed as if about to get up, and he paused.

The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears.

"If you don't take off your shoes," it said, "there is going to be trouble, and a whole lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours, and you dare tramp over my carpets with muddy shoes on. Go down stairs and take them off."

He went downstairs without a word, but he didn't take his shoes off.

Instead, he went out into the night again, and the pal who was waiting for him saw a tear glisten in his eye.

'Race of Kings' Moves Cafe to Busier Street

Mother and Charlie Start Pull to Success.

row. Just a door south, on the famous alley, was the old Globe, then owned by Mike McDonald, the famous gambler. Across the alley to the south was the Mail. Across the street were the Dispatch, Joe Dunlop's evening paper, and the Record and Daily News. Half a block to the north, on the corner of Washington and Fifth avenue, was the Times, then owned by Mayor Carter Harrison, the elder, and a half a block to the east, on Washington street, was John W. Scott's paper, the Herald. Two prosperous German papers, the Staats Zeitung, owned by Washington Hessing, and the Freie Presse, was also in the immediate neighborhood.

* *

Mother King's Famous Friends.

The new "King's" was much more pretentious than anything the mother and son had yet attempted. It was Charlie's restaurant as a matter of fact. Mother King was getting along in years and willingly passed up the business responsibility to her son, but she never failed to come in the evening and sit with her fancy work beside the cash box, talking with the people as they came and went.

She had been reluctant to leave the old place in "Newsboy's alley." It had come to have a sentimental attachment for her. There she had made some of the most prized friendships of her life, had made the acquaintance of men prominent not only in the local literary scene, but whose names were to become world famous. Eugene Field came regularly, and frequently left his check beside the cash box with a note "Till pay day." Men like Samuel J. Medill, Victor Lawson, Charles Dana, James W. Scott she came to know well. James Whitcomb Riley had been a visitor, and so had the dashing Richard Harding Davis.

Bill Nye she knew and talked to often. Many a local society leader might have envied her that, for they had tried to lionize Nye when he came out in 1890, first, because he was one of the foremost humorists of the day, and second because he came of a "fine old family down east."

This is the way Nye spoke of his ancestors. "Family? Well, I guess! I traced our people back to the European police courts and even beyond that, discovering at last in France our coat of alms; but I lost it from the line where it was airing last summer."

* *

The Whitechapel Club.

It was natural that notables should drift into King's, even though it was a modest bit of a place, for the alley got to be a kind of rendezvous of the nifties of the nineties. Just down a short distance from the restaurant, for instance, was the Whitechapel club. There was scarcely a famous person who came this way between 1889 and 1895 who was not a guest of the Whitechapelers. The club was one of the most interesting ever formed in the middle west. It had a motley membership made up of cab drivers, poets, undertakers, actors, lawyers, physicians and newspaper men. It is said that the only question raised of a man submitted for membership was "Is he a good fellow and will he loosen up?"

Most of the Whitechapelers who patronized King's in the alley continued their patronage after the restaurant was moved to Fifth avenue, but with the larger quarters, the more diversified trade, the place naturally lost some of its character.

* *

Back to the Old King's.

However, after midnight, when the papers have gone to press, King's is still the same old King's. Let's pretend we're young bloods about town in 1895. We've been to a show—McVicker's, probably, and we wander down Madison to Wells. We'll go into King's, have a look 'round and eat something. There are two rooms opened into one with a large entrance door in the center. On one side are tables only; on the other, tables and a horseshoe lunch counter. We'll take the lunch counter side because that's where the reporters come.

That good looking man with the flashing smile who bows to us as we go in with the manner of a grand duke is Charlie King. His eyes dancing, merry, and he says something to us that makes us feel a little merry, too. "Anybody with a manner like that should be a politician," you say. A plump, black haired woman smiles at us over a rose bordered centerpiece she is making.

"No, thanks, Charlie, we'll just take a table clear in the back of the room," we say.

There is a congenial sound of tinkling of glasses, of clanking silver and a strongly pleasing odor of frying ham and of strong coffee. The linen is shining white; the silver still looks new—of course, the restaurant is only two years old.

* *

George Ade.

Plenty of people come in whom we don't recognize, but they are all probably important enough. Charlie talks to them as if they were sultans, and he—well, as if he were Mahomet's high priest. But here comes some one we know. A tall, lanky youth, wearing a low crowned Weber and Fields hat, a solemn expression on his face. He comes down and sits near us, deposits the hat on a clothes tree nearby, and studies the carte du jour with the gravity of a man about to make a momentous personal decision. That is George Ade, a night police reporter.

They will all be coming in now soon—all the night police reporters. "Night police reporters?" you query. "They must be hard boiled gentlemen." Well, let's see. Ade, of course, is one. So is the man just behind him—Arthur Sears Henning. And the dapper, urbane fellow with the correct clothes following was a night police reporter once, too. He is Percy Hammond. With Hammond, and somewhat contrasting with him, is a tall, gaunt figure of a man. His tie is a little askew. His clothes hang on him with the carelessness bespeaking one who cares little about such amenities as fashionable dress. He is more concerned with the vital things of life, such as good wining and dining. His name is Dick Little—yes, R. H. L. now.

The tables are beginning to fill up. There are so many around us we can't identify them all, but even with a hasty glance we can pick out the rest of the night police reporters. There are Charley Erbstein, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, Barney Mullaney, and just beyond them Brand Whitlock, James O'Donnell Bennett. The tall, thin man with the ink stained hands is John T. McCutcheon. The kindly looking fellow writing on the back of the menu card is Finley Peter Dunne. Too bad we can't read what is written there, because it is probably some side splitting yarn of his well known character, Mr. Dooley.

The clock hands fly along. The air is getting heavy with tobacco smoke. We wink at our waitress. She is remarkably responsive to the wink and she is a pretty little thing, too. (Most of the waitresses in King's are pretty.) We get our bill and go out.

Mother King smiles at us with a warm friendliness as we go and Charlie is hurrying to ask us if everything was quite all right. Remarkable man—Charlie.

* *

Charlie's Memory.

The night air outside hits our nostrils with a refreshing coolness. We walk along and talk about the Kings—especially of Charlie. He has a reputation of being a mixer, and no wonder! Anybody, however cold, would thaw before his simple, expansive personality. He is always gay, seems to have no problems at all of his own, or at least never mentions them, and talks to you about yours as if he had a direct personal concern in you. He never forgets a face, and once he has learned your name never forgets that, either. Maybe it is a petty little vanity in us to feel flattered when some one remembers us after only a fleeting acquaintance, but, petty or not, there are few of us who don't respond to it.

There is no question that the food at King's was good and the price was moderate. Many dined there who knew the intricate culinary perfection of Paris and compared the "chicken meuniere" of King's favorably with its counterpart in the old Parisian restaurants. But still the food and the price were not all. It was the genial friendliness of Charlie, greeting you at the door, that made you want to go back. Certainly it made the women want to go back. His laughing eyes caused many a feminine heart to flutter, and it was forever tantalizing to know he was a bachelor.

But he was a man's man, too. Men were constantly entreating him to come to banquets and parties "to liven things up." If there was an awkward lull in a conversation, Charlie would come to the rescue with a joke that would break the spell.

In January of 1901 he came down with typhoid pneumonia, and on the 25th he was dead. Few men have been more lamented. Streams of friends and acquaintances came to the funeral. Lots of complimentary things were said. Probably the most flattering was, "He was never known to be anything but pleasant."

The next installment of "The Race of Kings" will appear in next Sunday's Metropolitan section.

STARTING THINGS RIGHT

THE steam shovel in the background could lift a bigger scoopful of dirt, no doubt, than the one held by Dr. John Dill Robertson, but the new community center building, about to be erected on the site, will mean much to Austin and it is fitting that proper ceremonies launch the project. George J. Dehn stands at the left. The others, left to right, are Frank A. Bentley, Edward H. Fox, P. D. Castle, E. G. Snodgrass, and F. W. Savage. The social center building is to be at Lake street and Parkside avenue, Austin. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

THE LURE OF DIXIE

By Walter M. Schwimmer

It is pleasing, very pleasing,
When your ittsie toes are freezing,
And your bugle starts in wheezing
To pack up your grip and grab a train
That's headed for the south;
Where the tropic stars are glowing
Where the gouty ginks are going,
Where a balmy breeze is blowing,
And they put you in the hoosegow
If you act down-in-the-mouth.

It is nifty, very nifty,
When a gent is nearing fifty,
If he's practiced being thrifty
And provided gelt to take him
Past the Mason-Dixon line;
At the season people shiver,
He can thaw his frosty liver
By the sultry Suwanee river,
And then raise a snappy sunburn
When old sol begins to shine.

But while southerners are ranting
Dixie climate is enchanting,
I will not be gallivanting
To the land where palms are waving and the sky is always blue;
Though the north is cold and stormy,
I'm afraid the south would bore me.
All my friends went there before me
And I would not have a soul to send
Some picture postcards to!

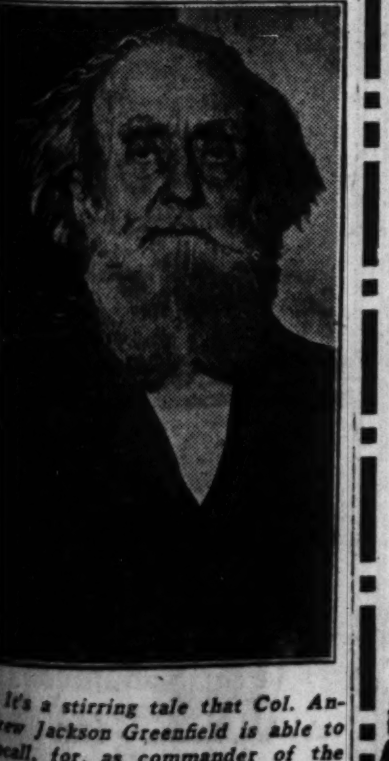
REVISED VERSION.

The seven ages of man have been well tabulated by somebody or other on an acquisitive basis, thus:

First age—Sees the earth.
Second age—Wants it.
Third age—Hustles to get it.
Fourth age—Decides to be satisfied with only about half of it.
Fifth age—Becomes still more moderate.
Sixth age—Now content to possess a six by two strip of it.
Seventh age—Gets this strip.

VETERAN



It's a stirring tale that Col. Andrew Jackson Greenfield is able to recall, for, as commander of the 1st cavalry, 22d Pennsylvania division, Col. Greenfield captured the southern cavalry regiment commanded by Gen. Ashby, at Columbia Furnace, Va., during the civil war. The colonel, now 92 years old, lives at 3420 Fulton street. He lost the sword—surrendered by Ashby—at the time of the Johnstown flood, but the memory connected with it remains.

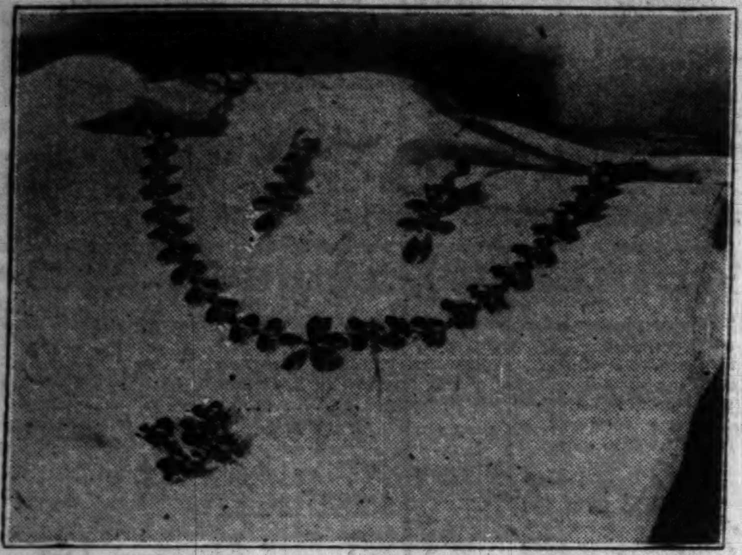
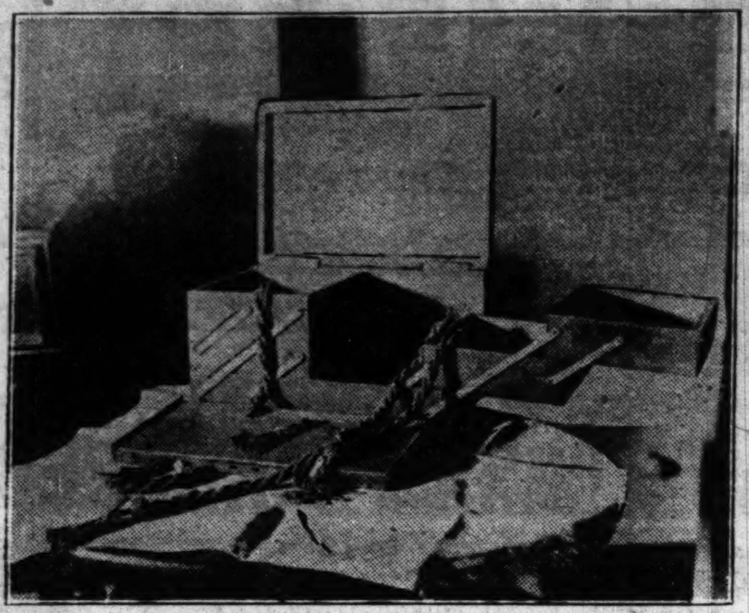
Antique Jewelry Is a Modern Fad

Smart Woman of Today Wears Her Grandmother's Gems

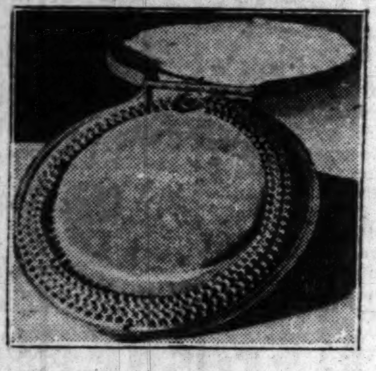


A set of old garnets! What a treasure for wear with the white chiffon evennig frock. Earrings, pin, and necklace are all the same color, each stone beautifully matched, and well under $200 for them all. They are more than a hundred years old.

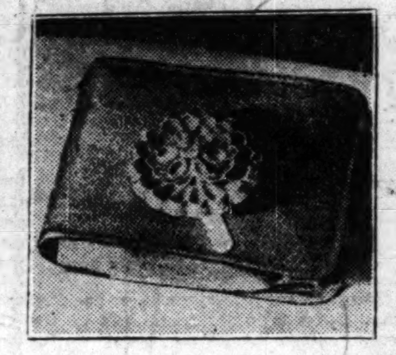


A rope of coral for the neck, with tassels of coral, too. Two bracelets and a pair of earrings. All are made of the finest beads and are a delightful watermelon color. They look as though they might have been stolen from a pirate.

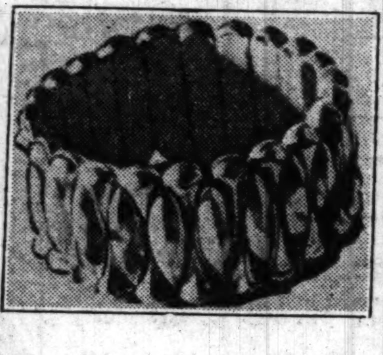
Imagine the labor that went into the making of this chain of old agates. Each piece is exactly like the other, black with white stripes, and polished beautifully. A stunning accompaniment to the black and white costume.



A gold necklace of a rare sort because the workmanship is practically obsolete. Each link is made separately and then put together by hand. It is not heavy and is old gold in color and metal.



This beautiful old brooch is like a flower, it is so delicately worked. It looks like some of the gold work on early Italian altar vessels. In the center are some amethysts of an especially lovely pale color.



A heavy gold bracelet of fine workmanship. It was made about eighty years ago. It is somewhat flexible and the design looks as if it might have been inspired by some of the goldsmiths of the middle ages.

Stories of Girls

More Deadly than the Male

By Margaret Orr.

FOLKS called her Melody.

For even when she was still a baby she discovered rhythm in the waving of trees, the flight of birds, and the outbursts of playfulness in kittens. She loved the simple monotonous tune she could hear in the clicking of train wheels over sleepers. Everything in life for her had melody.

But her parents said she was crazy. "Cut the comedy and take care of the customers," was their alliterative cure.

For the front of the house was a furniture repairing shop.

At a dancing pavilion on the river one night Melody met Jose. To the world in general Jose was handsome. But to Melody he was the synthetic ideal of every handsome man she had ever dreamed of after the movies or love stories. He was, furthermore, a student at the university. His home was on a tropical island. He was the son of a wealthy sugar grower.

So Melody's mother couldn't rush the wedding along quickly enough.

Immediately after the marriage Jose went to the island to argue with his father that bigger and better allowances were due if his son and heir was going to carry on his education and support a wife.

But his father gave his heir the air and Jose worked his way back to Melody.

He slaved for three years to support her and carry on his education. Then, in desperation, and because nobody else would take it, Jose got a job in the tropics.

The native village was reached only after five days' journey through jungles and dangerous mountain passes.

Their shack had an earth floor. A kerosene lamp, set on a box, lighted the perpetual darkness inside. The only furniture was a bed of branches against the wall. The boards of the house were so far apart the rain came in. And the rain never ceased.

Still Melody was not unhappy. She had Jose.

During the day she tried to fashion furniture. From the native woman, who was the only human being besides José she ever saw, she learned to cook strange foods.

But, bit by bit, the rhythm of the tropics got her. The never ceasing rain, the blood curdling calls of animals near by, even the poisonous vapors from a pool she could see through the tangled growths in front of the shack, made her afraid. And she was coming to be afraid of José.

For he was not at all the same boy she had married. Now he seldom spoke. He stayed over in the village many a night with the natives.

Sometimes he came home to her vicious and crazed. Frequently he beat her until she hated every remembrance of him. Yet Melody herself could not leave the shack, for fear of lurking bushmen.

And all the time the dreadful tropical rhythm was beating in upon her brain.

Finally, terrified to the point of daring death by the humming, buzzing, screeching, crawling life around her, she made the native woman understand they must find the sea.

They were a month in reaching it. And just before they reached the port Melody collapsed.

But where there are white traders there is always some big-hearted man who will sacrifice his shirt to help a damsel in distress.

So Melody returned to the States—to the furniture repairing shop.

The case ended as things usually end in the Court of Domestic Relations. And after the judge had noted her unusual makeup and experience he was moved to utter the only witticism of his dignified career. It was this:

"It would seem that after tempestuous variations the young lady has returned to the melody of 'Home, Sweet Home.'"

Playing by Professor Breaks Down Reserve

BERLIN.—(AP)—To dispel the habitual atmosphere of frigid reserve between Prussians and Bavarians prevailing at the recent inauguration of the new Prussian legation in Munich, Prof. Joseph Pembaur, the eminent pianist, was asked to play.

When the deafening applause following the virtuoso's rendering of Liszt's legend, "St. Francis Walking Upon the Waters," had subsided the Prussian premier, Otto Braun, walked over to Prof. Pembaur, warmly shook his hand, and exclaimed:

"You surely must be a Bavarian—none other could have pounded a Prussian piano so effectively."

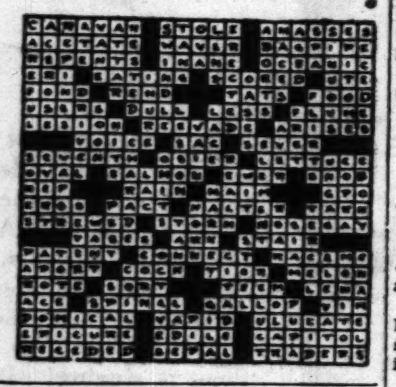
ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



Betty Nuthall of Tennis Fame Has a Musical Family

LONDON.—(AP)—Betty Nuthall is a pianist as well as a championship tennis player, and her three sisters and two brothers also are piano players.

The Nuthalls frequently give recitals. Betty specializes on Chopin. Her brother, Jim, aged 15, is a dance music fan. Sister Molly, aged 13, and Thelma, aged 10, incline to serious compositions. John Nuthall is also rather jazzy in his musical taste.

Patricia, aged 7, the baby of the family, is busy playing "Chopsticks," and is more interested in Betty's film acting and tennis playing than in her execution of Chopin's masterpieces.

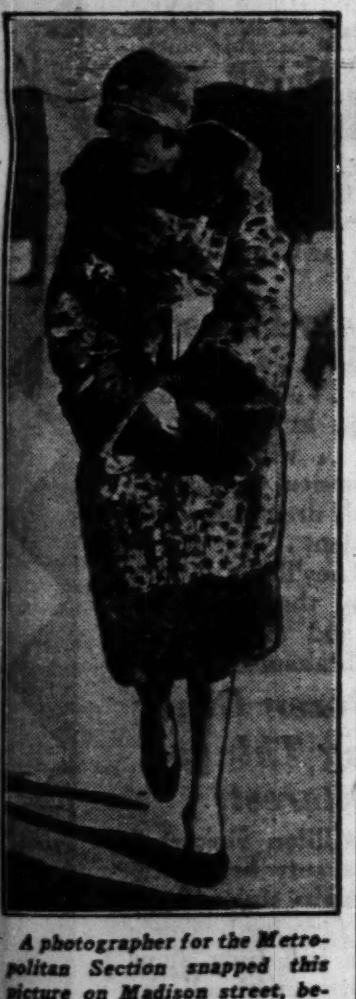
Free Pictures!



A photographer for the Metropolitan Section snapped this picture on Madison street, between Kedzie and Spaulding avenues, probably without his subject knowing that she was being photographed. If this girl will bring in this clipping we'll present her with a fine sepia print of the picture, neatly incased in a folder. If she will phone the picture editor first, he'll have the photograph waiting for her.

Thumbprints Guard Gowns from Fakers

LONDON.—(AP)—Thumbprints as trade marks have been adopted by some of London's most exclusive dress designers with the aim of outwitting smaller dealers who retail copies of their gown creations as genuine.

"Dress pirates," these shopkeepers are called by the dressmakers who pride themselves on their originality.

One designer of note conceived the idea of protecting her name by the thumbprint method, and others quickly followed the lead. The prints are generally those of the designer, stamped indelibly on the cloth.

Another designer conceived the idea of having his models patented, on the contention that they are woven on special looms and from raw material obtained only from one source, but certain legal obstacles have not yet been overcome.

Birth Rate Shows a Decline; Blame Later Marriage

LONDON.—(AP)—Decline in the birth rate among the population of London's east side is attributed partly to the fact that young Jewish couples are not marrying at such early ages as formerly, says D. Tscherniakoff, secretary of the Jewish Health Organization of Great Britain.

There is a tendency toward a lower birth rate among the general population of western Europe, Mr. Tscherniakoff says in further explanation of the decline. He attributes the decrease in early marriage to the financial handicap of the times, the young men as a rule not making as much money as formerly.

"Among the Jews specifically there is another factor which strengthens these tendencies," says the health society secretary. "It is the slackening, among certain sections of Jews, of the strong hold which religion asserted over them, particularly with regard to its view on the sanctity of family life."

Dr. D. L. Thomas, medical officer to the Stepney council, in the Whitechapel district, East London, calculates that, whereas the birth rate among the Jews was between 30 and 40 per thousand of the population prior to the war, it is now down to 13 per thousand.

"The truth of the matter is that Jewish people are going in for smaller families," Dr. Thomas says in a report.

Cow Bell's Slangs to Quell Scientists in French Academy

PARIS.—(AP)—A nice, big, old cow-bell now calls the erudite Academy of Sciences to order. It breaks up the conversations and arouses the somnolent scientists.

When President Henry opened the last session he startled the sage assembly with the loud note of the clanging bell. He smiled, and explained:

"My dear colleagues, the little old bell that has always been here seemed to me frail and worn. I ask your permission to present this one to the assembly. It comes from the Alps, where it resounded on the heights. Here, also, it will ring on a high plane, in an elevated atmosphere."

Because of slack parliamentary discipline, the academy has gained a reputation for occasional noisiness when the professors all take to talking at once, continuing their arguments after they have finished their speeches, and President Henry says he's going to change all that with a bell that can drown any voice.

$5,000 Offered for Anti-Dust Device

BERLIN.—(AP)—A prize of $5,000 for the best contrivance for neutralizing the pernicious effects of dust in mines has been offered by the Prussian ministry of commerce and trade. The prize will be donated either in full or split up into parts in the event of several acceptable devices being submitted.

Where There's a Will.

I wanted a black lace hat, which cost $7 while I had but $4. One noon I went to one of the department stores to try on hats, thinking I could copy one at less cost.

By good fortune the clerk who attended me had an interest in her work, and was so nice to me in bringing hats to try on that I did not have the heart to say, as I had intended, "I'll call again," but confessed to her that I didn't have enough money. She did not seem horrified, but brought the lace trimmed shapes, brought the flowers and ribbon of black velvet and arranged them just like the trimmed hats.

Then she said, "Now, as you have bought the materials here, we'll trim the hat free of charge." The hat, trimmings and all, came to just $4.

I was grateful to the clerk, who helped a 16 year old girl to have a lovely new hat.

Books "Thrown In."

I was pleased enough with my bargain when I purchased a charming old mahogany secretary, but it turned out to be even better than I expected. The old man from whom I bought it mentioned that he had a few books and would throw them in with the purchase. Being already crowded for book room, I felt reluctant to accept what would probably be a lot of old trash, but rather than hurt the old gentleman's feelings by refusing I told him to send them along.

To my great surprise I found them to be a splendid lot, among them being a lovely old set of Dickens, beautifully bound, printed by Harper & Brothers in 1872, with over 100 exquisite engravings. I consider this alone worth what I paid for the desk.

A White Elephant Sale.

Years and years ago, before the war, the first White Elephant sale was held in an old stone residence on Michigan avenue. There the rich, who had so much of everything that they could give away bits of beauty of which they had grown tired, or which no longer fitted into their scheme of things, and the poor, who never had enough of any thing to fit together to make a scheme of things, met over the counters. Things and things! Such lovely things! There will never be another such assemblage of beautiful treasures placed within reach of those who love beauty but cannot always pay its price.

And such bargains! I had bought bookends of lovely wood, obviously an import, the design was so foreign, for a quarter; a lovely old runner of hand woven linen, cross-stiched, for 60 cents; a small tray of sandalwood, hand carved, for a quarter; a wall hanging for a dollar—when suddenly my eyes fell upon a framed Japanese print. And a duck of a print it was, too! But $10! But an inner hunch told me that if I would wait around until the end of the day and it had not been sold it would be mine for a dollar.

And I did, and it was!

SING TONIGHT AND TOMORROW

NANETTE GUILFORD
[Kay Photo.]

CHARLES HACKETT
[Moffett Photo.]

ROSA RAISA
[H. A. Atwell Photo.]

THREE stars of grand opera who will be heard in programs tonight and tomorrow over W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune Station on the Drake hotel. Mr. Hackett, assisted by Miss Guilford, will give the Kent program broadcast tonight, while Mme. Raisa will be the guest artist in the family party program, a regular Monday night feature.

Rosa Raisa to Sing on Radio Tomorrow Night

Will Be Guest Soloist in Family Party.

Rosa Raisa, prima donna of the Chicago Opera company, who will be the guest soloist tomorrow night in the family party program broadcast from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, brings to the radio audience one of the superbly artistic bits of salvage saved from the Russian maelstrom—a glorious, dramatic soprano voice. Born of wealthy Jewish parents in Bailystock, Poland, in 1893, Rosa Raisa passed through the tortures of Jewish persecution as her father's fortune became depleted, and finally escaped, after bitter hardships, to Naples, where she arrived as a young girl with nothing but a loaf of stale bread, a bundle of ragged clothing—and a voice.

Today she is one of the foremost sopranos of the concert and opera stage and occupies a distinctive position in the field of modern ingenue singers because of her type—that of a soprano of the old "grand style," like Nordica and Patti. But two decades of work and struggle lie behind her.

In Naples she abandoned the study of dentistry, which she had started with a cousin in Poland as her father's fortune waned, and fought her way to recognition as a singer under Madame Marchisio. After singing in Milan, Rome, and other Italian cities, she appeared at Covent Garden, London, and was instantly successful. Her voice attracted the attention of the great Campanini and it was he who first brought her to the United States.

The family program tomorrow night will have only two parts instead of three, as heretofore. The first part will include a symphony orchestra with Roderic Graham as conductor and Madame Raisa as soloist. The second part will feature a concert band under the leadership of Patrick Conway, with Madame Raisa in one group of two numbers. The entire program will be devoted to popular classics, ballads, and light opera numbers, and, in addition to W-G-N, will be broadcast over twenty-nine other stations from the studios of the National Broadcasting company.

Radio to Become Great Factor in Moving Trains

Engineer and Conductor on Freights Can Talk.

American railroads plan to go rapidly forward in the next five years in establishing radio communication for handling freight trains, R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association, has informed the federal radio commission.

Experiments in communication between the locomotive and caboose of a freight train and between the office and switch engine in a big railroad yard have indicated radio service is reliable and economical, Mr. Aishton told the commission.

The greater efficiency and safer handling of freight trains must necssarily result in a saving of time and consequent reduction in the handling cost of the nation's freight and the improvement of this service, he said.

Most Desirable Waves.

The devolpment of train radio communication, using low power tranmitters, has proceeded in the short wave band of 109 to 130 meters, G. T. Stanton, chairman of the radio committee of the railway association, said. Experiments have indicated that these wave lengths are the most desirable for train service, he added.

"This is due to the fact that the antenna is limited in length by conditions governing its mounting on the locomotive or caboose," Mr. Stanton said.

"The efficiency is very low, due to the high absorption of radiated energy by the steel mass of the locomotive and the steel parts of the caboose. Wave lengths substantially above this band would require antenna of such length as to be impossible of mounting upon railroad rolling stock, or would require loading to such an extent that the already inefficient radiation would be reduced."

Would Avoid Interference.

Any substantial increase in the wave length also would place this service near the lower limits of the broadcast band and might cause some interference with broadcast receivers near the railroad right of way, Mr. Stanton asserted.

Attempts have been made to determine whether or not interference with broadcast programs can be caused by the train sets. A test was made recently at Richmond, Va., when an impromptu program was broadcast by the train transmitter for one hour.

Frequent announcements were made that this program was from the train, and all persons hearing the program were requested to report reception. Mr. Stanton says not a single report was received. Only one case of interference was reported, and upon investigation the set was found to be a regenerative receiver made in 1922. The voice from the train was faintly heard as the train passed within 300 feet.

Radio aids materially in the elimination of train delays occasioned by lack of communication and reduces the time consumed in performing switching operations, recalling flagmen and starting trains, Mr. Stanton declares. It also provides a means of notifying the engineman in cases of emergency to stop the train.

Two Americans Sing Tonight on Kent Program

Charles Hackett, leading tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will broadcast the concert in the Atwater Kent hour, tonight, assisted by Nanette Guilford of the Metropolitan Opera, and an orchestra under the leadership of Robert Hood Bowers. The program will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Miss Guilford, who made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera house on Feb. 22, 1926, is considered the baby of the "Met." Born in Harlem, Miss Guilford has the distinction of being the only native born New Yorker at the local opera.

She made her stage debut with the Midnight Rounders then playing the Century Roof, but after three weeks decided in favor of opera as against musical comedy, and after a year and a half of further study became a member of the opera company.

Hackett is a native of Worcester, Mass., where he sang with the high school glee club, later becoming a soloist at a Boston church. In 1911 he was singing in St. Thomas' church, New York City, when he decided to go to Italy for study. There he made his operatic debut.

Hackett has the distinction of being the first American tenor to sing at La Scala in Milan, the Constanzi in Rome.

Plan to Extend European Radio Phone Service

LONDON, Feb. 11.—It is considered probable that European countries will be invited to link up with the Anglo-American trans-Atlantic telephone service. Several test calls from America to continental cities have already been made and it is believed that the increased revenue from continental participation will help make the project self-supporting.

OPEN EVENINGS

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

DOGGONE those lectures that the announcers read off between orchestra offerings! You know:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is station WASP, and tonight we are presenting Josef Meyerboomboom's famous Concerto in B still. Of all of Meyerboomboom's works—when he did work—this work is acclaimed as his greatest.

"Tonight, as the concert opens, you will hear a prolonged sizzling by the clarinets, which depicts the friars in the act of frying. The story, of course, is familiar to you all—the tale of the timid little match girl who early falls in love with a Norwegian. The Norwegian is in reality a rathskellar, but no one suspects it at first.

"The violins surge upward then in a mighty wave, followed by the clatter of hoofbeats on the kettle drums. The scene, you know, is now the roller skating rink, and Alfred, the wigmaker, enters from the left, making faces at the Confederate soldiers. Here you will notice the woodwinds and oboes panting furiously and two gentlemen in the balcony coughing.

"After the first movement of this delightful concerto comes the second movement, which is a kind of flank movement. The cornets and trombones are heard blaring in an ecstasy of melody, which represents the whimsical scene on the fire escape. Little Bethyl, the flaxen haired child, has stolen three hot cross buns and is hiding from the band of Republicans who have pursued her ever since their convention in Los Angeles. There comes a lone wail of a tender flute, which you can take to mean anything you darned please, and then a perfect crescendo and alli-oopo of majestic music closing the second movement.

"After the intermission the 'cellos and the concertinas are discerned heralding the approach of the Corn Borer, in a frenzy of martial harmony. The Corn Borer strides into the scene, but plants himself in the wrong seat, and the peasants laugh loud and long. The latter is illustrated by the quaking of the saxophones and zithers. Finally the old witch turns out to be a golden lamp post in disguise, and the real daughter of the new king—so there is feasting and merry making throughout the land—and the concerto ends in an avalanche of heavenly music played slightly pistachio. I thank you. Don't forget to send for our free booklet on bicycle riding. The music will now start."

A CORNBORER

WELL, SIR, if everybody else is going to write a song about going home back home to Rhode Island and Mammy, then we're going to write a song, too. It seems to us that Idaho is a state that has been plumb neglected. Let's tune up our lyres and smack the string for Idaho. Hey-hey!

"I gotta gal lives 'way out west
An' of all my cookies she's the best.
In her little old sunbonnet
With the yellow ribbon on it,
She lives 'way out on the Idaho farm
With a flock o' freckles on her arm.
Mammy—Mammy!
And that is why I say:

CHORUS:

O, you should see my Idaho Ida hoe.
She's my Ida and I'm her Joe.
She looks so sweet the birds sing tweet
When Ida hoes Idaho's biggest beet.
I wanna go back to Ida and stay forevermore,
Where the fields of cotton grow 'round the cabin door.
I'll be so happy
When Ida shows that Ida knows—
I wanna see my Idaho Ida hoe!"
(Dum-deedle-ump-dum—dum-dum!)

WHILE THE radio is now going into the matter of education full blast it would be a good thing if this new miracle could pep up the old methods of teaching. We suggest a course in the dynamic salesmanship system of teaching Latin, for instance. Here's one day's lecture by the dynamic professor of the radio:

"Well, here we are again, boys and girls. Wonderful day, isn't it? I've got a great little proposition in Latin today that I'm sure you're going to fall in love with.

"You're looking charming today, miss—I mean this little lady down here in the first row. In fact, you all look wonderful! Health is wealth, they say, and we must all be on our toes every minute of the day. Up and at 'em all the time!

"Tackle your lessons and throw 'em for a loss! Slip 'em an uppercut and a solar plexus, and show 'em you're the master! Go after 'em with rod and gun and whip 'em to a frazzle! Sink or swim, do or die, and never give up the ship!

Worry is only imaginary—nothing daunts the man who tries—go at your task with a will—and an apple a day keeps the doctor away!

"Now, take this proposition. It says on page 4 of our Latin text that 'Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres.' Now, if you'll just set your minds hard on that, you can knock it for a goal!

"Come on—let's go—call your football signals—and hit the line! It's a Latin line, and an easy one! Sic 'em! Let's have some pep! Who's got it?

"Come now, let's snap it up! Faster! Faster! Think fast! Let's go!

"What's the matter? Try again. Keep your mind intent on that line from Cæsar! Come on, now; gotta have some pep! Don't give up! Step on the gas!

"Hasn't anybody got it yet? Remember our mottoes! Now, dive in and smack that line for a ten yard loss! Keep saying to yourself, 'Every day in every way!' Think hard! Now, let's try again. Say to yourself that you're going to put this over, and nothing can stop you! One, two, three—go!

"It's a rare and beautiful language—Latin is. Nothing like it this side of Italy. It's a tongue that has come down through the ages. As easy as all get out! It's just begging you to learn it! Come now—what am I bid on this line from Cæsar? Who's going to be the lucky one? Whoever gets the line first, you know, receives a fine, big shining mark of 100! Let's go! Don't give up the ship! Fight, fight, fight."

From Bananas to Bach, Trend of Radio Music

Climbs from Syncopation to the Classics.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 11.—From "Yes We Have No Bananas" to Bach's "Air on the G String." From "red-hot" syncopation to the dignity of the classics.

That, according to Victor Saudek, conductor of the Little Symphony orchestra at station KDKA, has been the evolution of musical taste among radio listeners since broadcasting became an established institution a little more than seven years ago. And there is no one, perhaps, whose opinion on such matters is entitled to more respect than is Mr. Saudek's, for he, as head of the first orchestra ever organized exclusively for radio broadcasting, has been presenting concerts over the air nightly for more than five years.

Early Fans Demanded Jazz.

When dinner concerts by the Little Symphony first became a regular feature, Saudek says he and his fellow musicians became the target for a volley of caustic correspondence. "If you want anybody to listen to you, lay off the high-brow junk," a typical letter said. "Give us something peppy, like 'Red Hot Mamma,'" said another.

After a few months, however, a majority of the fans asked for folk songs. The Stephen C. Foster melodies and love ballads were requested more frequently than any other. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," was one of the favorites. Another was "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Light opera, notably Victor Herbert's works, next came into favor with the listeners. Saudek began to receive hundreds of letters, requesting selections from "The Red Mill," "Sari," "The Chocolate Soldier," and the entire list of Gilbert and Sullivan works.

Standard Music.

It was about three years ago when an overwhelming sentiment in favor of "standard" music made itself manifest. For a period of many months selections such as "The Overture to Poet and Peasant" and "The Overture to William Tell" lead in popularity.

For the last year or more Saudek's programs have been made up almost exclusively of so-called semi-classical and classical music, and he says there is no doubt that this is the type of music his listeners now want. Every mail, he says, brings letters begging him not to cheapen his programs—a distinct contrast to the general attitude of five years ago. The most frequent requests are for the various classical serenades, minuets, intermezzi and ballets, and also for classic bits from the popular symphonies of Haydn, Schubert, and Mozart.

Modern Airs Unpopular.

"The elevation of public taste within five years has been astounding," Mr. Saudek says, "but the radio audience is not yet prepared for the richest musical literature, such as complete symphonies by Beethoven and Brahms. Nor is the public yet ready to hear modern music, from the pens of such composers as Ravel, Stravinsky, Honegger, Milhaud, Di-Fella, Schoenberg and Bela Bartok. It is sad but true that if we were to feature such works our audiences would be decimated in short order.'

Expert Demonstrates Value of Seizing Opportunity

THE sixteenth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast Tuesday from W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel.

Each game of the series features Milton C. Work and Wilbur C. Richards of Detroit, founder and first president of the American Auction Bridge league, and E. J. TWO bridge stars from the west—Mrs. C. E. Traver of Salt Lake City and James G. Stanley of Denver—met Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead in the radio game broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N.

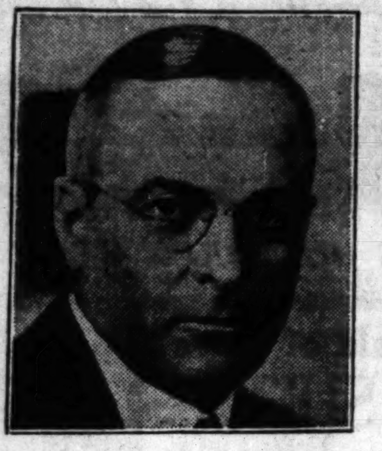
Mr. Stanley was the south player and dealer. His cards—spades, 4; hearts, A, 4, 2; diamonds, A, 7, 5, 3; clubs, 10, 9, 6, 4, 3—did not permit him to bid. Although he held two quick tricks, he had no medium by which he could convey that information to his partner. Had his five card suit been headed by one of his aces, a bid would have been justified; but a four card suit headed by an ace and without another honor is too weak to bid with any such hand as his. As Mr. Work explained, in commenting on the bidding of this hand, four card suits rarely are bid unless the hand contains the three top honors [ace, king, queen] or two of them plus a side trick; and, except with an occasional freak hand, three suits should be stopped to warrant a no trump.



JAMES G. STANLEY.

MRS. C. E. TRAVER.

Mr. Work, west, of course bid one heart on: Spades, 9, 7, 5; hearts, K, Q, J, 10, 8; diamonds, 8, 6, 4; clubs, A, K.

RAISES HER PARTNER

Mr. Whitehead, north, made a defensive bid of one spade on: Spades, K, J, 10, 8, 6, 2; hearts, 6; diamonds, K, Q, 9, 2; clubs, 7, 5.

Mrs. Traver's holdings of: Spades, A, Q, 3; hearts, 9, 7, 5, 3; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, Q, J, 8, 2, enabled her to raise her partner's hearts to two. Mr. Whitehead's spade bid made her ace-queen of spades almost surely good for two tricks; she also had four trumps, assistance in clubs, and only a doubleton in diamonds. It requires more strength to raise from one to two than from two to three, but Mrs. Traver had ample for even the more exacting raise.

Mr. Stanley and Mr. Work passed, as did Mr. Whitehead, also. His defensive spade bid had been made with minimum strength, and having received no encouragement from his partner, he could not go on. Mr. Work, therefore, became the declarer, with his contract two hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, north, led the king of diamonds. Mrs. Traver spread her hand for the dummy, and Mr. Work played from it the 10 of diamonds. Mr. Stanley, south, after some very clever thinking, played the ace of diamonds, taking his partner's trick. Mr. Stanley counting two probable tricks in diamonds and a sure trick with the ace of trumps, realized that but one trick more was needed to save game. He saw that he could obtain that trick by ruffing a spade, provided, as was probable, that declarer had another diamond. Mr. Stanley therefore overtook the first diamond trick in order to lead his singleton spade, well knowing that his partner would understand the play. Mr. Work played the 4 of diamonds.

LEADS SINGLETON

Mr. Stanley immediately led his singleton 4 of spades; Mr. Work played the 5; Mr. Whitehead the king, and dummy won with the ace.

Dummy led the 3 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the ace; Mr. Work played the 10, retaining the 8 spot so that Dummy's 9 could be used as an entry if occasion required; Mr. Whitehead played the 6.

Mr. Stanley led the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the queen; dummy the jack.

Mr. Whitehead, just as Mr. Stanley had foreseen, caught the import of Mr. Stanley's overtake of the first lead of diamonds, followed by his lead of a spade up to the major tenace in dummy. This play fairly shrieked the fact that Mr. Stanley's spade was a singleton. Therefore Mr. Whitehead did as he was expected to do, by leading the jack of spades. He played the jack in order to force dummy's queen and establish his own 10, and at the same time give Mr. Stanley the requested chance to ruff and save the game. Dummy covered with the queen of spades; Mr. Stanley trumped with the 2 of hearts; Mr. Work was forced to follow suit with the 7 of spades.

MAKES THREE HEARTS

Mr. Stanley then led the 4 of clubs; Mr. Work played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 5; dummy the 2.

Mr. Work proceeded to get the last outstanding trump. He led the king of hearts; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 2 of spades; dummy played the 5 of hearts; Mr. Stanley the 4 of hearts.

Mr. Work then led the king of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; dummy the 8; Mr. Stanley the 3.

Mr. Work next led the 8 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead followed suit with the 2; dummy trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the 5 of diamonds.

Dummy led the good queen of clubs, permitting Mr. Work to discard the 9 of spades. Mr. Stanley, south, played the 6 of clubs and Mr. Whitehead, north, discarded the 6 of spades.

Mr. Work then spread his hand, displaying three trumps for the three last tricks, which the opponents conceded as winners.

Mr. Work, therefore, made three odd at hearts, scoring 24 points in the trick score, and 80 points in the honor score for four honors in one hand.

Even the most expert players are helpless against a distribution like that shown in this hand, when the opponents are on the alert to seize the opportunity for a defensive play like that made by Mr. Stanley.

TO TALK

MISS JANE ADDAMS, nationally known head of Hull House here, who speaks tonight at the Sunday Evening club.

The Detector Tube Is the Heart of a Radio Receiver

Like the human heart, the radio tube detector is the life valve of a receiver.

A popular belief that a detector merely "detects waves emitted from a broadcasting station" is only partly correct. It not only detects, but rectifies, making up its most important duty.

Rectification is essential, because a transmitter sends out a current whose speed of vibration or frequency is too high for the ear to pick up. This frequency is lowered by the detector.

To perform its part efficiently the tube has three elements, a filament, a grid, and a plate.

When the A battery heats the filament negative electrons are thrown off. The plate or collectors, which is positively charged by the B battery, collects these negative impulses, following the electrical law that opposites attract.

The grid, which is a mesh of fine wire inserted between the filament and the plate, is the governor or regulator. The current reaching the detector is alternating at a high speed, having both negative and positive phases. It is the duty of the grid to let only the negative half pass to the positive plate.

The action of the grid is something like that of an automatic interrupter, opening and closing he plate circuit thousands of times a second. It is this relay action which prepares the music and voice for the ear of the listener.

DO BIG BUSINESS.

NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.
December 27, 1927

Bremer-Tully Manufacturing Company,

Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

The latitude and altitude of New Orleans create atmospheric conditions that make radio reception of a satisfactory nature very difficult. We tried out the highly advertised receiving sets that are considered standards of excellence but the reception was so unsatifactory that we discontinued our efforts. I had about given up the idea of owning a radio entirely when I met an electrical engineer in Cleveland and he was so insistent that I could get good results from a Bremer-Tully set under any conditions that I decided to give one of your receivers a trial.

I recently purchased your 8--13 Receiver and your new B-T Speaker. The results have been truly remarkable. Under anything like favorable atmospheric conditions we can bring in any of the big stations in the country. The super-stations come in so loud that it is necessary to cut down the volume considerably. The mechanic who installed the set said that we might expect an AC hum but it has failed to materialize. Your direct socket unit has performed perfectly.

Just a word about the dial. It is a revelation to my friends when we set the dial on the published wave length of a station, turn on the juice and there it is. We do not know of any other receiver that will do this.

Sincerely yours,
C. H. Corey

the new A·C·set

Model 37
The astonishing price of the new, six-tube, FULL-VISION Dial, self-contained A. C. set includes everything except tubes and a speaker. No power accessories required—no batteries, no charger. For use with 110-115 volt, 60-cycle, Alternating Current. Uses six A. C. amplifying tubes, and one rectifying tube.

$88

Why don't we boost it harder?

AFTER a few days' experience with the new Atwater Kent A. C. set, radio listeners say to us:

"You didn't tell us half when you said this was a good set. It's more than good. It's a wonder! Why don't you boost it harder?"

We do boost it. The trouble is that words cannot tell the whole story. A few evenings in your home—that's the way to find out—from the Atwater Kent 37 itself.

It is so small you can place it anywhere. The cord that brings the power from a lamp socket of the house lighting system (at a cost of only a fraction of a cent an hour) is more than ten feet long—giving you your choice of position. The unusual design and the soft glowing beauty of the satin finish please everybody.

Now for listening!

With a tiny gold switch you snap on the power. With the FULL-VISION Dial you summon the programs. It's magic—this FULL-VISION Dial. You see it all at a glance. You jump from station to station in a split second. It's like hitting the bull's-eye with every shot!

And the tone! When you realize that the re-creative genius of this set does full justice to the voices of the artists and the music of their instruments, you will marvel how such perfection can be attained.

Raise the lid!

For your answer—raise the lid and make a closer examination than you had time for in your first eagerness to see what the set would do.

You will see how the space-saving compactness of the set has been accomplished—how the cabinet is so constructed that it completely shields the electrical assembly inside—how the power supply is doubly shielded—how every visible part is beautifully made and finished. You will know it to be a fact when we tell you that the parts you don't see—even the tiniest of them—have received equal attention. You will know that all this counts in the performance of the Atwater Kent 37—in your lasting satisfaction.

How they talk about it!

Lasting satisfaction! You must have it. That is why we match every working part of every receiver—why we put every receiver through 222 tests or inspections—why many parts are tested for accuracy to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch—why every tenth employee in the whole 15-acre Atwater Kent factory is an inspector or tester.

That is why so many people—veterans of radio and novices—have bought this new self-contained A. C. set—why many are buying two sets for different parts of their homes—why they're telling their friends about it and the astonishingly low price made possible by big-scale production—why, almost overnight, the Atwater Kent 37 has become the most popular radio in the world.

Try it. You'll see!

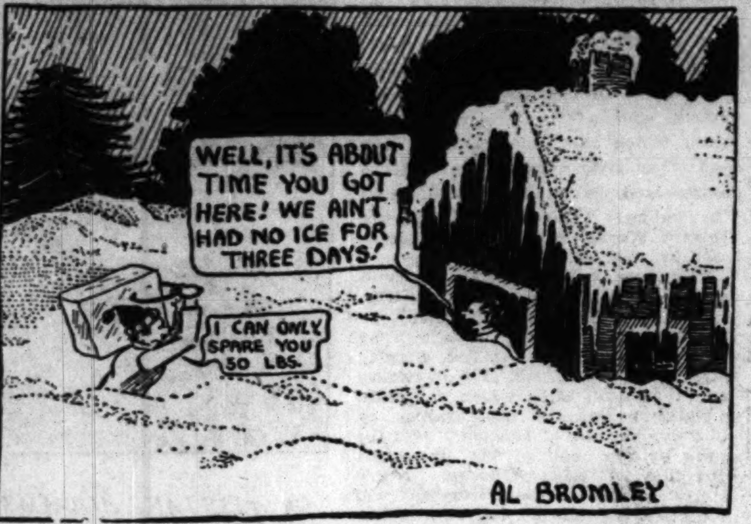
Charley Red Eagle Wins a Bet, and His Widow Collects at Once

By Snowshoe Al.

[The following are excerpts clipped from the latest issue of The Hell Hole Howl, published at Hell Hole, Alaska, fifty miles south of the Arctic Ocean. This newspaper is printed regularly every night, but don't forget that a night lasts six months.]



WELL, IT'S ABOUT TIME YOU GOT HERE! WE AIN'T HAD NO ICE FOR THREE DAYS!
I CAN ONLY SPARE YOU 50 LBS.
AL BROMLEY

YESTERDAY afternoon Charley Red Eagle, who never lost a bet in his life, wagered ten dollars with several friends that he could stay under water for fifteen minutes without coming to the surface for air. Charley won the bet! The money was paid to his widow immediately.

LOST—A dime, somewhere between Dawson City and the stretch of timber sixty miles south of here. The date on the coin was 1899, and my initials are scratched on both sides. There is a small nick on one side, and the edges are rather worn. A most liberal reward if returned to my cabin.

We understand that the grand opera season is now going full blast down in the states. It seems that the more beautiful an opera singer's voice is, the homelier her mug gets. If we ever married a grand opera soprano, it would be with the understanding that if she ever quit singing for even a moment we would most certainly sock her with an ax.

Timothy O'Brien, who is a part owner in the firm of O'Brien, Levy, Rosenthal, Goldberg & Co., fur buyers, asks us to announce that their little place of business will be closed all day on St. Patrick's day. This decision was reached by the firm after an all night discussion. Messrs. Levy, Rosenthal and Goldberg are being attended by Dr. Brown, who says they are doing as well as can be expected.

A SHORT STORY

Hiram Hayseed lived on a farm. He was well educated, having read every mail order catalogue in existence, and his home contained a radio and all them gosh-durned things! He had heard a lot about the hard boiled citizens of Chicago, but he was rather skeptical. Yup, he doubted whether the town was as tough as the newspaper items made it appear.

"Gol darn it, I'll go an' see for myself!" says he, so he boarded a train one afternoon and breezed into Chicago about 9 p. m. Hiram stepped out of the depot, walked over to the curb and signaled a pirate gas wagon.

"Take me to the corner of State an' Madison streets," says Mr. Hayseed.

Now the depot was only six blocks from the above named spot, but the taxi bandit passed through North Chicago twice and South Chicago three times in order to get there. The bad news amounted to $18.75. Our hero crawled out of the burglar bus and walked around for a while looking at all the bright lights. He decided that he was hungry so he trotted into a night club and ordered a mess of ham and eggs. The bill was $8 plus a two buck cover charge. He handed the waiter ten berries. The waiter thanked him, but slipped him a dirty look. It cost Hiram four bits to get his hat back from Miss Golddigger in the check room. Then he went out and mingled with the crowds on the street. Pretty soon he discovered that he had lost his watch.

"By golly, I'm gettin' real careless," says he to himself, so he walked around looking for it on the sidewalk, but he didn't find it.

Just then a nice looking girl stumbled against him.

"O, excuse me," says she, "but I just couldn't help stumbling because I feel terribly weak. I ain't had nothin' to eat since this morning."

"Well, by cracky, nobody can ever say that Hiram Hayseed refused to feed a maiden in distress!" says our hero. The girl knew where there was a nice quiet place on a side street, so they went there. She sure ordered a queer meal for a famished mama! She squawked for a pair of pretzels and a gin highball. Then she ordered a highball without the pretzels, after which she ordered a pack of cigarets and two more highballs. The bill amounted to sixteen dollars. Then the poor girl discovered that she didn't have carfare home, so she borrowed ten bucks off Mr. Hayseed and left him, after promising to mail him the money. After she had went, Hiram felt for his diamond tie pin. It wasn't there, so he knew he must have left it home.

Well, our hero walked up and down the side streets for the next two or three hours, looking for adventure. He met a nice gentleman who sold him a fifty dollar diamond ring for fifteen bucks. The gentleman needed the money, but there wasn't any pawnshops open at that hour, so he let Mr. Hayseed have the gem. The gentleman wiped a couple of tears from his eyes and made Hiram promise to sell it back to him some day for fifty dollars.

By this time dawn was beginning to break, so Mr. Hayseed decided to go home. He climbed into another goofy looking taxi and went to the depot. The cab bill amounted to eleven berries.

"Aw, I knew it was the bunk!" grinned Hiram to himself. "This town is tame! Hell, I've been running around alone all night an' I didn't see even one robber!"

Ever since Mr. Volstead tried to improve on a well known book by inventing The Eleventh Commandment (Thou shalt not use alcohol except for rubbing purposes) the Yukon Kid has been able to make a fair living by bringing Laughing Sirup into our town from Canada on his dog sled. Yukon says he wishes Mr. Volstead would spring another one to the effect that "Thou shalt not flirt with Lady Nicotine." You can get lots more cigarets on a sled than bottles.

There are sixty seconds in a minute, and three children are born in this world every sixty seconds. Therefore we think Barnum was wrong when he remarked that there is a sucker born every minute. Where did he get the idea that the other two children are fed with a spoon?

We hereby continue our practice of asking our readers a few questions in order to let them test their intelligence. Here they are, fellows:

1. What famous man is responsible for the following quotation: "You can fool some people all of the time; you can fool all the people some of the time; but you can't fool a horsefly?"
2. How many of our Popular Song Writers who rave about "dear old Dixie" have ever been south of Peoria, Illinois, and what was his name?
3. Name a foreign country (just south of the United States) which is probably wondering what the hell William Randolph Hearst is talking about.

* *

The MacPherson family are now celebrating Christmas. This delay is due to the fact that they made a bum guess. They guessed that somebody would throw away a Christmas tree before this.

* *

NOTICE: I have just discovered that there are 23 kids in my family instead of 22, and I don't think this extra one belongs to us, although I wouldn't swear to it. Will the other Eskimo families in this town please count their brats and see if one is missing? I thank you.

CHARLIE SOC-WANOTO.

99 Prizes to Be Given for Best Interiors Seen

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell Heads Committee in Charge.

By Margaret Stevers.

CHICAGOANS take pride in their homes! This stands proved by the enthusiastic response which greeted last week's opening announcement of THE TRIBUNE's Home Harmonious Contest, with $6,000 in prizes for the ninety-nine residents of Chicago and suburbs whose homes are judged the most attractive and comfortable in their interior arrangements.

Universal commendation has greeted the salient feature of the contest—that all homes would be judged on the basis of how well the homemaker had wrought with the means available, rather than on the basis of absolute beauty alone.

This one feature has stirred the imagination of many with whom we are in touch.

Touches Their Pride.

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers says: "They feel it rests the contest upon the fairest and most interesting basis imaginable, the taste and ingenuity displayed in achieving the best home life possible, with ordinary means and under every day living conditions. It touches every woman's pride in her ability to do well with whatever income she has available, and they are keenly interested in matching skill with their friends. I am confident the contest will be a stimulus to richer home life throughout the community."

Others, both in professional circles and among those entering the contest, voiced the same view.

Many of the contestants expressed high enthusiasm and are looking forward eagerly to having the judges view their handiwork in creating charming home surroundings.

Mrs. E. S. writes: "Please come and see what a 65 year old lady has done to make an old home snug and cheerful with $130 a month and my hands."

Here is a home created in a hotel: "I am mailing the enclosed coupon at once in the hope that you may find it convenient to visit my home, which I constructed from a series of regular hotel rooms into a semblance of a bungalow, with a walnut library and regular dining room and kitchen."

"MRS. R. B."

Built 70 Years Ago.

Here is an entry that promises to be interesting: "Our house was built in 1858 and was furnished before the war and is quite unusual in its housing so many uncommon antiques. My father came here in 1840—hence the relics of an early age. B. W."

Mrs. W. submits her small house: "Our home of six rooms is a bit unusual as to arrangement and design and has an unusual as well as attractive living room for a small house. It was designed entirely by my husband and me. Would like very much to have it considered in your contest."

Mrs. P. sends in her entry: "We are a large family of eleven persons and live in a humble home, but would like very much to have you visit and see how such a large family lives on a modest income."

Meanwhile entries have come in from all quarters of the city and suburbs and from communities of almost every range of property value, the most exclusive as well as districts of extremely modest homes. Likewise the entries include large and small apartments, houses and bungalows of all sizes.

As the contest swings into its second week today, the focus of interest among early entries is the question of judging. The committee in general charge of the contest is districting the city and suburbs, and organizing district groups of judges to visit all homes entered in the contest. The groups will meet for luncheon this week, at which time the rules will be explained in detail, together with the

Mother and Charlie Move Their Restaurant to Busier Spot

The first chapter of this unusual story of success told how Mrs. Mary King, left a widow, began, by serving midnight lunches to Chicago newspaper men, businesses that were to amass millions; how she laid the foundations for the institutions later started and run by her children, Fannie May, Julia King, "Charlie" King, and Caroline Williams.

By Marion Reagan.

FOR a whole year preceding the world's fair there was a bustle of preparation in Chicago—a preparation that was much more than merely material. It was a kind of cultural primping up. Everybody wanted to be ready when the distinguished guests from all over the world should arrive, to show off the town to the best possible advantage. Women especially were taking to the cultural phase of it. They joined clubs, formed new clubs, wrote papers on such subjects as "The Renaissance," "The Floreentine Painters," "The Fall of Carthage," "Shakespeare."

In commerce men were priming themselves for the swollen stream of business the fair was expected to bring. Every one predicted it was to be a flood tide of fortune, and he would have been a sleepy business man indeed who did not make some effort to ride in on the wave of it.

* *

The Kings Move Their Business.

Charlie King and his mother had moved their little restaurant at 119 Fifth avenue to Calhoun place. They had had two different locations in Calhoun place, and while on general principles Charlie contended it was bad business to move too often, still on the eve of the fair he could not resist the temptation "to get out on the street," as he put it. For while the alley way between Madison and Washington streets was dignified by the name of Calhoun place, it was more familiarly known as "Newsboys' alley," and was, after all, just an alley.

It was an alley, to be sure, with as much distinction, as much personality, and as rich a history as any thorough- side of Fifth avenue, just across the fare in Chicago, but from a business point of view there was no gainsaying the fact that a location on a main street would be more desirable. With the new cultural tendency abroad in the town a restaurant boasting of the patronage of literary men would unquestionably be successful.

And so, in the spring of '93, "King's" was moved back to the west street from the original location. It was right in the center of newspaper

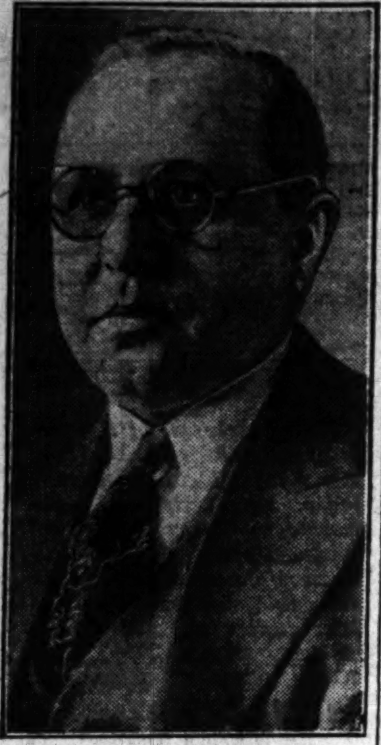
He's Late for Lunch—but Collects $50 Prize

South Side Realty Man Realizes on His Politeness



Paul P. Baltutis, 3327 South Halsted street, who is awarded $50 for being polite.

By the Politeness Reporter.

I KNOW much more about Lithuania than I did before the magic card took me down to South Halsted street. Not as much, perhaps, as as I should know, but this remains my fault and not because Mr. Baltutis did not take time during his lunch hour in courteously trying to enlighten me.

Whether Mr. Baltutis missed attendance at some noon luncheon club where realtors and other business men congregate, I can't say. I know that several times he started to put on his hat and coat, only to be detained by my inquiries that he had nothing to do with nearby properties, but with the far off country that was as vague to me as my questions must have seemed to him.

My adventures in quest of a most polite and courteous person were limited on this occasion to the district on South Halsted between 31st and 34th streets. There seemed to me some magnet in that vicinity attracting the card, though I had alighted from the surface car purely by chance. The blind man, encountered by me in one of my west side journeys, who also stood on the rear platform, was guided, to the corner where he got off, by a polite street car conductor—No. 11364. The blind man had intended to get off at Van Buren street, but the conductor informed him he already had a rival on that corner. Later on, at a site where there was no competition, the conductor escorted the blind man through the street traffic until he was safe at the curb.

The Butcher-Artist.

When I got off at 31st street I was attracted immediately by a young man, in a white coat and apron, who was painting temporary signs on the window of the Novak meat market. He had a deft touch with the brush and, looking inside the window for inspiration, painted such words as "neck ribs" and "ox tails," with the prices opposite. He observed me standing close by and said:

"Some fellows'd get nervous with somebody looking on, but it don't bother me. My teacher in grammar school used to tell me I'd ought to be a cartoonist, but you know to do that you've got to have funny ideas."

I asked him about the materials he was using.

"Just calcimine with a little water, but if you want to keep it so the kids can't rub it off, mix in a little glue. My main job's butchering, and I can't spend too much time, you know, playing around at this."

He was making an "eggs" sign on the other side of the building when I came back from eating at the Universal restaurant of Anton A. Norkus, a few doors below.

"Thought you'd gone," greeted the butcher-artist. "Now I can show you how I fix up the letters after they're made." And he rubbed off certain of the jagged corners left by the brush.

Among the Truck Drivers.

I ate my lunch at the same table with a couple of truck drivers who wondered what kind of a trip they were going to get that afternoon. There were several trucks waiting out in front of the place while their drivers and assistants refreshed themselves. We ate to the accompaniment of a radio program. When one of the drivers spoke about his swollen finger I suggested a certain kind of salve, the application of which might provide a remedy. He seemed to take the advice with good grace.

I could see that on this day I wasn't going to suffer from the cold. The sun was shining on the east side of Halsted street. There were numerous baby buggies abroad. The big policemen, walking their beats, seemed at peace with the world. The district was all new to me, and the names on the signs attracted my attention. Radjius, the undertaker; Stasulani, the lawyer; Gricus, merchant tailor; Juozaites, dentist; Stravinizkas, barber. The news man on the corner, along with his English editions, had both Polish and Lithuanian newspapers on his stand.

I paused to look at the bridal pictures and the bridal shower pictures by Stankunas, the photographer. The photographs hinted of happy hours. Yet I knew none of the persons portrayed in the window. I was a stranger.

The name of the movie looked familiar, and the gas station and the chain stores are, of course, the same everywhere these days because of standardization. But that sign in front of a hall, calling attention, in English, to an annual masquerade dance, said the event was to be given by "Dr—Ste—Palaimintos Lieturos."

All Greek to Him.

I asked a man working about the building what the words meant. He dropped his task and tried his best to give me words in English that corresponded. His ability, however, at translation was not equal to his willingness. It seemed there was no word that would quite express the phrase. Somewhere in the translation it suffered. He asked me what my language was and he expressed regret that he hadn't given me an interpretation that would do.

I went into the establishment kept by Mr. Markman at 3111 South Halsted because I was attracted by the imported chinaware I saw within on the shelves. Mr. Markman was busy at the rear of the room, but he came to explain to me that the jars, marked for containing sugar and salt and various spices, were sold as sets only. They were imported, he told me, and persons accustomed to them in the old country still liked to have them in the house over here. He regretted that he could ill afford to break up one of the sets, but he assured me my interest and inquiry had made him no trouble at all.

Walking along the street, I came to a real estate office, in the window of which I saw a display of wooden shoes, amber necklaces, and other trinkets. The display was rather in the nature of personal souvenirs, I judged. Anyhow, I went inside and stood looking at the pair of baby wooden shoes.

Presently I realized that some one was standing beside me. I knew it was the real estate man, and so I switched the topic I felt he might broach to that of the wooden shoes. I discovered that if I wanted to talk about wooden shoes, all well and good. The gentleman told me all about them—how they were made, in what countries they were worn, and of virtues they possessed in spite of progress that had been made in the shoe industry.

Learning Lithuania.

From shoes we drifted to the subject of Lithuania, which, I learned, was now independent of Russian control, having set up a government of its own. It was larger than Denmark, though having a smaller population.

Somehow I began to like Lithuania. I no longer felt myself a stranger along the street. I had not been asked what I wanted. My attention had not been called to nearby real estate bargains. The atmosphere of the place caused the card in my pocket to glow. I learned that Lithuania had a population of four and a half million people, that there were in Chicago one hundred thousands persons from there, and ten Lithuanian parishes.

The girl at the typewriter called the boss' attention to his luncheon engagement. So he started to put on his coat and hat, but hesitated to explain to me that the amber in the beads in the window had come from the Baltic sea.

Then the thought struck him that maybe I would be interested in some Lithuanian coins and he hunted through his desk, to return with a "fifty centu piece," a "penki centaj," and a "vienas litas."

He even left the small coins on the counter while he went to answer the telephone in a language I couldn't understand. They say money speaks any language. These coins he had shown me didn't speak as loudly, perhaps, as American money, but the card in my pocket was interested only in a something that was entirely aside from any tinge of commercialism. If politeness paid, it was well enough, but the card sought the sort of thing which costs but little and means so much—courtesy that greases the wheels of an existence so apt to be filled with friction.

Cards and More Cards.

When the man returned, I asked him if he had any picture postal cards of Lithuania. He smiled at me a bit dubiously. He doubted my interest in the cards, and I thought to myself that the incident was about to be closed. But I was mistaken. My good friend went and unlocked the safe and brought from it three little booklets that I saw he prized highly. He didn't want to part with them, he explained, but I could look at them.

It was when he did this that I asked the man who had lifted my spirits out of the dull rut of the day for his name. I wanted it, I told him, so I could write on the magic card. It was Paul P. Baltutis, 3327 South Halsted street. I became acquainted with them all, then—with Justin Chilaushas, the salesman, and Josephine Kataushas, the stenographer.

"The politeness reporter!" gasped Josephine. "Who would have thought it? I've read all of his stories and I thought I would know just what he looked like."

I didn't press Josephine as to whether or not she was disappointed in my appearance. I wanted nothing to spoil what, for me, had been such a pleasant day.

A SHORT STORY

Hiram Hayseed lived on a farm. He was well educated, having read every mail order catalogue in existence, and his home contained a radio and all them gosh-durned things! He had heard a lot about the hard boiled citizens of Chicago, but he was rather skeptical. Yup, he doubted whether the town was as tough as the newspaper items made it appear.

"Gol darn it, I'll go an' see for myself!" says he, so he boarded a train one afternoon and breezed into Chicago about 9 p. m. Hiram stepped out of the depot, walked over to the curb and signaled a pirate gas wagon.

"Take me to the corner of State an' Madison streets," says Mr. Hayseed.

Now the depot was only six blocks from the above named spot, but the taxi bandit passed through North Chicago twice and South Chicago three times in order to get there. The bad news amounted to $18.75. Our hero crawled out of the burglar bus and walked around for a while looking at all the bright lights. He decided that he was hungry so he trotted into a night club and ordered a mess of ham and eggs. The bill was $8 plus a two buck cover charge. He handed the waiter ten berries. The waiter thanked him, but slipped him a dirty look. It cost Hiram four bits to get his hat back from Miss Golddigger in the check room. Then he went out and mingled with the crowds on the street. Pretty soon he discovered that he had lost his watch.

"By golly, I'm gettin' real careless," says he to himself, so he walked around looking for it on the sidewalk but he didn't find it.

Just then a nice looking girl stumbled against him.

"O, excuse me," says she, "but I just couldn't help stumbling because I feel terribly weak. I ain't had nothin' to eat since this morning."

"Well, by cracky, nobody can ever say that Hiram Hayseed refused to feed a maiden in distress!" says our hero. The girl knew where there was a nice quiet place on a side street, so they went there. She sure ordered a queer meal for a famished mama! She squawked for a pair of pretzels and a gin highball. Then she ordered a highball without the pretzels, after which she ordered a pack of cigarets and two more highballs. The bill amounted to sixteen dollars. Then the poor girl discovered that she didn't have carfare home, so she borrowed ten bucks off Mr. Hayseed and left him, after promising to mail him the money. After she had went, Hiram felt for his diamond tie pin. It wasn't there, so he knew he must have left it home.

Well, our hero walked up and down the side streets for the next two or three hours, looking for adventure. He met a nice gentleman who sold him a fifty dollar diamond ring for fifteen bucks. The gentleman needed the money, but there wasn't any pawnshops open at that hour, so he let Mr. Hayseed have the gem. The gentleman wiped a couple of tears from his eyes and made Hiram promise to sell it back to him some day for fifty dollars.

By this time dawn was beginning to break, so Mr. Hayseed decided to go home. He climbed into another goofy looking taxi and went to the depot. The cab bill amounted to eleven berries.

"Aw, I knew it was the bunk!" grinned Hiram to himself. "This town is tame! Hell, I've been running around alone all night an' I didn't see even one robber!"

We hereby continue our practice of asking our readers a few questions in order to let them test their intelligence. Here they are, fellows:

1. What famous man is responsible for the following quotation: "You can fool some people all of the time; you can fool all the people some of the time; but you can't fool a horsefly?"
2. How many of our Popular Song Writers who rave about "dear old Dixie" have ever been south of Peoria, Illinois, and what was his name?
3. Name a foreign country (just south of the United States) which is probably wondering what the hell William Randolph Hearst is talking about.

We have just uncovered some dirt on a gentleman named Rip Van Winkle. You know the story—he went up into the mountains and met a flock of little midgets. The midgets had a big keg of beer and they was playing Nine-Pins. Rip Van Winkle didn't come home until twenty years afterwards, and he claimed he had been asleep all that time. It's the bunk. We have gone into the matter thoroughly and have discovered that these midgets were a lost tribe of Scotchmen. Rip hadn't been asleep at all. He had just stuck around waiting for some one to offer him a drink.

CAUSE FOR ASTONISHMENT.

She had been a cook in all sorts of houses, both large boarding establishments and small private residences, and had often noticed how much more quarreling and bickering there usually was in the latter than in the former.

At last she struck a house where all was peace.

"I suppose, ma'am, these young ladies and gentlemen are really all your own children?" she asked her mistress one day.

"Certainly they are, Mary," replied the astonished mistress. "Why do you ask?"

"Well, ma'am, nobody would have thought it. They're just as polite to one another as if they were complete strangers!"—London Tid-Bits.

FAMOUS WOMEN of CHICAGO

MRS. JOHN ALDEN CARPENTER.

DAUGHTER of generations of Chicagoans and born to wealth, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter has spent her energies in movements for the development of the city's artistic side. Her skill as an interior decorator has been called upon on many occasions and she has gladly lent her talent, especially to programs with charity making demands. The Arts club and the Scribblers club have found her always active in their cause. It was her skill that was responsible for the interior decoration of the Auditorium. In fact, Chicago is well sprinkled with her handiwork.

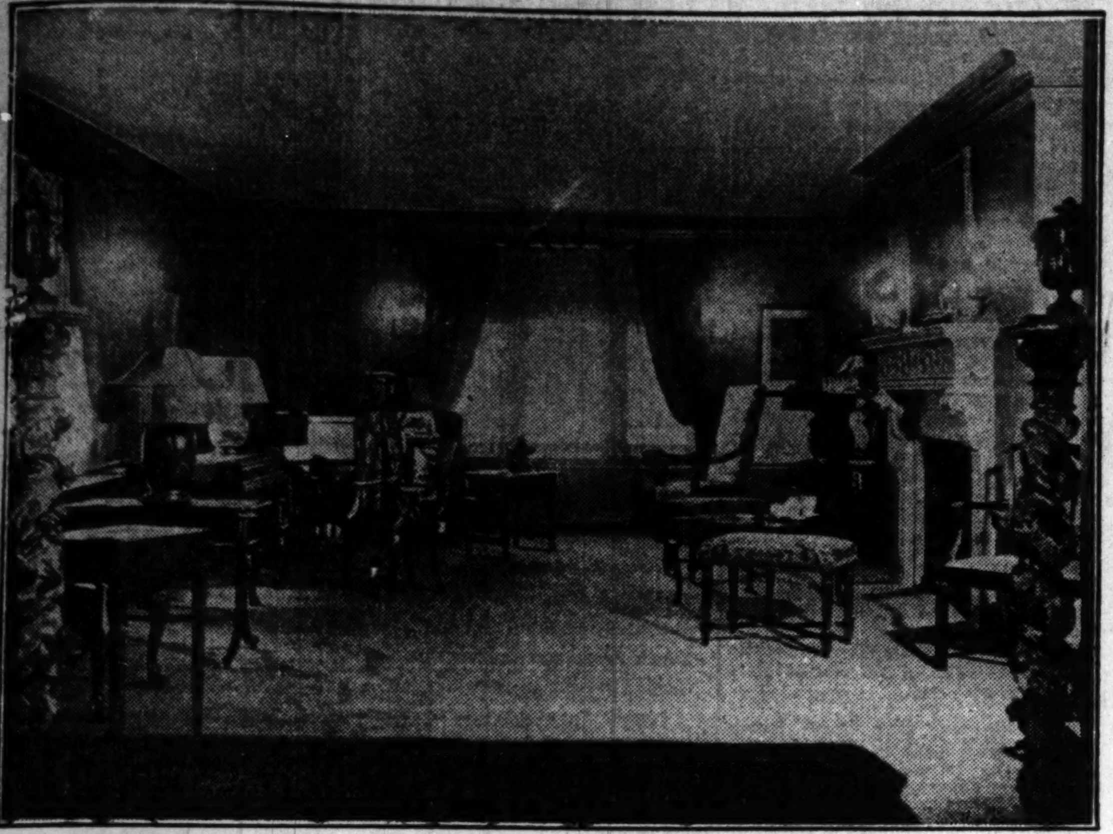
Making the Home Harmonious — Camera Studies of Well-Arranged Apartments in Various Sections

CHARACTER IN A LIVING ROOM



SEVERAL types of furniture are combined to give a harmonious effect to the living room at 3800 Sheridan road. Gold colored walls, gold and blue hangings, and a deep gold carpet add warmth to the dignity of the handsome pieces of furniture. The lamp shades, in tones of green, rose, and soft blue, provide color contrast.

RED AND BEIGE IN LIVING ROOM

method of rating all homes entered. The list of judges will be announced soon.

The Committee Personnel.

The points to be observed in judging are being worked out now by members of the general committee in charge of the contest. The committee is as follows:

Mrs. Leeds Mitchell of the Association of Housekeeping Centers.

Mrs. Constant Church Hopkins, chairman of the American Home department of the Illinois Federation of Woman's clubs.

Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, president of the Chicago Housewives league.

Andre Rebori, well known architect.

Dudley Crafts Watson, extension lecturer for the Art Institute.

Holmes Onderdonk, manager of THE TRIBUNE's building department.

Announcement will be made next Sunday concerning the time when judging will commence. Ample notice will be given of each intended visit.

Your Own Taste?

Prominent among the questions asked last week was whether contestants living in hotels could enter the contest. The test here is whether the home represents the taste of the contestant, and thus represents her skill in homemaking. Quarters rented furnished are not eligible.

Another question asked is whether it will be possible to enter now and have time in which to carry through plans for redecorating before the home is judged. This question need cause no worry to any one. The rules provide that homes will be judged on the skill displayed with the means available; and if the regular spring cleaning and redecorating has not been done, due allowance will be made for that. The judges know that no house can get through a winter without wear and tear.

Contestants who are able to do their spring cleaning and redecorating now will have time in which to do so before the judges visit them, but those who find it inconvenient at present will be under no handicap.

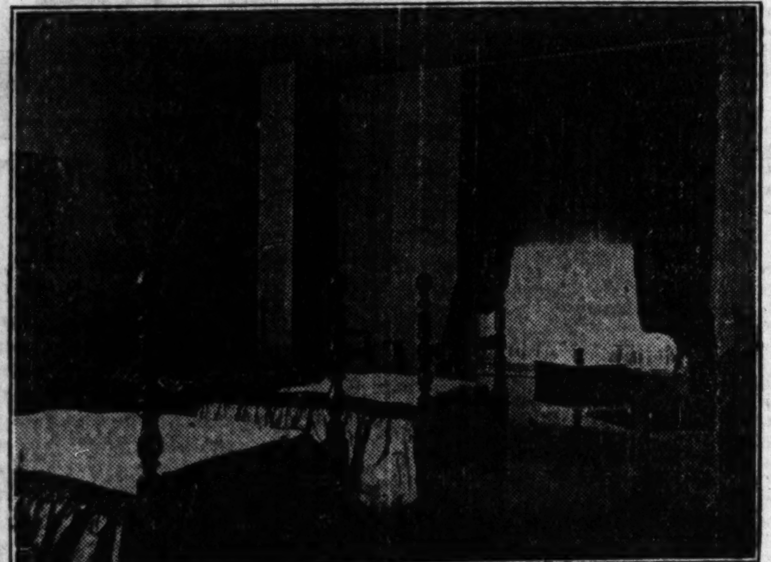
Do It Now!

So, all that is necessary for you to enter the contest is to put your name and address and telephone number on one of the coupons and mail it in to the Home Harmonious Contest, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Aside from that, the only further requirement is that you receive a visit from the judges, at an appointed time.

The rules insure every one an equal chance. Thep rizes will go to those who do best with the means available, whether ample or modest. It is just a question of how skillful and ingenious a homemaker you are; and surely you are willing to match your efforts against those of your friends.

So, fill out the coupon now and mail it to THE TRIBUNE Harmonious Contest today.

A CHARMING GUEST ROOM



THE soft tones of the maple furniture in the guest room at 3800 Sheridan road are charmingly set off by the hangings of bright glazed chintz, which material is repeated in the pillow covers over the taffeta spreads. A dressing table and highboy are important pieces which do not show in the picture.

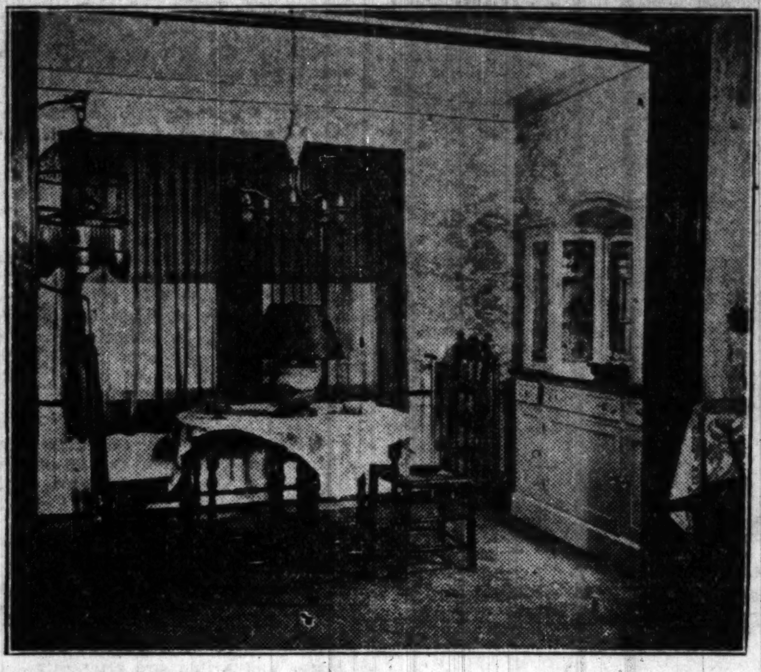
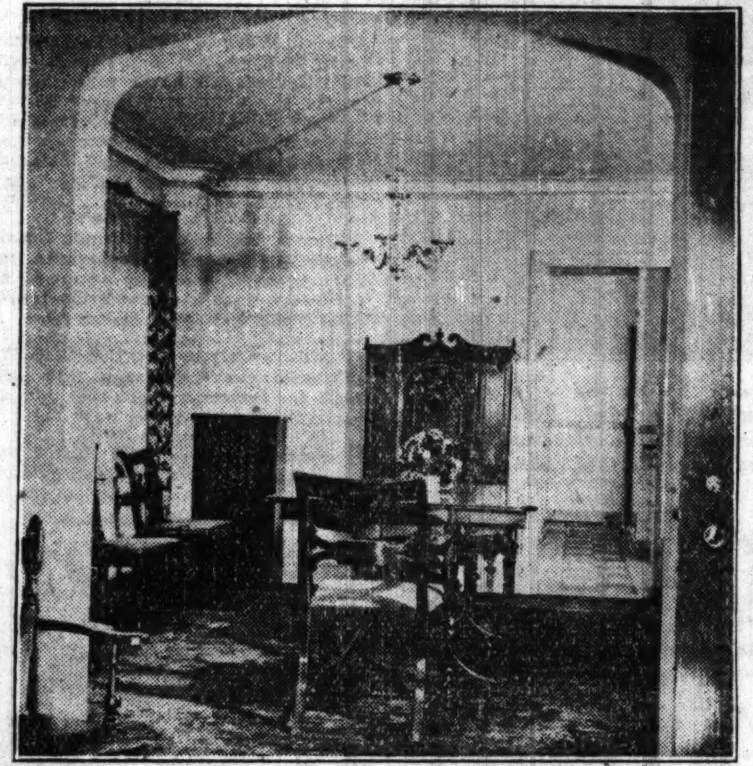
FOR SMALL DINING ROOM



THE problem of the small dining room is solved with room to spare by the use of a gateleg table and simple bottomed chairs in this Palmer square home. The scenic paper and blue woodwork add to the spaciousness of this small room.

CHEERFUL DINING ROOM

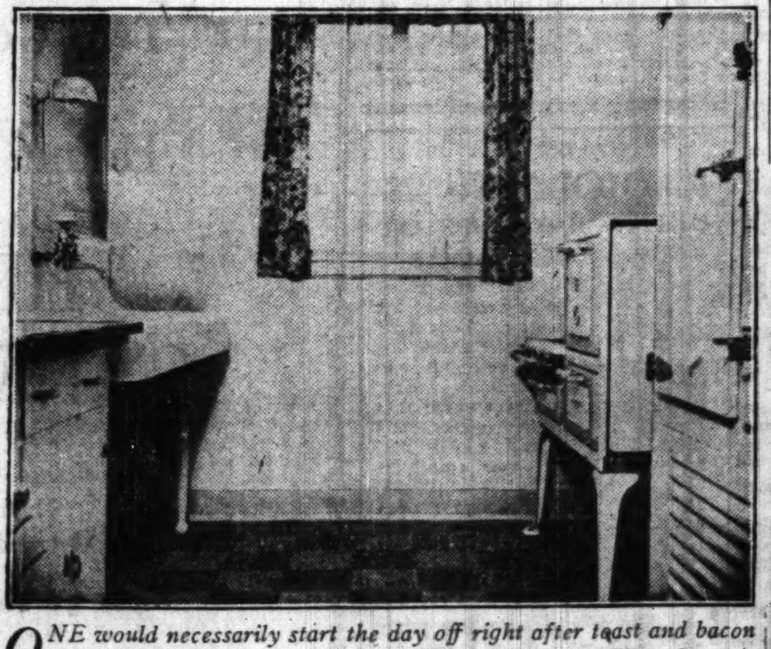


BOTH dignity and cheeriness are apparent in this dining room of the south side apartment. A Chinese rug sponsors the color combination of blue and green, which finds added expression in the hand blocked linen draperies over net glass curtains and in the sprigged chair sets. A floral picture against one wall adds to the whole. The furniture is walnut.

COLONIAL BEDROOM

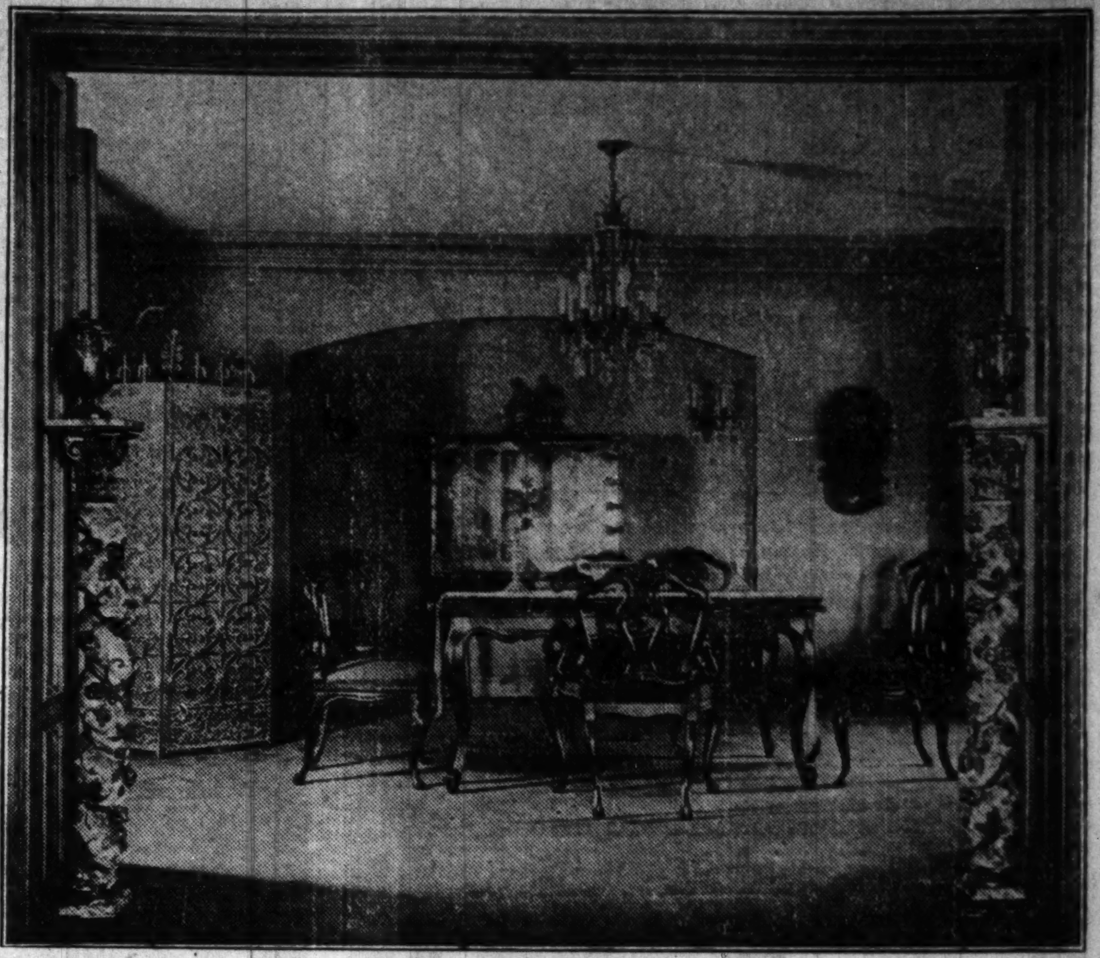
THE severity necessary to colonial furniture makes for a pleasant, if not frilly, bedroom in this Palmer square apartment. The candlewick spread, hooked rugs, a walnut chest of drawers, and a ladder-back chair combine in harmonious effect. The curtains are blue gauze.

IN A SPOTLESS KITCHEN



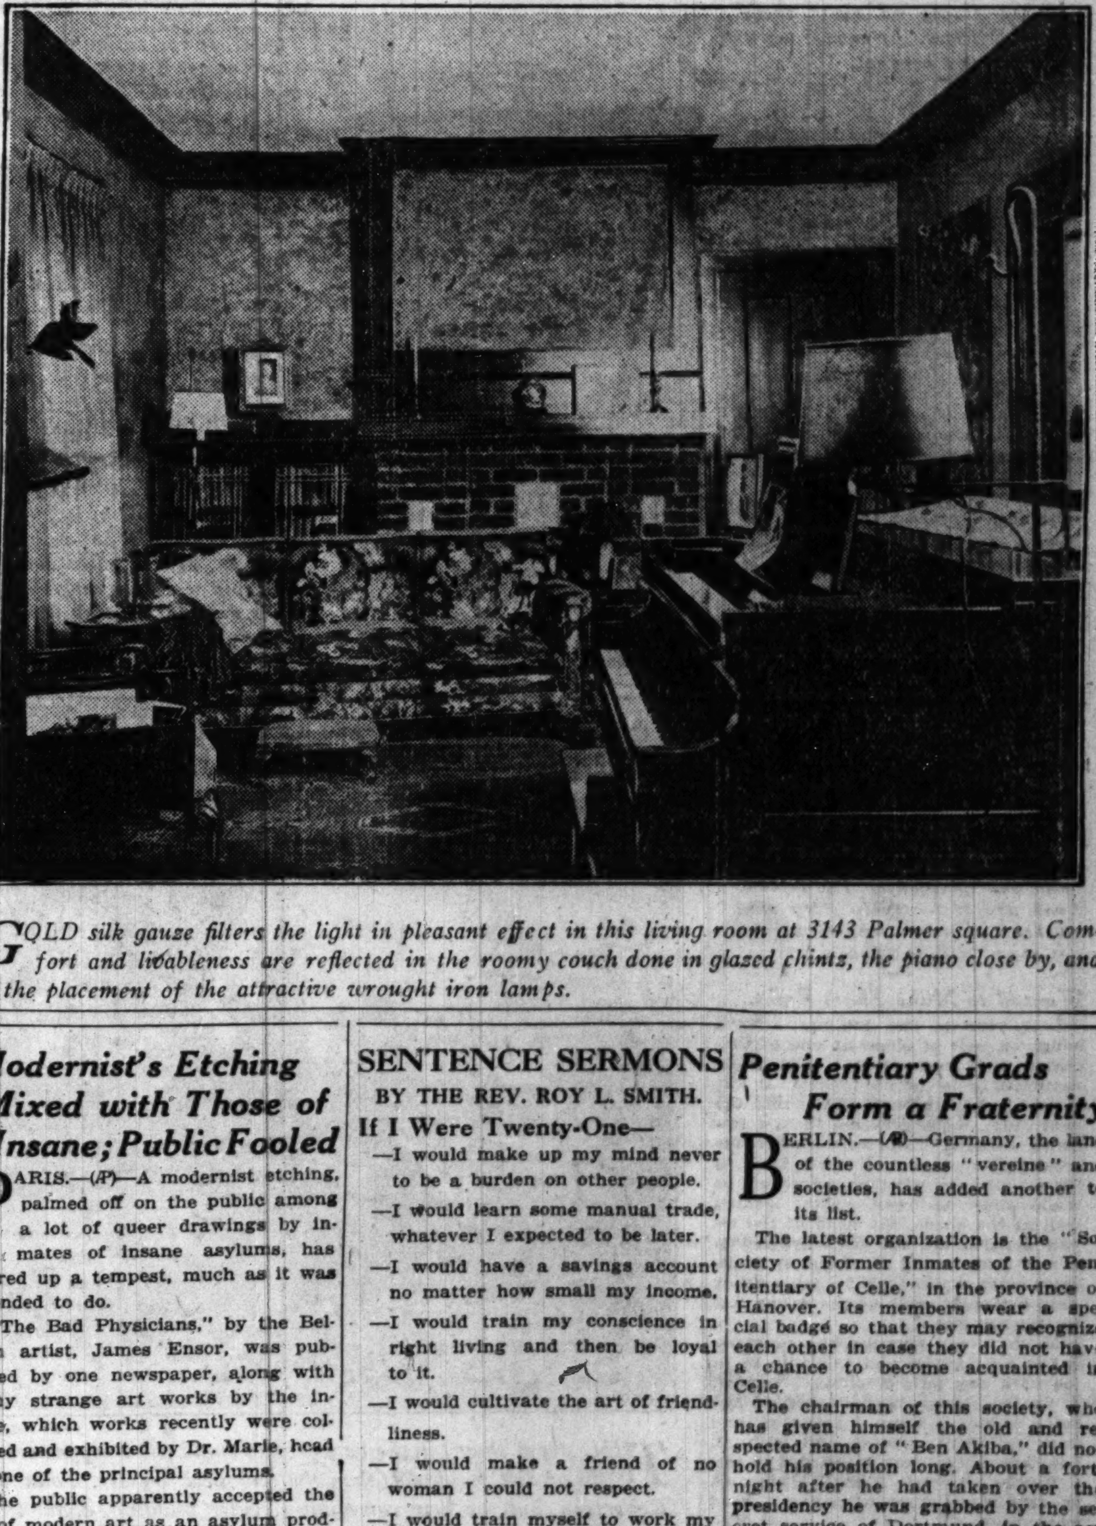
ONE would necessarily start the day off right after toast and bacon in this spotless kitchen out on Jeffery avenue. The floor is squares of cork in two shades of green, the woodwork and walls of the same tone, and the simple curtain of gay cretonne. The tools of the housewife's trade are all of white enamel.

DARING DINING ROOM COLORS



BLACK, green, red, and gold are daringly yet effectively combined in the dining room of this north side model apartment. The piece is a black and gold Chinese cabinet, set into a niche and topped by a figurine of terra cotta. The red note is introduced in the chair seats and the background of the wrought iron screen. Green walls and carpet complete the whole. The pedestals, which are between the dining and living rooms, are topped by black urns.

PLEASING LIVING ROOM EFFECT



GOLD silk gauze filters the light in pleasant effect in this living room at 3143 Palmer square. Comfort and livableness are reflected in the roomy couch done in glazed chintz, the piano close by, and in the placement of the attractive wrought iron lamps.

Modernist's Etching Mixed with Those of Insane; Public Fooled

PARIS.—(AP)—A modernist etching, palmed off on the public among a lot of queer drawings by inmates of insane asylums, has stirred up a tempest, much as it was intended to do.

"The Bad Physicians," by the Belgian artist, James Ensor, was published by one newspaper, along with many strange art works by the insane, which works recently were collected and exhibited by Dr. Marie, head of one of the principal asylums.

The public apparently accepted the bit of modern art as an asylum product, or at least said nothing. Friends of Ensor, however, raised a fuss and denounced the joke.

Humorous critics repeatedly had suggested there was a strong similarity between some of the new art cults and the untrained "expressions" of the insane, but the modernists saw no humor in the situation.

Penitentiary Grads Form a Fraternity

BERLIN.—(AP)—Germany, the land of the countless "vereine" and societies, has added another to its list.

The latest organization is the "Society of Former Inmates of the Penitentiary of Celle," in the province of Hanover. Its members wear a special badge so that they may recognize each other in case they did not have a chance to become acquainted in Celle.

The chairman of this society, who has given himself the old and respected name of "Ben Akiba," did not hold his position long. About a fortnight after he had taken over the presidency he was grabbed by the secret service of Dortmund, in the act of opening a safe without keys."

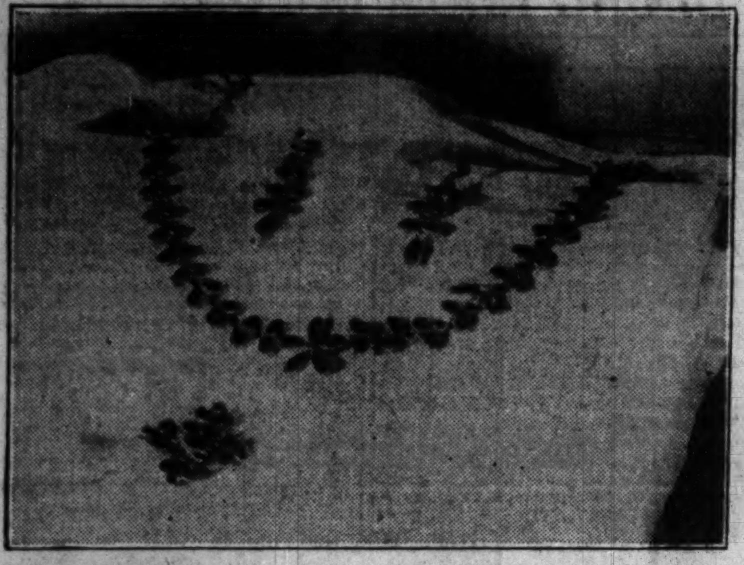
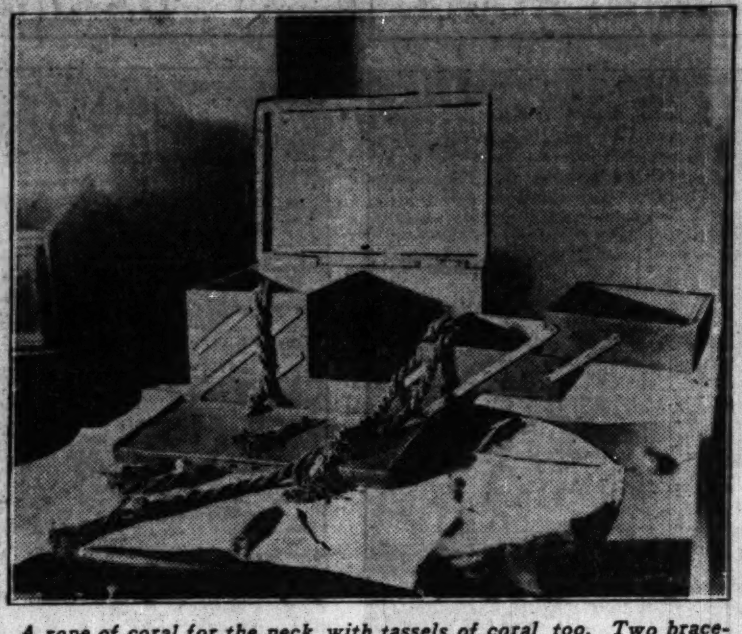
Antique Jewelry Is a Modern Fad

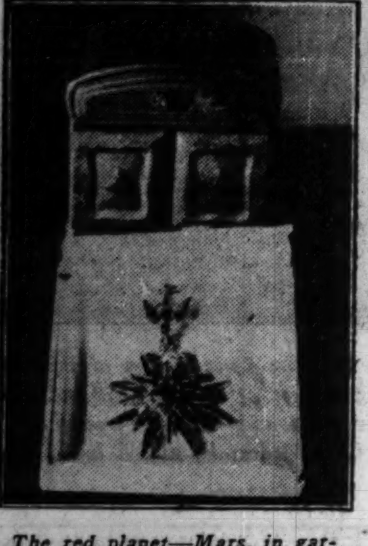
Smart Woman of Today Wears Her Grandmother's Gems



A set of old garnets! What a treasure for wear with the white chiffon evennig frock. Earrings, pin, and necklace are all the same color, each stone beautifully matched, and well under $200 for them all. They are more than a hundred years old.

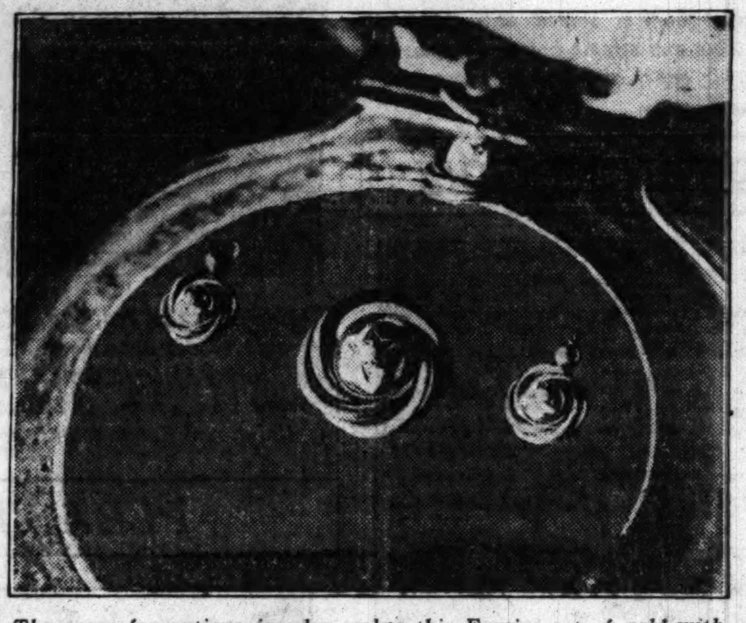


A rope of coral for the neck, with tassels of coral, too. Two bracelets and a pair of earrings. All are made of the finest beads and are a delightful watermelon color. They look as though they might have been stolen from a pirate.



The red planet—Mars, in garnets as beautiful in color as rubies, because the pendant was made in the days when they backed stones to make them more brilliant. It can be worn as a pin or a pendant.

Imagine the labor that went into the making of this chain of old agates. Each piece is exactly like the other, black with white stripes, and polished beautifully. A stunning accompaniment to the black and white costume.

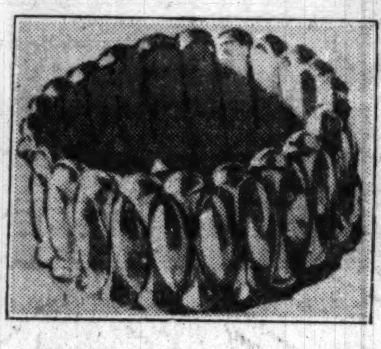


The craze for antique jewelry makes this Empire set of gold with blue enameled stars and pearl centers a real find. The large piece is a brooch, the two small ones are earrings, and the medium sized one is a pendant, but could be used as a clasp for pearls.

Among Victorian treasures this cross has a high place. It is of beautiful design in gold set with turquoises, which are now the latest desire of every woman's heart since Paris has acclaimed them.

A gold necklace of a rare sort because the workmanship is practically obsolete. Each link is made separately and then put together by hand. It is not heavy and is old gold in color and metal.

This beautiful old brooch is like a flower, it is so delicately worked. It looks like some of the gold work on early Italian altar vessels. In the center are some amethysts of an especially lovely pale color.



A heavy gold bracelet of fine workmanship. It was made about eighty years ago. It is somewhat flexible and the design looks as if it might have been inspired by some of the goldsmiths of the middle ages.

Shoppers' Service Tales

Write us a brief note telling what kindly deed in store or shop won your patronage. The Tribune will pay $2 for every story published. Address Shoppers' Service Contest, Chicago Tribune.

Wanted to Make Them Right.

Last year at the January sales I bought a pair of shoes at one of Chicago's prominent stores. Not being particularly in need of them at the time, I put them away until about the next July. After wearing them a few times I found they were rather uncomfortable, so I took them back to the store to see whether they could be made easier to wear. After looking well at the shoes, the head of the repair department told the store manager nothing could be done to make them more comfortable for me, as they were evidently made on the wrong last to suit my feet.

Much to my surprise the manager called a salesman and told him to fit me with any pair of shoes I wanted. I finally chose another pair of the same value as those I returned, and with no extra expense and with all courtesy, these were forwarded to me.

Needless to say, I shall always go to this same store whenever I need new shoes. M. F.

Showed Understanding.

One day my sister offered to treat me to a soda, so we went into a shop near a movie theater. After the waitress had taken our order, sister discovered she had left her coin purse in her other handbag at home, so she rushed over to the fountain and told the proprietor she would have to cancel the order, giving the reason.

To her astonishment he smilingly said, "You may have your soda and pay me the next time you come to a show."

It was the first time she had been in the shop and I had been there but once, but as he had saved us from a most embarrassing moment we decided that such courtesy deserved more of our trade. A. M. G.

Courtesy Plus.

Recently I wore a scarf made of an unusual pattern and color of crêpe de chine. A friend admired it, and asked me to buy the required length for her and to charge and send it out to her. On going to the silk department in one of our big stores, I found a sale in progress and all material of the kind I wanted had been taken to the stock room to make space for this special sale. The floorman was most courteous, and took note of the pattern and color, and assured me he would attend to the matter as soon as the silks were brought back to stock. Since it was only a small sale, I greatly appreciated the fact that he did send the silk in a short time. Such service gives one confidence and is an inducement to buy all one needs in this store. I. M. W.

A Kindly Helper.

We were strangers in Chicago and were buying a baby's crib at one of the loop stores. We were paying more than we really wanted to for it.

Just as my husband was handing the clerk the money the head of the department came up, telling us that if we wished she would have the slip dated two days later and send the crib C. O. D., as on that day there would be a sale, enabling us to get it $5 cheaper.

Needless to say, we shop there whenever we can. A. D. H.

Generosity Appreciated.

We had been trading at a combined grocery and meat market. When my sister fell ill it was necessary for us to buy a marrow bone every day to make soup for her. The owner of this store said he could not sell us the bone only, but it was necessary for us to take the meat also.

As we had no use for the meat, we tried a different butcher and he was kind enough to let us have the bone without the meat. More than that, he saved us one every day and gave it to us for nothing.

Needless to say, we now give him our entire meat trade. M. C. H.

Deserving of Patronage.

Several years ago I purchased a set of furniture from a small furniture house near the loop. I had it delivered by express and, when it came, I found it to be the wrong set.

I was frantic because we were entertaining out of town guests that night. I called the store up and told them my troubles. They immediately hired a private truck and within three hours had exchanged the furniture besides paying both express charges.

Now, when friends ask for a good place to buy furniture I always advise them to go to this place that has given me such courteous treatment. W. E. B.

STARTING THINGS RIGHT

THE steam shovel in the background could lift a bigger scoopful of dirt, no doubt, than the one held by Dr. John Dill Robertson, but the new community center building, about to be erected on the site, will mean much to Austin and it is fitting that proper ceremonies launch the project. George J. Dehn stands at the left. The others, left to right, are Frank A. Bentley, Edward H. Fox, P. D. Castle, E. G. Snodgrass, and F. W. Savage. The social center building is to be at Lake street and Parkside avenue, Austin. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Man's Waist Line Moves Up; Plaits Decreed by Tailors

LONDON.—(AP)—Man's waist line has gone up a notch. The idea is to give the tailors more opportunity to display their art at plaiting.

All the London tailors are now pleating trousers, especially for the younger bloods.

Every perfectly good pair of trousers should have plaits round the waist band, aver the tailors, as the pleats tend to give a good "hang" to the trousers and an appearance of fullness which is so much desired.

As to the question of the high waist line, the Savile row tailors point out that if the jacket has three buttons the use of the center button only will enhance this effect. As a consequence the center button alone of the younger generation is buttoned, while the others are free.

Trousers remain about the same length at the bottom, being generally turned up, with a width of eighteen to nineteen inches.

A FINANCIAL WIZARD.

Philanthropist—"What would you do with a nickle if I gave you one?"

Hobo [sarcastically]—"Get a new suit, mister, an' some supper, an' a night's lodgin', an' breakfast, an' dinner tomorrow."

Philanthropist—"My good fellow, here's a quarter. Go and support yourself the rest of your life."—Vancouver Province.

A BOOMERANG.

"How do you come by that black eye, George?"

"O, our Jersey cow has a playful habit of flicking her tail while I'm milking her, so yesterday I tied a brick on the end of it to keep it down!"—Northern Daily Telegraph.

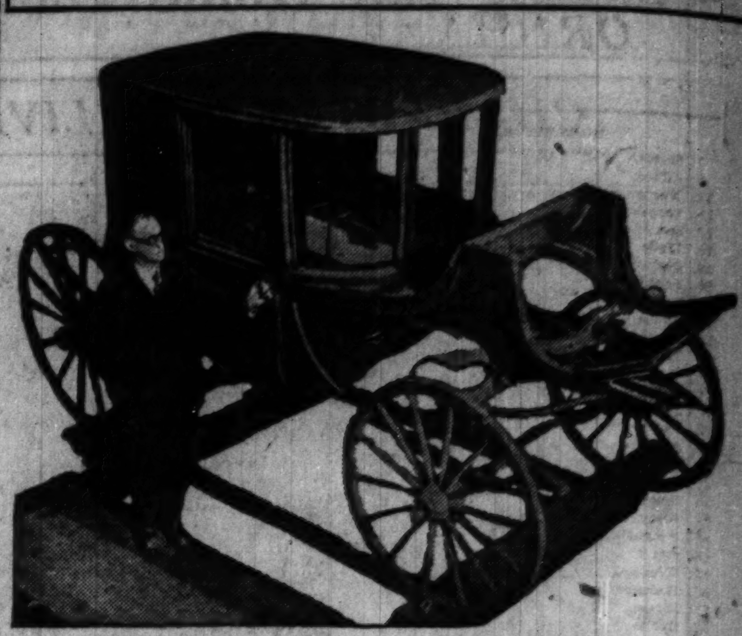
THEY KNEW LINCOLN



JAMES H. SCHEEL, 305 North Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, has come to the Chicago Historical society museum to stand beside the Lincoln carriage. When he was a boy of 14, playing tag on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington, the carriage, in which Mrs. Lincoln was driving at the time, struck Scheel as he plunged, unwittingly, in front of the wheels. The vehicle halted and Scheel was carried to his home. Mrs. Lincoln and Tad visited him while he was laid up with his injuries, and later the President found him a job under Secretary of War Stanton, which he held until the close of the war. ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

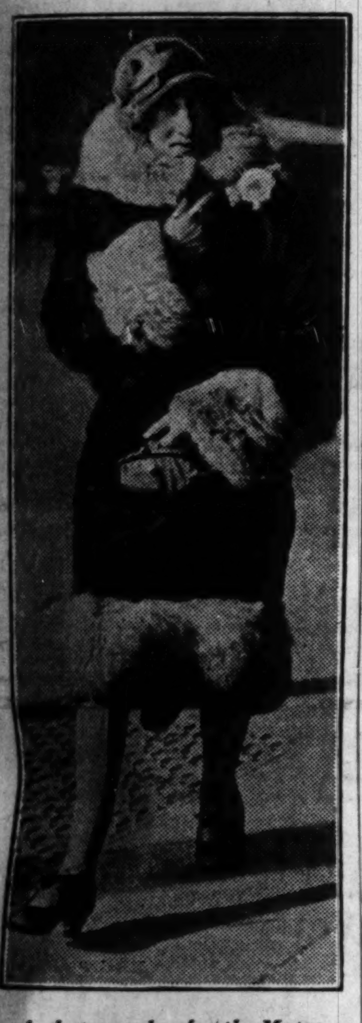
Free Pictures!



A photographer for the Metropolitan Section snapped this picture at 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue, probably without his subject knowing she was being photographed. If this girl will bring in this clipping we'll present her with a fine sepia print of the picture, neatly incased in a folder. If she will phone the picture editor first, he'll have the photograph waiting for her.

Birth Rate Shows a Decline; Blame Later Marriage

LONDON.—(AP)—Decline in the birth rate among the population of London's east side is attributed partly to the fact that young Jewish couples are not marrying at such early ages as formerly, says D. Tscherniakoff, secretary of the Jewish Health Organization of Great Britain.

There is a tendency toward a lower birth rate among the general population of western Europe, Mr. Tscherniakoff says in further explanation of the decline. He attributes the decrease in early marriage to the financial handicap of the times, the young men as a rule not making as much money as formerly.

"Among the Jews specifically there is another factor which strengthens these tendencies," says the health society secretary. "It is the slackening, among certain sections of Jews, of the strong hold which religion asserted over them, particularly with regard to its view on the sanctity of family life."

Dr. D. L. Thomas, medical officer to the Stepney council, in the Whitechapel district, East London, calculates that, whereas the birth rate among the Jews was between 30 and 40 per thousand of the population prior to the war, it is now down to 13 per thousand.

"The truth of the matter is that Jewish people are going in for smaller families," Dr. Thomas says in a report.

Playing by Professor Breaks Down Reserve

BERLIN.—(AP)—To dispel the habitual atmosphere of frigid reserve between Prussians and Bavarians prevailing at the recent inauguration of the new Prussian legation in Munich, Prof. Joseph Pembaur, the eminent pianist, was asked to play.

When the deafening applause following the virtuoso's rendering of Liszt's legend, "St. Francis Walking Upon the Waters," had subsided the Prussian premier, Otto Braun, walked over to Prof. Pembaur, warmly shook his hand, and exclaimed:

"You surely must be a Bavarian—none other could have pounded a Prussian piano so effectively."

$5,000 Offered for Anti-Dust Device

BERLIN.—(AP)—A prize of $5,000 for the best contrivance for neutralizing the pernicious effects of dust in mines has been offered by the Prussian ministry of commerce and trade. The prize will be donated either in full or split up into parts in the event of several acceptable devices being submitted.

REVISED VERSION.

The seven ages of man have been well tabulated by somebody or other on an acquisitive basis, thus:

First age—Sees the earth.
Second age—Wants it.
Third age—Hustles to get it.
Fourth age—Decides to be satisfied with only about half of it.
Fifth age—Becomes still more moderate.
Sixth age—Now content to possess a six by two strip of it.
Seventh age—Gets this strip.

THE RIVER IN WINTER

Half of German Tax Goes to Pay for War

BERLIN.—(AP)—More than half of Germany's revenue for 1928 is appropriated for expenditure resulting from the world war, which ended ten years ago.

War pensions and allowances account for 33.6 per cent, and reparations payments absorb 23 per cent, a total 56.6 per cent.

And this is likely to last for another generation.

MARRIED HE WAS.

The burglar had entered the house as quietly as possible, but his shoes were not padded and they made some noise.

He had just reached the door of the bed room when he heard some one moving in bed as if about to get up, and he paused.

The sound of a woman's voice floated to his ears.

"If you don't take off your shoes," it said, "there is going to be trouble, and a whole lot of it. Here it's been raining for three hours, and you dare tramp over my carpets with muddy shoes on. Go down stairs and take them off."

He went downstairs without a word, but he didn't take his shoes off.

Instead, he went out into the night again, and the pal who was waiting for him saw a tear glisten in his eye.

"I can't rob this house, it reminds me of home."—Youth's Companion.

British Admirals Serve as Hosts to Enlisted Men

PORTSMOUTH, England. — (AP)— The battleship Nelson was the scene of a tea party which has written a new chapter to British naval and social history.

English newspapers say it is the first time two admirals invited the crew of ordinary rank to such a function.

The hosts were Vice Admiral Sir Hubert Brand, commander in chief of the Atlantic fleet, and Admiral Sir Osmond de B. Brock, commander in chief of the Portsmouth command.

The guests were both men and officers, without distinction of rank, who served in the steam frigate Raleigh during the commission from 1885 to 1887.

Sir Hubert and Sir Osmond were midshipmen of the watch together in the Raleigh. Their idea in giving the tea was to provide a reunion of the men who served together 40 years ago, and Sir Hubert offered his flagship as the most fitting place for the event.

CHICAGO BACHELORS

ROBERT H. ALLERTON.

HOW Robert H. Allerton has managed to remain single is one of those things that can't be explained. Perhaps the imposing sum of his eligible qualities has made the girls too anxious. Besides being affable and charming, characteristics which make him a most desirable dinner guest, he belongs to all the most exclusive clubs in town, including the Casino, the University, Saddle and Cycle, Racquet, and the Arts club, and is one of the city's most important patrons of the arts. He is a trustee of the Art institute, and recently the Agnes W. Allerton galleries for textiles and decorative arts, given to the institute in memory of his stepmother, were opened. You can't go very far in the institute without encountering some of the many gifts he has made. He has also made numerous trips abroad to select works of art for the institute. And that's to say nothing of his stunning estate at Monticello, Ill., where he has entertained large and highly enjoyable house parties. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

FINDS BEACH UNCROWDED

NOW'S the time to go bathing if you want the lake all to yourself, figures Paul D. Seghers, 2445 East 73rd street, shown without a shiver as he returns from his regular morning dip. Says he hasn't missed his daily swim since last May. Water wasn't as if it had come out of a hot faucet that one morning when the mercury registered eight below, and there have been other dawns when the bathing suit has frozen to his skin but, figuratively, Paul hasn't gotten "cold feet" yet. Raised in the polar regions? Nope. Down in balmy New Orleans. No matter what the clime, he insists, a feller's got to keep fit. Only concession he makes to the weather is that, as soon as he gets out of the water, he runs all the way home. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Bargains! Bargains!

Send us a short and snappy letter telling the how, why, and wherefore of the best bargain you ever struck. We'll pay $2 for every letter published. Address Bargains, Chicago Tribune.

Where There's a Will.

I wanted a black lace hat, which cost $7 while I had but $4. One noon I went to one of the department stores to try on hats, thinking I could copy one at less cost.

By good fortune the clerk who attended me had an interest in her work, and was so nice to me in bringing hats to try on that I did not have the heart to say, as I had intended, "I'll call again," but confessed to her that I didn't have enough money. She did not seem horrified, but brought the lace trimmed shapes, brought the flowers and ribbon of black velvet and arranged them just like the trimmed hats.

Then she said, "Now, as you have bought the materials here, we'll trim the hat free of charge." The hat, trimmings and all, came to just $4.

I was grateful to the clerk, who helped a 16 year old girl to have a lovely new hat. J. H.

Books "Thrown In."

I was pleased enough with my bargain when I purchased a charming old mahogany secretary, but it turned out to be even better than I expected. The old man from whom I bought it mentioned that he had a few books and would throw them in with the purchase. Being already crowded for lack room, I felt reluctant to accept what would probably be a lot of old trash, but rather than hurt the old gentleman's feelings by refusing I told him to send them along.

To my great surprise I found them to be a splendid lot, among them being a lovely old set of Dickens, beautifully bound, printed by Harper & Brothers in 1872, with over 100 exquisite engravings. I consider this alone worth what I paid for the desk. C. F. P.

A White Elephant Sale.

Years and years ago, before the war, the first White Elephant sale was held in an old stone residence on Michigan avenue. There the rich, who had so much of everything that they could give away bits of beauty of which they had grown tired, or which no longer fitted into their scheme of things, and the poor, who never had enough of any thing to fit together to make a scheme of things, met over the counters. Things and things! Such lovely things! There will never be another such assemblage of beautiful treasures placed within reach of those who love beauty but cannot always pay its price.

And such bargains! I had bought bookends of lovely wood, obviously an import, the design was so foreign, for a quarter; a lovely old runner of hand woven linen, cross-stiched, for 50 cents; a small tray of sandalwood, hand carved, for a quarter; a wall hanging for a dollar—when suddenly my eyes fell upon a framed Japanese print. And a duck of a print it was, too! But $10! But an inner hunch told me that if I would wait around until the end of the day and it had not been sold it would be mine for a dollar.

row. Just a door south, on the famous alley, was the old Globe, then owned by Mike McDonald, the famous gambler. Across the alley to the south was the Mail. Across the street were the Dispatch, Joe Dunlop's evening paper, and the Record and Daily News. Half a block to the north, on the corner of Washington and Fifth avenue, was the Times, then owned by Mayor Carter Harrison, the elder, and a half a block to the east, on Washington street, was John W. Scott's paper, the Herald. Two prosperous German papers, the Staats Zeitung, owned by Washington Hessing, and the Freie Presse, was also in the immediate neighborhood.

* *

Mother King's Famous Friends.

The new "King's" was much more pretentious than anything the mother and son had yet attempted. It was Charlie's restaurant as a matter of fact. Mother King was getting along in years and willingly passed up the business responsibility to her son, but she never failed to come in the evening and sit with her fancy work beside the cash box, talking with the people as they came and went.

She had been reluctant to leave the old place in "Newsboy's alley." It had come to have a sentimental attachment for her. There she had made some of the most prized friendships of her life, had made the acquaintance of men prominent not only in the local literary scene, but whose names were to become world famous. Eugene Field came regularly, and frequently left his check beside the cash box with a note "Till pay day." Men like Samuel J. Medill, Victor Lawson, Charles Dana, James W. Scott she came to know well. James Whitcomb Riley had been a visitor, and so had the dashing Richard Harding Davis.

Bill Nye she knew and talked to often. Many a local society leader might have envied her that, for they had tried to lionize Nye when he came out in 1890, first, because he was one of the foremost humorists of the day, and second because he came of a "fine old family down east."

This is the way Nye spoke of his ancestors. "Family? Well, I guess! I traced our people back to the European police courts and even beyond that, discovering at last in France our coat of alms; but I lost it from the line where it was airing last summer."

* *

The Whitechapel Club.

It was natural that notables should drift into King's, even though it was a modest bit of a place, for the alley got to be a kind of rendezvous of the nifties of the nineties. Just down a short distance from the restaurant, for instance, was the Whitechapel club. There was scarcely a famous person who came this way between 1889 and 1895 who was not a guest of the Whitechapelers. The club was one of the most interesting ever formed in the middle west. It had a motley membership made up of cab drivers, poets, undertakers, actors, lawyers, physicians and newspaper men. It is said that the only question raised of a man submitted for membership was "Is he a good fellow and will he loosen up?"

Most of the Whitechapelers who patronized King's in the alley continued their patronage after the restaurant was moved to Fifth avenue, but with the larger quarters, the more diversified trade, the place naturally lost some of its character.

* *

Back to the Old King's.

However, after midnight, when the papers have gone to press, King's is still the same old King's. Let's pretend we're young bloods about town in 1895. We've been to a show—McVicker's, probably, and we wander down Madison to Wells. We'll go into King's, have a look 'round and eat something. There are two rooms opened into one with a large entrance door in the center. On one side are tables only; on the other, tables and a horseshoe lunch counter. We'll take the lunch counter side because that's where the reporters come.

That good looking man with the flashing smile who bows to us as we go in with the manner of a grand duke is Charlie King. His eyes dancing, merry, and he says something to us that makes us feel a little merry, too. "Anybody with a manner like that should be a politician," you say. A plump, black haired woman smiles at us over a rose bordered centerpiece she is making.

"No, thanks, Charlie, we'll just take a table clear in the back of the room," we say.

There is a congenial sound of tinkling of glasses, of clanking silver and a strongly pleasing odor of frying ham and of strong coffee. The linen is shining white; the silver still looks new—of course, the restaurant is only two years old.

* *

George Ade.

Plenty of people come in whom we don't recognize, but they are all probably important enough. Charlie talks to them as if they were sultans, and he—well, as if he were Mahomet's high priest. But here comes some one we know. A tall, lanky youth, wearing a low crowned Weber and Fields hat, a solemn expression on his face. He comes down and sits near us, deposits the hat on a clothes tree nearby, and studies the carte du jour with the gravity of a man about to make a momentous personal decision. That is George Ade, a night police reporter.

They will all be coming in now soon—all the night police reporters. "Night police reporters?" you query. "They must be hard boiled gentlemen." Well, let's see. Ade, of course, is one. So is the man just behind him—Arthur Sears Henning. And the dapper, urbane fellow with the correct clothes following was a night police reporter once, too. He is Percy Hammond. With Hammond, and somewhat contrasting with him, is a tall, gaunt figure of a man. His tie is a little askew. His clothes hang on him with the carelessness bespeaking one who cares little about such amenities as fashionable dress. He is more concerned with the vital things of life, such as good wining and dining. His name is Dick Little—yes, R. H. L. now.

The tables are beginning to fill up. There are so many around us we can't identify them all, but even with a hasty glance we can pick out the rest of the night police reporters. There are Charley Erbstein, Henry Barrett Chamberlin, Barney Mullaney, and just beyond them Brand Whitlock, James O'Donnell Bennett. The tall, thin man with the ink stained hands is John T. McCutcheon. The kindly looking fellow writing on the back of the menu card is Finley Peter Dunne. Too bad we can't read what is written there, because it is probably some side splitting yarn of his well known character, Mr. Dooley.

The clock hands fly along. The air is getting heavy with tobacco smoke. We wink at our waitress. She is remarkably responsive to the wink and she is a pretty little thing, too. (Most of the waitresses in King's are pretty.) We get our bill and go out.

Mother King smiles at us with a warm friendliness as we go and Charlie is hurrying to ask us if everything was quite all right. Remarkable man—Charlie.

* *

Charlie's Memory.

The night air outside hits our nostrils with a refreshing coolness. We walk along and talk about the Kings—especially of Charlie. He has a reputation of being a mixer, and no wonder! Anybody, however cold, would thaw before his simple, expansive personality. He is always gay, seems to have no problems at all of his own, or at least never mentions them, and talks to you about yours as if he had a direct personal concern in you. He never forgets a face, and once he has learned your name never forgets that, either. Maybe it is a petty little vanity in us to feel flattered when some one remembers us after only a fleeting acquaintance, but, petty or not, there are few of us who don't respond to it.

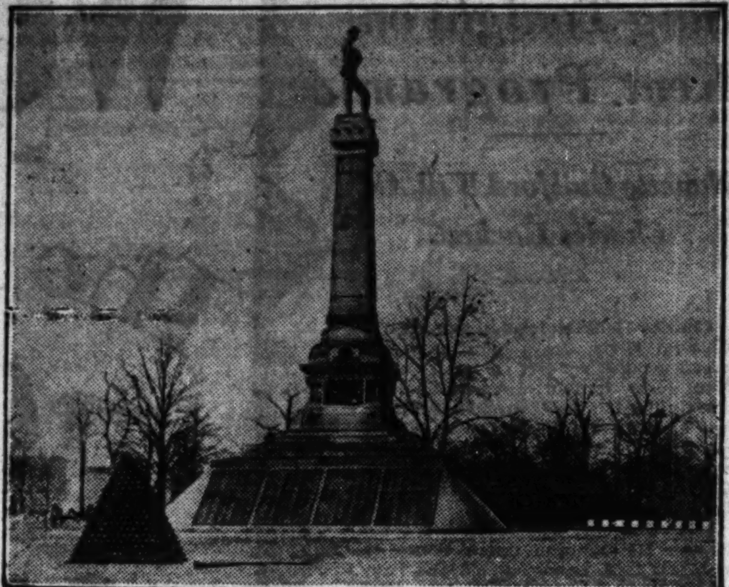
There is no question that the food at King's was good and the price was moderate. Many dined there who knew the intricate culinary perfection of Paris and compared the "chicken meuniere" of King's favorably with its counterpart in the old Parisian restaurants. But still the food and the price were not all. It was the genial friendliness of Charlie, greeting you at the door, that made you want to go back. Certainly it made the women want to go back. His laughing eyes caused many a feminine heart to flutter, and it was forever tantalizing to know he was a bachelor.

But he was a man's man, too. Men were constantly entreating him to come to banquets and parties "to liven things up." If there was an awkward lull in a conversation, Charlie would come to the rescue with a joke that would break the spell.

In January of 1901 he came down with typhoid pneumonia, and on the 25th he was dead. Few men have been more lamented. Streams of friends and acquaintances came to the funeral. Lots of complimentary things were said. Probably the most flattering was, "He was never known to be anything but pleasant."

The next installment of "The Race of Kings" will appear in next Sunday's Metropolitan section.

TO WEARERS OF THE GRAY



ON two acres of ground in Oakwoods cemetery stands this monument, erected by the Ex-Confederate association, Camp No. 8, of Chicago. Dedication took place in 1895, and in 1911 the United States government placed the bronze tablets giving the names of the 4,275 confederate soldiers and sailors who died in prison at Camp Douglas and whose bodies are buried nearby. The monument of Georgia granite is 45 feet high, and was made possible by funds subscribed by confederate veteran camps and citizens of Chicago. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Rosa Raisa to Sing on Radio Tomorrow Night

Will Be Guest Soloist in Family Party.

Rosa Raisa, prima donna of the Chicago Opera company, who will be the guest soloist tomorrow night in the family party program broadcast from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, brings to the radio audience one of the superbly artistic bits of salvage saved from the Russian maelstrom—a glorious, dramatic soprano voice. Born of wealthy Jewish parents in Bailystock, Poland, in 1893, Rosa Raisa passed through the tortures of Jewish persecution as her father's fortune became depleted, and finally escaped, after bitter hardships, to Naples, where she arrived as a young girl with nothing but a loaf of stale bread, a bundle of ragged clothing—and a voice.

Today she is one of the foremost sopranos of the concert and opera stage and occupies a distinctive position in the field of modern ingenue singers because of her type—that of a soprano of the old "grand style," like Nordica and Patti. But two decades of work and struggle lie behind her.

In Naples she abandoned the study of dentistry, which she had started with a cousin in Poland as her father's fortune waned, and fought her way to recognition as a singer under Madame Marchisio. After singing in Milan, Rome, and other Italian cities, she appeared at Covent Garden, London, and was instantly successful. Her voice attracted the attention of the great Campanini and it was he who first brought her to the United States.

The family program tomorrow night will have only two parts instead of three, as heretofore. The first part will include a symphony orchestra with Roderic Graham as conductor and Madame Raisa as soloist. The second part will feature a concert band under the leadership of Patrick Conway, with Madame Raisa in one group of two numbers. The entire program will be devoted to popular classics, ballads, and light opera numbers, and, in addition to W-G-N, will be broadcast over twenty-nine other stations from the studios of the National Broadcasting company.

The new president brings to his position the benefit of many years' experience in radio, being a pioneer in the field of radio broadcasting. Mr. Becker owns and operates amateur station 9HQ.

Mountaineers of India to Get Jazz Music Via Radio

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, Feb. 11.—Jazz music is to penetrate the hidden tracts of the Indian hills. A Bombay merchant has donated ten complete sets which are to be installed in the forests of Central India, seven among the Bhil tribes in the Salpura range, and three among the Khonds of the central provinces.

One set, equipped with a loud speaker, will be installed in the courtyard of the temple of Vindhya, where the mountain goddess of the Bhils is worshipped. The effect of latest jazz tunes coming through the ether, upon the dances performed before the shrine of the goddess, is being watched with considerable interest.

In the case of the Khonds, the donor has recognized their war like qualities in specifying that not jazz, but the soothing melodies of India be broadcast to them, so as not to excite their already overwrought temperaments.

Monthly Talks About Precious Stones at WLS

A novel series of radio talks on jewelry is being given over WLS throughout 1928. These are broadcast on the first Tuesday of every month by Emil M. Schmidt, well known authority on precious stones, who is taking up, each month, the birthstone of that month. A discussion of its origin, meaning, and how it should be set and worn, is followed by suggestions for gifts for occasions in that month, as well as correct costume jewelry for the time of the year, and any especially novel and timely news on jewelry.

Radio to Become Great Factor in Moving Trains

Engineer and Conductor on Freights Can Talk.

American railroads plan to go rapidly forward in the next five years in establishing radio communication for handling freight trains, R. H. Aishton, president of the American Railway association, has informed the federal radio commission.

Experiments in communication between the locomotive and caboose of a freight train and between the office and switch engine in a big railroad yard have indicated radio service is reliable and economical, Mr. Aishton told the commission.

The greater efficiency and safer handling of freight trains must necessarily result in a saving of time and consequent reduction in the handling cost of the nation's freight and the improvement of this service, he said.

Most Desirable Waves.

The devolpment of train radio communication, using low power tranmitters, has proceeded in the short wave band of 109 to 130 meters, G. T. Stanton, chairman of the radio committee of the railway association, said. Experiments have indicated that these wave lengths are the most desirable for train service, he added.

"This is due to the fact that the antenna is limited in length by conditions governing its mounting on the locomotive or caboose," Mr. Stanton said.

"The efficiency is very low, due to the high absorption of radiated energy by the steel mass of the locomotive and the steel parts of the caboose. Wave lengths substantially above this band would require antenna of such length as to be impossible of mounting upon railroad rolling stock, or would require loading to such an extent that the already inefficient radiation would be reduced."

Would Avoid Interference.

Any substantial increase in the wave length also would place this service near the lower limits of the broadcast band and might cause some interference, with broadcast receivers near the railroad right of way, Mr. Stanton asserted.

Attempts have been made to determine whether or not interference with broadcast programs can be caused by the train sets. A test was made recently at Richmond, Va., when an impromptu program was broadcast by the train transmitter for one hour.

Frequent announcements were made that this program was from the train, and all persons hearing the program were requested to report reception. Mr. Stanton says not a single report was received. Only one case of interference was reported, and upon investigation the set was found to be a regenerative receiver made in 1922. The voice from the train was faintly heard as the train passed within 300 feet.

Radio aids materially in the elimination of train delays occasioned by lack of communication and reduces the time consumed in performing switching operations, recalling flagmen and starting trains, Mr. Stanton declares. It also provides a means of notifying the engineman in cases of emergency to stop the train.

Organ Music Now Being Broadcast by New Method

Picking up the tones of an organ at their source is the latest improvement in the art of program broadcasting.

Instead of picking up the organ music from the studio in which the organ is located, a microphone is placed in each of the sound chambers and the sounds are thus picked up as they originate in the organ pipes. The echo of reverberating walls, which is one of the greatest causes of tone distortion, is eliminated by this placement of the microphone.

INSIDE THE LOUD SPEAKER

BY QUIN A. RYAN, W-G-N Announcer

DOGGONE those lectures that the announcers read off between orchestra offerings! You know:

"Good evening, ladies and gentlemen. This is station WASP, and tonight we are presenting Josef Meyerboomboom's famous Concerto in B still. Of all of Meyerboomboom's works—when he did work—this work is acclaimed as his greatest.

"Tonight, as the concert opens, you will hear a prolonged sizzling by the clarinets, which depicts the friars in the act of frying. The story, of course, is familiar to you all—the tale of the timid little match girl who early falls in love with a Norwegian. The Norwegian is in reality a rathskellar, but no one suspects it at first.

"The violins surge upward then in a mighty wave, followed by the clatter of hoofbeats on the kettle drums. The scene, you know, is now the roller skating rink, and Alfred, the wigmaker, enters from the left, making faces at the Confederate soldiers. Here you will notice the woodwinds and oboes panting furiously and two gentlemen in the balcony coughing.

◆

"After the first movement of this delightful concerto comes the second movement, which is a kind of flank movement. The cornets and trombones are heard blaring in an ecstasy of melody, which represents the whimsical scene on the fire escape. Little Bethyl, the flaxen haired child, has stolen three hot cross buns and is hiding from the band of Republicans who have pursued her ever since their convention in Los Angeles. There comes a lone wail of a tender flute, which you can take to mean anything you darned please, and then a perfect crescendo and alli-oopo of majestic music closing the second movement.

"After the intermission the 'cellos and the concertinas are discerned heralding the approach of the Corn Borer, in a frenzy of martial harmony. The Corn Borer strides into the scene, but plants himself in the wrong seat, and the peasants laugh loud and long. The latter is illustrated by the quaking of the saxophones and zithers. Finally the old witch turns out to be a golden lamp post in disguise, and the real daughter of the new king—so there is feasting and merry making throughout the land—and the concerto ends in an avalanche of heavenly music played slightly pistachio. I thank you. Don't forget to send for our free booklet on

◆

WELL, SIR, if everybody else is going to write a song about going home back home to Rhode Island and Mammy, then we're going to write a song, too. It seems to us that Idaho is a state that has been plumb neglected. Let's tune up our lyres and smack the string for Idaho. Hey-hey!

"I gotta gal lives 'way out west
An' of all my cookies she's the best.

With the yellow ribbon on it,
She lives 'way out on the Idaho farm
With a flock o' freckles on her arm.
Mammy—Mammy!
And that is why I say:

CHORUS:

O, you should see my Idaho Ida hoe.
She's my Ida and I'm her Joe.
She looks so sweet the birds sing tweet
When Ida hoes Idaho's biggest beet.
I wanna go back to Ida and stay forevermore,
Where the fields of cotton grow 'round the cabin door.
I'll be so happy
When Ida shows that Ida knows—
I wanna see my Idaho Ida hoe!"
(Dum-deedle-ump-dum—dum-dum!)

WHILE THE radio is now going into the matter of education full blast it would be a good thing if this new miracle could pep up the old methods of teaching. We suggest a course in the dynamic salesmanship system of teaching Latin, for instance. Here's one day's lecture by the dynamic professor of the radio:

"Well, here we are again, boys and girls. Wonderful day, isn't it? I've got a great little proposition in Latin today that I'm sure you're going to fall in love with.

"You're looking charming today, miss—I mean this little lady down here in the first row. In fact, you all look wonderful! Health is wealth, they say, and we must all be on our toes every minute of the day. Up and at 'em all the time!

"Tackle your lessons and throw 'em for a loss! Slip 'em an uppercut and a solar plexus, and show 'em you're the master! Go after 'em with rod and gun and whip 'em to a frazzle! Sink or swim, do or die, and never give up the ship!

Worry is only imaginary—nothing daunts the man who tries—go at your task with a will—and an apple a day keeps the doctor away!

"Now, take this proposition. It says on page 4 of our Latin text that 'Gallia est omnis divisa in partes tres.' Now, if you'll just set your minds hard on that, you can knock it for a goal!

"Come on—let's go—call your football signals—and hit the line! It's a Latin line, and an easy one! Sic 'em! Let's have some pep! Who's got it?

"Come now, let's snap it up! Faster! Faster! Think fast! Let's go!

"What's the matter? Try again. Keep your mind intent on that line from Cæsar! Come on, now; gotta have some pep! Don't give up! Step on the gas!

"Hasn't anybody got it yet? Remember our mottoes! Now, dive in and smack that line for a ten yard loss! Keep saying to yourself, 'Every day in every way!' Think hard! Now, let's try again. Say to yourself that you're going to put this over, and nothing can stop you! One, two, three—go!

"It's a rare and beautiful language—Latin is. Nothing like it this side of Italy. It's a tongue that has come down through the ages. As easy as all get out! It's just begging you to learn it! Come now—what am I bid on this line from Cæsar? Who's going to be the lucky one? Whoever gets the line first, you know, receives a fine, big shining mark of 100! Let's go! Don't give up the ship! Fight, fight, fight."

Two Americans Sing Tonight on Kent Program

Nanette Guilford Will Aid Charles Hackett.

Charles Hackett, leading tenor of the Chicago Civic Opera company, will broadcast the concert in the Atwater Kent hour, tonight, assisted by Nanette Guilford of the Metropolitan Opera, and an orchestra under the leadership of Robert Hood Bowers. The program will be broadcast by W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Miss Guilford, who made her debut at the Metropolitan Opera house on Feb. 22, 1926, is considered the baby of the "Met." Born in Harlem, Miss Guilford has the distinction of being the only native born New Yorker at the local opera.

She made her stage debut with the Midnight Rounders then playing the Century Roof, but after three weeks decided in favor of opera as against musical comedy, and after a year and a half of further study became a member of the opera company.

Hackett is a native of Worcester, Mass., where he sang with the high school glee club, later becoming a soloist at a Boston church. In 1911 he was singing in St. Thomas' church, New York City, when he decided to go to Italy for study. There he made his operatic debut.

Hackett has the distinction of being the first American tenor to sing at La Scala in Milan, the Constanzi in Rome, the Grand Opera in Paris, the Licco in Barcelona, the Reale in Madrid, the Colon in Buenos Aires, the Municipale in Rio de Janeiro, and the opera in Monte Carlo.

Plan to Extend European Radio Phone Service

LONDON, Feb. 11.—It is considered probable that European countries will be invited to link up with the Anglo-American trans-Atlantic telephone service. Several test calls from America to continental cities have already been made and it is believed that the increased revenue from continental participation will help make the project self-supporting.

COUNTERPHASE RADIO

"Results have been truly remarkable" writes

NEW ORLEANS, U.S.A.
December 27, 1927

Bremer-Tully Manufacturing Company,
520 South Canal St.,
Chicago, Ill.

Gentlemen:

The latitudo and altitude of New Orleans create atmospheric conditions that make radio reception of a satisfactory nature very difficult. We tried out the highly advertised receiving sets that are considered standards of excellence but the reception was so unsatifactory that we discontinued our efforts. I had about given up the idea of owning a radio entirely when I met an electrical engineer in Cleveland and he was so insistent that I could get good results from a Bremer-Tully set under any conditions that I decided to give one of your receivers a trial.

I recently purchased your 8--13 Receiver and your new B-T Speaker. The results have been truly remarkable. Under anything like favorable atmospheric conditions we can bring in any of the big stations in the country. The super-stations come in so loud that it is necessary to cut down the volume considerably. The mechanic who installed the set said that we might expect an AC hum but it has failed to materialize. Your direct socket unit has performed perfectly.

Just a word about the dial. It is a revelation to my friends when we set the dial on the published wave length of a station, turn on the juice and there it is. We do not know of any other receiver that will do this.

Sincerely yours,

C. D. Corey

From Bananas to Bach, Trend of Radio Music

Climbs from Syncopation to the Classics.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 11.—From "Yes We Have No Bananas" to Bach's "Air on the G String." From "red-hot" syncopation to the dignity of the classics.

That, according to Victor Saudek, conductor of the Little Symphony orchestra at station KDKA, has been the evolution of musical taste among radio listeners since broadcasting became an established institution a little more than seven years ago. And there is no one, perhaps, whose opinion on such matters is entitled to more respect than is Mr. Saudek's, for he, as head of the first orchestra ever organized exclusively for radio broadcasting, has been presenting concerts over the air nightly for more than five years.

Early Fans Demanded Jazz.

When dinner concerts by the Little Symphony first became a regular feature, Saudek says he and his fellow musicians became the target for a volley of caustic correspondence. "If you want anybody to listen to you, lay off the high-brow junk," a typical letter said. "Give us something peppy, like 'Red Hot Mamma,'" said another.

After a few months, however, a majority of the fans asked for folk songs. The Stephen C. Foster melodies and love ballads were requested more frequently than any other. "When You and I Were Young, Maggie," was one of the favorites. Another was "Silver Threads Among the Gold."

Light opera, notably Victor Herbert's works, next came into favor with the listeners. Saudek began to receive hundreds of letters requesting selections from "The Red Mill," "Sari," "The Chocolate Soldier," and the entire list of Gilbert and Sullivan works.

Standard Music.

It was about three years ago when an overwhelming sentiment in favor of "standard" music made itself manifest. For a period of many months selections such as "The Overture to Poet and Peasant" and "The Overture to William Tell" lead in popularity.

For the last year or more Saudek's programs have been made up almost exclusively of so-called semi-classical and classical music, and he says there is no doubt that this is the type of music his listeners now want. Every mail, he says, brings letters begging him not to cheapen his programs—a distinct contrast to the general attitude of five years ago. The most frequent requests are for the various classical serenades, minuets, intermezzi and ballets, and also for classic bits from the popular symphonies of Haydn, Schubert, and Mozart.

Modern Airs Unpopular.

"The elevation of public taste within five years has been astounding," Mr. Saudek says, "but the radio audience is not yet prepared for the richest musical literature, such as complete symphonies by Beethoven and Brahms. Nor is the public yet ready to hear modern music, from the pens of such composers as Ravel, Stravinsky, Honegger, Milhaud, Di Falla, Schoenberg and Bela Bartok. It is sad but true that if we were to feature such works our audiences would be decimated in short order.'

Rocky Mountain Towns Arrange Own Programs

Denver, Colo., Feb. 11.—[Special.]—An unusual method of determining what kind of music its listeners want has been adopted by KOA here. It allows the listeners to arrange a complete program once each week.

Each program is arranged by listeners in some town in the Rocky mountain region, assisted by its local paper. Listeners send the paper names of selections they want played or sung, the paper sends in the names of selections for which the demand is greatest, and staff artists at KOA present the program.

In many instances leading musicians come from the town sponsoring the program to take part in the broadcasting. Approximately 30 such programs have been broadcast by KOA. The idea has proven so popular that there is now a long waiting list of towns throughout the region that have asked to arrange a program.

Radio will be an important topic of discussion at the Safety of Life at Sea conference to be held in London early in the autumn.

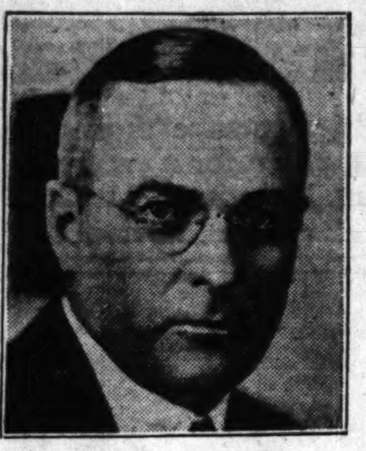
TWO bridge stars from the west—Mrs. C. E. Traver of Salt Lake City and James G. Stanley of Denver—met Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead in the radio game broadcast last Tuesday from station W-G-N.

Mr. Stanley was the south player and dealer. His cards—spades, 4; hearts, A, 4, 2; diamonds, A, 7, 5, 3; clubs, 10, 9, 6, 4, 3—did not permit him to bid. Although he held two quick tricks, he had no medium by which he could convey that information to his partner. Had his five card suit been headed by one of his aces, a bid would have been justified; but a four card suit headed by an ace and without another honor is too weak to bid with any such hand as his. As Mr. Work explained, in commenting on the bidding of this hand, four card suits rarely are bid unless the hand contains the three top honors [ace, king, queen] or two of them plus a side trick; and, except with an occasional freak hand, three suits should be stopped to warrant a no trump.



JAMES G. STANLEY.

MRS. C. E. TRAVER.

Mr. Work, west, of course bid one heart on: Spades, 9, 7, 5; hearts, K, Q, J, 10, 8; diamonds, 8, 6, 4; clubs, A, K.

RAISES HER PARTNER

Mr. Whitehead, north, made a defensive bid of one spade on: Spades, K, J, 10, 8, 6, 2; hearts, 6; diamonds, K, Q, 9, 2; clubs, 7, 5.

Mrs. Traver's holdings of: Spades, A, Q, 3; hearts, 9, 7, 5, 3; diamonds, J, 10; clubs, Q, J, 8, 2, enabled her to raise her partner's hearts to two. Mr. Whitehead's spade bid made her ace-queen of spades almost surely good for two tricks; she also had four trumps, assistance in clubs, and only a doubleton in diamonds. It requires more strength to raise from one to two than from two to three, but Mrs. Traver had ample for even the more exacting raise.

Mr. Stanley and Mr. Work passed, as did Mr. Whitehead, also. His defensive spade bid had been made with minimum strength, and having received no encouragement from his partner, he could not go on. Mr. Work, therefore, became the declarer, with his contract two hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, north, led the king of diamonds. Mrs. Traver spread her hand for the dummy, and Mr. Work played from it the 10 of diamonds. Mr. Stanley, south, after some very clever thinking, played the ace of diamonds, taking his partner's trick. Mr. Stanley counting two probable tricks in diamonds and a sure trick with the ace of trumps, realized that but one trick more was needed to save game. He saw that he could obtain that trick by ruffing a spade, provided, as was probable, that declarer had another diamond. Mr. Stanley therefore overtook the first diamond trick in order to lead his singleton spade, well knowing that his partner would understand the play. Mr. Work played the 4 of diamonds.

LEADS SINGLETON

Mr. Stanley immediately led his singleton 4 of spades; Mr. Work played the 5; Mr. Whitehead the king, and dummy won with the ace.

Dummy led the 3 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the ace; Mr. Work played the 10, retaining the 8 spot so that Dummy's 9 could be used as an entry if occasion required; Mr. Whitehead played the 6.

Mr. Stanley led the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Work played the 6; Mr. Whitehead the queen; dummy the jack.

Mr. Whitehead, just as Mr. Stanley had foreseen, caught the import of Mr. Stanley's overtake of the first lead of diamonds, followed by his lead of a spade up to the major tenace in dummy. This play fairly shrieked the fact that Mr. Stanley's spade was a singleton. Therefore Mr. Whitehead did as he was expected to do, by leading the jack of spades. He played the jack in order to force dummy's queen and establish his own 10, and at the same time give Mr. Stanley the requested chance to ruff and save the game. Dummy covered with the queen of spades; Mr. Stanley trumped with the 2 of hearts; Mr. Work was forced to follow suit with the 7 of spades.

MAKES THREE HEARTS

Mr. Stanley then led the 4 of clubs; Mr. Work played the ace; Mr. Whitehead the 5; dummy the 2.

Mr. Work proceeded to get the last outstanding trump. He led the king of hearts; Mr. Whitehead discarded the 2 of spades; dummy played the 5 of hearts; Mr. Stanley the 4 of hearts.

Mr. Work then led the king of clubs; Mr. Whitehead played the 7; dummy the 8; Mr. Stanley the 3.

Mr. Work next led the 8 of diamonds; Mr. Whitehead followed suit with the 2; dummy trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mr. Stanley played the 5 of diamonds.

Dummy led the good queen of clubs, permitting Mr. Work to discard the 9 of spades. Mr. Stanley, south, played the 6 of clubs and Mr. Whitehead, north, discarded the 6 of spades.

Mr. Work then spread his hand, displaying three trumps for the three last tricks, which the opponents conceded as winners.

Mr. Work, therefore, made three odd at hearts, scoring 24 points in the trick score, and 80 points in the honor score for four honors in one hand.

Even the most expert players are helpless against a distribution like that shown in this hand, when the opponents are on the alert to seize the opportunity for a defensive play like that made by Mr. Stanley.

TO TALK

MISS JANE ADDAMS, nationally known head of Hull House here, who speaks tonight at the Sunday Evening club.

The Detector Tube Is the Heart of a Radio Receiver

Like the human heart, the radio tube detector is the life valve of a receiver.

A popular belief that a detector merely "detects waves emitted from a broadcasting station" is only partly correct. It not only detects, but rectifies, making up its most important duty.

Rectification is essential, because a transmitter sends out a current whose speed of vibration or frequency is too high for the ear to pick up. This frequency is lowered by the detector.

To perform its part efficiently the tube has three elements, a filament, a grid, and a plate.

When the A battery heats the filament negative electrons are thrown off. The plate or collectors, which is positively charged by the B battery, collects these negative impulses, following the electrical law that opposites attract.

The grid, which is a mesh of fine wire inserted between the filament and the plate, is the governor or regulator. The current reaching the detector is alternating at a high speed, having both negative and positive phases. It is the duty of the grid to let only the negative half pass to the positive plate.

The action of the grid is something like that of an automatic interrupter, opening and closing he plate circuit thousands of times a second. It is this relay action which prepares the music and voice for the ear of the listener.

Why don't we boost it harder?

AFTER a few days' experience with the new Atwater Kent A. C. set, radio listeners say to us:

"You didn't tell us half when you said this was a good set. It's more than good. It's a wonder! Why don't you boost it harder?"

We do boost it. The trouble is that words cannot tell the whole story. A few evenings in your home—that's the way to find out—from the Atwater Kent 37 itself.

It is so small you can place it anywhere. The cord that brings the power from a lamp socket of the house lighting system (at a cost of only a fraction of a cent an hour) is more than ten feet long—giving you your choice of position. The unusual design and the soft glowing beauty of the satin finish please everybody.

Now for listening!

With a tiny gold switch you snap on the power. With the FULL-VISION Dial you summon the programs. It's magic—this FULL-VISION Dial. You see it all at a glance. You jump from station to station in a split second. It's like hitting the bull's-eye with every shot!

And the tone! When you realize that the re-creative genius of this set does full justice to the voices of the artists and the music of their instruments, you will marvel how such perfection can be attained.

Raise the lid!

For your answer—raise the lid and make a closer examination than you had time for in your first eagerness to see what the set would do.

You will see how the space-saving compactness of the set has been accomplished—how the cabinet is so constructed that it completely shields the electrical assembly inside—how the power supply is doubly shielded—how every visible part is beautifully made and finished. You will know it to be a fact when we tell you that the parts you don't see—even the tiniest of them—have received equal attention. You will know that all this counts in the performance of the Atwater Kent 37—in your lasting satisfaction.

How they talk about it!

Lasting satisfaction! You must have it. That is why we match every working part of every receiver—why we put every receiver through 222 tests or inspections—why many parts are tested for accuracy to a fraction of a thousandth of an inch—why every tenth employee in the whole 15-acre Atwater Kent factory is an inspector or tester.

That is why so many people—veterans of radio and novices—have bought this new self-contained A. C. set—why many are buying two sets for different parts of their homes—why they're telling their friends about it and the astonishingly low price made possible by big-scale production—why, almost overnight, the Atwater Kent 37 has become the most popular radio in the world.

Try it. You'll see!

INSTRUCTION.

Please Leave Your English Outside!

Prominently displayed in the Berlitz classrooms is this request. For in mastering a foreign language you must learn to think in that language. And a half century of experience has taught us that when you speak English during the lesson you cannot think in the language you wish to master. So you leave your English behind you when you enter a Berlitz classroom. You hear, speak, read and write only the language you are studying. Expert native instructors teach you to think in that language. So success is amazingly rapid. And learning modern languages is made thrilling and fascinating like your favorite pastime. To convince yourself, write, call or phone Harrison 0392 for a free trial lesson in French, Spanish, German, or Italian.

Salesmen, Solicitors, Etc.

A BIG MAN MENTALLY.

A prominent Illinois corporation, whose operations are international in their scope, has grown so rapidly for the past two years that it has become necessary for us to promote a large number of star salesmen to executive positions.

Our auditor's statements prove that our business increased 1,000% in 1927 over the year 1926. This is taking into consideration the fact that we have been successfully operating for a number of years previous to this.

We have inserted ads from time to time because we have created entirely new departments in our organization and it became necessary to build up a sales staff in each one of these new departments. An analysis of our growth proves that whatever we may be selling is saleable, and that the men connected with our organization are making some real money. One of the best rated business analysts in the United States has recently entered the field as our competitor, because he realizes the importance and future of the business in which we are engaged.

We have recently promoted six men to positions which pay them an income equivalent to the average bank president's salary. We have recently created four positions in our organization which are at present unfilled and the remuneration which these positions will pay is large enough to attract the best selling minds in the United States.

We are fortunate in having a number of men with us, at the present time, who are nationally known as sales experts. The training that a man receives in our organization automatically causes a man to be worth more to himself, from an earning standpoint than he has ever been worth before.

We are not so much interested in salesmen as we are in men of an executive caliber. Our growth has been so phenomenal that our executive staff has not developed in keeping with our sales staff and we have a number of openings for exceptional men to spend a short period of time learning our business and then step into a bigger position.

We have approximately 400 men operating on our sales staff. Many of these men earn as high as $300 to $500 per week.

We are in a business that is nationally known and recognized as being 100% fundamental. We are in a business to stop losses and increase profits and sales in other businesses. We do this in a manner that is universally recognized and adopted by the controling heads of the largest business enterprises. Our list of clients looks like a list of "Who's Who" in American industry. A connection with us means an unusual opportunity for an unusual man. There is no hocus-pocus attached to our business; we make no promises that we do not fulfill. We treat our men as associates and give them every opportunity to function in any capacity in which they are capable of functioning. We recognize and reward ability. We deal only in applied fundamental principles; we do not theorize. We have many thousands of clients who have been on our books for a number of years.

Many of our territories are worth $2,500 to $10,000 per year on repeat business alone. This enables us to select our men very carefully before we give them gratis this amount of commissions on previously worked up business.

We are not interested unless you have previously earned $6,000 per year, or better; unless you can make contact with big men and talk to them on a bisis of equality; unless you have a record of honesty and integrity; unless you are betweeen the ages of 30 and 45. Please do not waste our time or yours unless you have the above qualifications.

You may phone the undersigned for an appointment and should you be able to interest us, over the phone, we will give you a personal interview.

J. L. BARCLAY, Superior 0835 or Address L A 280, Tribune.

A MAN OF EXCEPTIONAL MENTALITY

A manufacturer, rated AAA1, operating nationally, has an opening for a man of successful selling experience. Prefer one who has met and sold chief executives, although in the final analysis personality will be the determining factor.

We are not so much interested in a salesman as we are in a man with potential executive ability—one who can learn our business and then qualify to direct others. For such a man there is a brilliant future.

This is not stocks, bonds, real estate, insurance, or books—nor is it posters.

Do not investigate unless you feel confident that your services are worth $8,000 per year or more.

We can use a man immediately in each of the following territories: Kansas City, Omaha, Milwaukee, and one for Chicago.

We will grant you a personal interview if you are able to interest us over the telephone. Phone Mr. C. C. Below on Monday for appointment. Randolph 4745, or, if you prefer, address J L 258, Tribune.

LAKE SHORE TOWERS

3920 Lake Shore-dr.

"At the head of the Gold Coast"—on the new outer drive just north of Grace-st., overlooking the lake and Lincoln Park—the location supreme.

Only 31 apartments are embodied in Lake Shore Towers—two apartments, each 8 rooms and 3 baths—to a floor. A studio duplex occupies the two top stories.

Large master bedrooms—spacious living rooms—splendid service arrangements—beautiful decorative features to suit the most discriminating home seekers.

A model apartment is furnished and open for your inspection. Representatives on the premises will show you through and supply complete information. In view of the limited number of available apartment homes, your early inspection is urged.

You Can Own a "CHECKER" with a Small Amount of Capital.

Be in business yourself. Be an owner in the world's largest co-operative cab company.

In the past few weeks we have added many cabs of the finer type. The new members, after making inquiries among our 1,700 drivers, found that the average income throughout the year was $125 per week.

The public is rapidly demanding the easy riding, roomy cab, and the CHECKER is becoming Chicago's most popular taxi.

We attend to bonding, insurance, and supplies. Our telephone trunk lines supply leads.

Remember this when you compare prices—and before you buy come to us and compare the car of your choice for quality and condition with any car on the market at any price. Our stock is bigger than ever today. Come in and take a ride in any of the cars listed.

JEWETT 1925 COACH 6-55 MODEL. This is one of our latest series Jewett 5 passenger coaches with two individual Pullman seats in front and is without a doubt the best conditioned Jewett we have ever offered. Body has straight, snappy lines and is in the original Annapolis blue duco finish. Upholstery looks like it had never been used and the tires are in almost new condition. Has clear vision 1 piece windshield, the most dependable type of 4 wheel brakes, and guaranteed mechanically; $2,000 car features with light car weight for only $506.

WILLYS-KNIGHT 70-A 1927 SEDAN 6 CYL. We have acquired this car in a trade deal and under such circumstances that we will offer it very cheap. It is the same as the new car being delivered today for $1,795. Its low mileage has improved the mechanism, in fact the motor is still stiff and the outward appearance is that of a new car. Elegant interior, including Old Dutch design vanity case with compact, cloissenne effect panels and other details that go to make up an ideal lady's car. If interested in something snappy, see this. $975.

HUDSON 1926 4 DOOR BROUGHAM. This car has just recently come into our possession from a very careful owner and to all appearances proves beyond any question that the car has been given splendid care. We can recommend and guarantee the mechanical condition. Finish is like new; tires excellent. A rare value at any price. Our price $695.

PAIGE 6-72 1926 SEDAN. Because of the unusual popularity of this closed model we feel your attention is essential as you read this if you are in search of a car whose riding qualities and ease of control cannot be duplicated under $2,000. Its appearance and interior are like new, mechanical condition guaranteed and is fitted with slip covers, other extras, 4 wheel brakes and 1 piece windshield. We have priced this car considerably under its true value and challenge duplication of it from any standpoint. Somebody will snatch it today, $875.

HUPMOBILE 1925 STRAIGHT 8 TOURING 5 PASS. This car is in condition that we can highly recommend. Mechanically it is very fine and should render many miles of very satisfactory service. The body, fenders and general coach condition are very good and comes fully equipped. Ready for service with no expenditures, $495.

JEWETT SEDAN 6-50 MODEL 5 PASS. An excellent value for the buyer who desires sturdiness and reliability along with economy. For smooth, efficient operation it will exceed your expectations. Finish, interior and mechanical condition excellent. Let us arrange to put it on the road for you—without obligation. Fully equipped and the kind of a car you would believe was a bargain at $500. Our price $325.

AUPBURN 6 1927 SEDAN 6 CYL. This car has had less than 8,000 miles of service and has been checked thoroughly by our mechanical department. About the time you read this it is being put on our main floor showroom. This type is rarely available and because of its elegant condition and low price we doubt if it will remain here two days. Fully equipped and guaranteed, $775.

PAIGE 5 PASS. BROUGHAM COUPE 6-70 MODEL. Representing transportation that cost better than $3,000 to build new. Recently it was refinished. Slip covers protect the upholstery and there is much equipment, such as winter front, spotlight, bumpers, auto. w. s. cleaner, etc. Spare tire is mounted on running board well. Guaranteed mechanically. $350.

CHANDLER 1926 METROPOLITAN SEDAN. The model with special transmission and Pike's Peak engine. Driven conservatively and has the well groomed appearance of cars whose owners have been careful in handling. Finish is so perfect it looks as though refinished. Shock absorbers, 4 wheel brakes and A1 equipment. Guaranteed. $775.

The RACE of KINGS

By Marion Reagan

A FAMOUS restaurateur who dined and wined such personalities as Eugene Field, James Whitcomb Riley, Richard Harding Davis, George Ade . . . Chicago at the time of the World's Fair . . . Intimate sketches of a well known Chicago family who struggled from obscurity and poverty to fame. This one is about Charlie King, host to Chicago newspaper men. And about "Mother King," who sat with her embroidery, talking to patrons. . . . A human interest story that leaves you a little breathless, a little reminiscent, a little regretful—for you will say: "I wish . . . I could have known . . . these people."

In the Metropolitan Section of The Sunday Tribune

"OUR TOWN"—Police dogs . . . bronchitis . . . school prizes . . . Chicago's worst judge. . . . News notes of interest from here, there, and everywhere in Chicago. Don't miss this amusing collection of talk and gossip—in the Metropolitan Section.

$150 FOR POLITENESS—A mail carrier who answered questions and gave directions to The Tribune Politeness Reporter received $50—for a wedding present. Again more courteous people come to light—for the three $50 Tribune awards for politeness are being made regularly every week. Be careful! The next time a strange man asks the location of the nearest drug store, he may be the Politeness Reporter. See the Metropolitan Section today!

Little Orphan Annie
WHY, ANNIE- GEORGE WASHINGTON WAS THE FATHER OF THIS COUNTRY- HAD IT NOT BEEN FOR WASHINGTON, LINCOLN WOULD HAVE HAD NO COUNTRY TO SAVE-
ALL RIGHT, PROFESSOR- IF YER GOIN' TO START PULLIN' CHEAP GAGS- HOW 'BOUT THAT OLD WHEEZE THAT SAYS, "IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR LINCOLN, WASHINGTON WOULD HAVE BEEN TH' FATHER OF TWINS"?
HAROLD GRAY
YESSIR, SANDY- HE SURE WAS A REAL GUY, ALL RIGHT- HE HAD EVER'THING IT TAKES TO MAKE A REG'LAR, HONEST-TO-GOODNESS HE MAN-
HE DIDN'T HAVE MONEY OR A LOTTA SWELL RELATIVES BACKIN' HIM- HE HAD TO LIVE IN AN OLD LOG CABIN LOTS WORSE'N TH' SHACK WE LIVE IN- AN' HE HAD TO CHOP WOOD, TOO- NO COAL HE COULD PICK UP IN TH' YARDS-
'BOUT ALL HE HAD WAS BRAINS AN' TH' BIGGEST HEART IN TH' WORLD- AN' HE WASN'T SCARED O' WORK OR WHAT FOLKS SAID 'BOUT HIM OR NOTHIN', I GUESS-
HE NEVER GOT MUCH CHANCE TO GO TO SCHOOL, EITHER- BUT HE READ AN' READ WHAT FEW BOOKS HE COULD BORROW- NEVER HAD TH' DOUGH TO BUY BOOKS-
BUT SANDY, THAT GUY GOT TO BE PRESIDENT O' TH' WHOLE UNITED STATES- AN' HE DIDN'T JUST SIT TIGHT WHEN HE GOT THERE, EITHER- HE WAS AT TH' TOP, THEN- SEE? BUT HE WASN'T SCARED O' LOSIN' HIS JOB- NOT THAT GUY-
WHAT COLOR FOLKS WERE, OR WHERE THEY CAME FROM, DIDN'T CUT ANY ICE WITH HIM- FOLKS WERE ALL FOLKS TO HIM AN' HAD FEELIN'S- SO HE STUCK UP FOR TH' COLORED PEOPLE- HE WANTED THEM TO GET TH' CHANCE THEY'D NEVER HAD 'FORE THEN-
WELL, THERE WAS AN AWFUL WAR 'BOUT IT- HIS SIDE MUSTA BEEN RIGHT 'CAUSE THEY BEAT- BUT WHETHER HE WAS RIGHT OR NOT ISN'T SO 'PORTANT AS HIS HAVIN' A REAL IDEA AN' STICKIN' TO IT, NO MATTER WHAT HAPPENED-
WELL, JUST WHEN HE SAW HE'D WON, SOME SORE-HEAD SHOT HIM- THAT WAS 'MOST SIXTY-THREE YEARS AGO, SANDY- THAT'S A LONG TIME BACK-
WHEN MOST FOLKS, EVEN PRESIDENTS, DIE YUH DON'T HEAR MUCH 'BOUT 'EM AFTER A YEAR OR TWO- SORTA FORGET 'BOUT FOLKS, AS A RULE, AFTER THEY'RE GONE FOR A SPELL- BUT NOBODY EVER FORGETS A GUY LIKE LINCOLN-
NO SIR, SANDY- YUH TAKE A GUY WITH REAL IDEAS, AN' TH' NERVE TO STICK UP FOR 'EM, AN' HE'S GOIN' TO STIR UP SOMETHIN'- MOST ALWAYS A BIRD LIKE THAT MAKES A MESS O' ENEMIES-
BUT IT TAKES A GUY LIKE THAT TO GET THINGS DONE AN' IT'S TH' GUYS THAT GOT THINGS DONE WHEN THEY WERE ALIVE THAT FOLKS BUILD STATUES FOR AFTER THEY'RE GONE-
YESSIR, SANDY- IT JUST GOES TO SHOW YUH- POOR FOLKS HAVE JUST AS MUCH CHANCE TO GET TO TH' TOP AS ANYBODY ELSE, IF THEY'VE GOT TH' REAL STUFF IN 'EM-

YOU DON'T JUST UNDERSTAND, SKEEZIX. THIS IS ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S BIRTHDAY. HE WAS PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES SIXTY FIVE YEARS AGO.
OH!
HE WAS BORN OF VERY POOR PARENTS IN 1809 DOWN IN THE KENTUCKY HILLS - IN A LOG CABIN THAT HAD A DIRT FLOOR.
DIDN'T THEY HAVE A BATHROOM?
NO THEY HAD NO BATHROOM AND HARDLY ANYTHING TO EAT EXCEPT CORNBREAD. HIS MOTHER DIED WHEN HE WAS VERY YOUNG AND HE HAD TO WORK HARD AT HOME.
WAIT.
HE WALKED FIVE MILES TO SCHOOL AND USED TO READ AT NIGHT BY THE LIGHT OF THE FIREPLACE. WHEN HE WAS 21 YEARS OLD HE HAD SIX BOOKS.
HE HELPED HIS FATHER BUILD A CABIN OVER IN INDIANA, HE SPLIT RAILS AND CLEARED LAND FOR CORN. THEN HE CLERKED IN A STORE, WAS A POSTMAN AND CARRIED THE MAIL IN HIS HAT. HE WAS A SURVEYOR TOO, IN ILLINOIS
DID HE HAVE A BIG HAT?
NOT MUCH MAIL, PERHAPS. THEN HE STUDIED LAW AND GOT TO BE A LAWYER AND LATER ON THEY ELECTED HIM PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES. AND HE WAS ONE OF OUR TWO GREATEST PRESIDENTS. SOME SAY THE GREATEST.
HE WAS PRESIDENT DURING THE CIVIL WAR AND HE KEPT THE COUNTRY TOGETHER WHEN IT WAS ALL READY TO BREAK-UP. AND AS RACHEL TOLD YOU HE FREED ALL THE SLAVES.
I'M NOT GOIN' TO BE A MILKMAN RACHEL - I'M GOIN' TO BE PRESIDENT. HAVE YOU GOT ANY CORN BREAD?
